Ardisia in Willow Basket.

ENDURING ARDISIAS.

If your customers complain that the holiday plants are short-lived, sell them ardisias. The ardisia is a plant of slow growth and should command a fair price, but it will endure dwelling room conditions as well as anything in the florists' stock in trade. It makes a most satisfactory Christmas gift.

The ardisia shown in the illustration on this page was in an imported willow basket. Note the high handles on the side. The moss which covered the soil in the pot should never be omitted, and some holly red ribbon tied in the top of the plant will be thought by many to add a holiday touch.

THE USE OF ACCESSORIES.

Christmas is one of the seasons at which the supply men and the plantsmen reap their greatest harvest. The retail florist is, of course, the harvest-hand, and through him the public's dollars are garnered for the bright men who supply the many accessories which are an essential at this season, and for the careful growers who provide the Christmas plants.

A few years ago retail florists, other than those who have high-class trade, were afraid to venture the large stock of accessories and plant receptacles, but it soon was found that the use of baskets and hampers was profitable, even to retailers doing a business in the less wealthy neighborhoods. So universal has the custom become of embellishing the Christmas plants that nowadays scarcely anything is salable without at least a pot cover.

As retail florists have taken hold of the accessories developed by the supply houses they have found that two important results were obtained. In the first place, the accessories added to the salability of the stock and at the same time provided the retailer with his usual profit on the accessories themselves. Of course, where no more than crepe paper for pot covering is used the cost is so slight that nothing need be added to the selling price, but the more expensive articles not only should, but do, count in the cost and show in the selling price.

But a still further feature of the use of accessories is that they permit the retailer to diversify his stock far more than would be possible with the greenhouse products alone. Practically every store that makes any pretensions at all to up-to-dateness now carries at all times a large stock of baskets and pot-

A CHRISTMAS WREATH WINDOW.

Framed in One Immense Wreath.

Early in Christmas week, feature wreaths for one day. For the central figure have one immense wreath, as large as the window will accommodate, hung against the glass and placed low enough so that it will not only be seen itself, but will also permit the spectator to look through its center at a variety of well displayed wreaths within.

This large wreath should be of sufficient width of outline to be heavy and luxuriant looking, and should be well decorated with a dash of red and a huge tie. The material of the wreath itself may be of the cheapest green obtainable, according to the locality. Where pines abound, there is nothing more graceful than their large branches, with their cones. For the dash of red use rose-hips, California peppers or California Christmas berries, immortelles, holly, artificial or natural poinsettias in Kift vases, with or without ribbon. Or tie with a shower or cluster of smaller wreaths, from which can depend a shower of chiffon, or pine cones or scarlet ribbon.

Pine cones can be brightened by a frill of scarlet ribbon pressed in between the upper layers of scales and tied in clusters of the same ribbon.

Wreaths of Many Kinds.

The following are some of the variations that make attractive styles for wreaths from twelve to twenty-four inches in diameter:

All holly wreath, with a spray of mistletoe on one side, tied with scarlet fiber ribbon.

Plain lycopodium, with clusters of cones, tied with fiber or other red ribbon.

Statice wreath, with holly and red fiber ribbon.

Plain pine wreath, with cones and California peppers.

Scarlet immortelle wreath, with a tie of Nile green enclosing a cluster of mistletoe.

Plain lycopodium wreath, with artificial poinsettias at intervals around the frame.

All holly, with wide scarlet ribbon drawn in a rippling strand around among the foliage the entire length of the wreath. End in a rosette.

Plain lycopodium, with a butterfly tie of scarlet chiffon.

Plain lycopodium, with a cluster of three to five small immortelle bells drawn close together with scarlet ribbon.

Plain lycopodium, with inside edge of California peppers.

Plain lycopodium, with large clusters of scarlet berries on one side, with or without a ribbon bow.

Plain lycopodium, with a rosette tie of wide, red ribbon; a spray of mistletoe tied at the end of each loop with baby ribbon.

Plain lycopodium, with scattered bunches of mistletoe; holly on the back.

Display the wreaths on easels, around the pots of plants, on plain screen backgrounds or in festoons. Complete the wreath window with flats or pots of some white flowers, such as Roman hyacinths or a striking group of poinsettias.

A tall plant basket, seen as a vista through the large window wreath, makes an attractive arrangement.

In the first place, the accessories added to the salability of the stock and at the same time provided the retailer with his usual profit on the accessories themselves. Of course, where no more than crepe paper for pot covering is used the cost is so slight that nothing need be added to the selling price, but the more expensive articles not only should, but do, count in the cost and show in the selling price.

But a still further feature of the use of accessories is that they permit the retailer to diversify his stock far more than would be possible with the greenhouse products alone. Practically every store that makes any pretensions at all to up-to-dateness now carries at all times a large stock of baskets and pottery, buying in special quantity for the Christmas and Easter demand, but it is a mistake to buy too much of one line; it is far better to buy a few pieces from each of many lines. By this course it is possible to show the poinsettia, ever present at Christmas, in dozens of different receptacles. With a stock of no more than a few kinds of plants it is possible to have infinite variety in the Christmas display, thereby giving the customer a wider range of choice and leading to a larger number of sales than would otherwise be possible. In those stores where the buyer is always on the lookout for unique receptacles, it is quite the common experience to have the customer make selection from the showing of baskets and pottery quite regardless of the plants that are in them.

Ribbons also add largely to the salability of the Christmas plants, the addition of red ribbon giving the Christmas touch that is necessary to find favor in the eyes of many purchasers.

THE CHRISTMAS FLOWER.

It may almost be said that what the lily is to Easter the poinsettia is at Christmas. Fear has been expressed that the cloth poinsettia sold in great quantities by the supply houses in recent years would adversely affect the sale of the real article, and it may have done so to a certain extent with the cut stock, but certainly not with the growing plants. These are more popular than ever. They are produced in immense quantities and of every size and quality. The little plants, not more than four or five inches high, have their uses, and the larger stock sells in great numbers made up in combination with other plants and in such guise as shown in the illustration on this page. Here are five plants, none of them more than a foot high, planted in a tomato-colored bowl, the foot-piece of which was green of almost the shade of the poinsettia foliage. As a Christmas seller last year this arrangement proved the equal of anything in the florist's stock, only he was wise enough to have no more than one on display at a time.

The Poinsettia is the Special Christmas Plant.

CHRISTMAS BELLS.

The Wire Bell Frames.

Bells offer a variety of arrangement, singly or in groups. Many different materials can be employed in their construction and decoration. With the passing of the paper bell we turn to our wire bell frames and see visions of their various sizes, covered with sheet moss, cheesecloth and chiffon, immortelles, gilded leaves of leucothoe, laurel, magnolia or galax, holly, lycopodium, or other materials, according to the location and its variety of cheap native greens.

Sheet moss can be laid on the frame and wrapped with silkaline or green florists' twine. Edge with stemmed holly. Cover the clapper with scarlet ribbon and suspend with a scarf of the same.

For a cheap scarlet bell, cover the bare frame with red cheesecloth and drape with chiffon of the same color. Among a number of green bells this makes an agreeable break. Immortelles in sphagnum make good appearing bells, although more expensive and rather tedious to make.

Gilded foliage bells are easily made and decidedly effective. Fill the bell frame with sphagnum and stem leaves as for cut flower work. Lycopodium in bulk can be used in the same way, or laid on in layers and wrapped as directed in the description of the sheet moss bell. All these colors mentioned—scarlet, green and gold—can be used together.

Bells for Window Decorations.

A bell window preceding Christmas would make a good feature. The arrangement and grouping will have as much to do with the attractiveness as will the material of which the bells are made. Do not hang many vertically and inactively. Tip them, swing them, and turn them upside down, as if in the act of ringing boisterously. Secure them in the correct position by a fine guy wire, stretched to a convenient point at the side or top of the window. Tie several bells together by the tops and hang them from one ribbon. Leave a long end, which shall reach nearly to the floor. At the lower end of this supposed bell cord tie a shower of smaller bells or pine cones.

For another group arrange a chime, grading the size of the bells from the largest to the smallest. Of the tiny bells make festoons, and swing them diagonally between the larger groups. Drape the festoon with lycopodium, laurel or other festooning. Have mistletoe in some of the clappers. On the floor below set a large standing harp, with a frame of holly around the front, back and sides. Decorate the base with large branches of some kind of conifer. Wrap the strings with scarlet ribbon, or gild them. Across the strings, diagonally, throw a festoon of the smaller bells, tied with a sash of scarlet ribbon. Red immortelles may be used for a more brilliant piece. At convenient distances about the harp, scatter any good plant basket arrangements which will harmonize in color.

CHRISTMAS DELIVERY.

One of the chief problems connected with the holiday trade concerns the delivery of stock. Especially in the larger cities, persons buying for gifts expect the florist to make prompt and accurate delivery on Christmas morning. It is possible to spread the work over a longer period by suggesting delivery Christmas eve, but there is a disadvantage in that because a large part of the sales invariably are made at that time, and the average florist does not have a sufficient force to handle a rush of customers, the putting up of orders, and their delivery, all at one time. Over the greater part of the country Christmas weather conditions are such that careful wrapping is necessary, which adds materially to the labor. Also, extra delivery facilities are in demand at this season and teams command a premium that adds much to the expense. Retailers in the large cities in many cases find the cost of Christmas delivery so heavy that they cannot afford to sell articles which do not return them a fair margin of profit. For this reason at least one metropolitan store has nothing in its Christmas stock which does not give 75 cents profit.

The night before Christmas is a strenuous one wherever a big volume of business is done; usually the time after the store is closed is taken for the putting up of orders for the morning delivery, and if business is good it is an all-night's job. The man who has a range of greenhouses at his back usually can call on his greenhouse help for the making up of plant arrangements, or at least for the wrapping of orders put up by the store people. Frequently such help is to be had from greenhouse establishments that grow for the wholesale market and in which the Christmas rush is over sooner than with the retailer.

If there is any time at which room is valuable it is when preparing the holiday deliveries. It is bad enough to be crowded within the narrow walls of a small store when the selling is going on, but it is worse to be without space when orders are being put up and arranged for delivery. If the benches of a conservatory are available, or if there is plenty of open floor space at hand, the work is greatly simplified.

The best way of handling the Christmas orders thus far devised is to set apart a certain place for the deliveries of each wagon or route. Then all hands attack the pile of orders and as each one is finished the package can be placed on the spot designated for that particular route. In the big stores, where many hundreds of deliveries are to be made, the custom is to place one man in charge of the wagons and to have the order clerks turn their work over to him as rapidly as the parcels are completed and tagged. He then can see that each package goes to the right section and eventually to the right wagon, so that when the wagon starts out it will have everything intended for that part of town, so that no second trips will be necessary. If a wagon goes without its entire load, or if it takes articles which should go on another route, a vast amount of time will be consumed and much dissatisfaction is sure to result.

Practically every retail florist who has built up a large volume of business appreciates that prompt and accurate delivery are among the essential features of the service given. In such establishments the holiday delivery is carefully planned days before the work is to be done, and there is no store doing so little business that the man at the helm can afford to neglect this part of the holiday preparations.

Corsage Bouquet of Cattleyas and Valley.

CORSAGE OF CATTLEYAS.

Corsage bouquets have been extremely popular this season. Large numbers will be sold for Christmas, and, especially where the recipient of the gift will participate in the social activities of the day, nothing could be more satisfactory, so it is good business to push the sale. The highest class of corsage bouquet calls for the use of cattleyas, as in the illustration on this page. This bouquet was made with cattleyas, valley and adiantum, but in place of the adiantum the leading stores are using the now popular Mexican ivy. The lighter green of the ivy combines well with the flowers and it has the advantage of adiantum in that it does not wilt down, for when the adiantum has lost its freshness it destroys the appearance of the entire arrangement.

Far more bunches are made of violets than of any other flower, and it usually is a pleasing touch to set in the center of the bunch a few spikes of valley or a single perfect gardenia.

The corsage bunch for gift purposes may be elaborated to any extent the purchaser wishes by the use of expensive hampers. This is in better taste than to make the bunch itself too large, and the florist makes the same profit on the sale of the receptacle that he does on the flowers. The supply houses not only offer a wide range of choice in these boxes, and baskets, and hampers, but also carry large lines of ties of colors to match the flowers used.

THE INDISPENSABLE CYCLAMENS.

What is more useful than the cyclamen? There is no other inexpensive Christmas plant that passes it in popularity. The improvement in varieties and the more careful cultural methods now employed have done much to give it a leading place at this season, but a prime factor has been its adaptability to all sorts of purposes. There is scarcely one of the big and expensive plant combinations which does not include a cyclamen, and individual plants are fine sellers when merely transferred from the ordinary red pot to some such fancy receptacle as those shown in the illustration on page 33. There is simply no end to the variety which can be created through the use of cyclamens of the various colors in receptacles of this kind. The store man can scatter them all through his holiday stock and have no two exactly alike.

LORRAINE THE LUXURIANT.

The Lorraine begonia is one of the plants that it simply is impossible to do without at Christmas. The illustration on page 36 shows a plant photographed last Christmas in the store of a retailer who once declared that never again would he handle Lorraine; its keeping qualities were too transient for him. But the fact was that his customers insisted on having the begonia; if they couldn't buy it of him they would go elsewhere. So now he gives them all the Lorraines they care to buy, and when asked about the keeping quality merely states that the plant will tery, buying in special quantity for the Christmas and Easter demand, but it is a mistake to buy too much of one line; it is far better to buy a few pieces from each of many lines. By this course it is possible to show the poinsettia, ever present at Christmas, in dozens of different receptacles. So now he gives them all the Lorraines they care to buy, and when asked about the keeping quality merely states that the plant will last at least as long as cut flowers would.

The Lorraine can be made up in innumerable ways and is the plant selected for the most expensive arrangements, but it really is best when planted in some simple receptacle that does not come above the foliage to obscure the grace and beauty of the plant. The simple willow basket shown in the illustration was excellent, save that it is too deep a shape; the effect would be much better were the basket not more than half as high.

UNIQUE PLANT RECEPTACLES.

The illustrations on this page and 31 are an example of what may be done in the way of adding variety to the Christmas stock. The complaint of sameness of stock from year to year that once was made is not heard in the stores where such unique receptacles are used for the holiday plants. Such articles as the odd shaped pieces of pottery shown in the one illustration, the dish that looks like a loving cup, or the double-barreled basket in the other picture, could not be sold in quantity. If used in numbers they would produce the effect of sameness and eccentricity, where merely novelty and good taste are sought. But the watchful retailer will pick up these odd pieces as opportunity presents, and when the holiday arrives he will have the means of giving his customers a wide range of choice in their gift purchases. Many a time an attractive example of the potter's art has been the means of making sales the florist otherwise would have missed.

THE CHRISTMAS TREE.

As a Store or Window Decoration.

There are many little fixings around a flower shop which can be utilized and displayed for sale on a Christmas tree, though hitherto they may have proved to be slow sellers. At the same time, the Christmas tree decorations will be of a higher order than the ten-cent store wares that are ordinarily used for the purpose. Instead of pop-corn and tissue paper garlands, use showers of white and scarlet chiffon butterflies, or thin lycopodium or other fine wreathing, dotted with scarlet immortelles. Gild some small pine cones and hang them from the branches here and there, especially at the tips.

There ought also to be some tiny tin bells, which, when gilded, make garlands especially in keeping with the sentiments of Christmas. These can be used individually on the tips of the trees or along the branches. Small electric lights, of course, are in place here. Candles are the only things never to be discarded.

Those small birch bark canoes can be loaded with holly and mistletoe and hung low, so as to show the contents. The small panama hats to be seen now would also make good ornaments for a tree, trimmed with holly and used to hold candy.

For the top point ornament of the tree, use a dove, from whose beak extend dozens of strands of baby ribbon to various parts of the tree, fastening small baskets and the other articles to their places. If it is quite a large tree, the festoons of ribbon may be looped up at points toward the lower parts of the tree, and held by the smaller doves on the branches here and there. Hide some mistletoe on the here-and-there places, too.

The Tree's Surroundings.

The finishing around the base of the tree is one part of the decoration often neglected. If mounted on a small platform above the floor, see that the mounting is covered. A bank of blooming plants of correct color is a brilliant setting for the tree. Extreme finickiness in color here is not necessary, but one should not go to the other extreme and set a purple and crimson cyclamen under a tree where the prevailing color in candles and ribbon happens to be scarlet. Use your white cyclamen and small poinsettias together at the base.

If different varieties of plants are at hand, change the coloring on the tree several times during the period of display, to harmonize with the plants you wish to use about the base.

How to use perishable flowers on such a Christmas tree is about the most doubtful problem you will find yourself up against. Do not attempt to use them profusely. A few short-stemmed poinsettias, full-blown roses or carnations will dot the whole with positive color spots. Attach Kift vases to the branches and get the stems into water and they will last reasonably well.

If your critical color sense is active, you will find a war of greens is apt to appear. The green of the Christmas tree is on the intolerant blue green order and jealous of yellow greens, as seen on Boston ferns or adiantums.

ARAUCARIA'S RENAISSANCE.

A few years ago the araucaria enjoyed a vogue, and then its popularity declined. It is coming back. As a Christmas subject it is once more salable in large quantities. It is suggestive of the Christmas spirit, and the green combines splendidly with the holly red ribbon, without which many people think their Christmas purchases are incomplete.

Some stores tie the branches of their araucarias full of little Christmas bells, but these paper and immortelle bells have now become so common in department and other stores that the leading retailers are omitting them from their holiday stocks, or adding them only where called for.

With the araucaria a variety of pot covers and receptacles comes in handy. You cannot do much to modify the sameness of your plants, but you can add all kinds of variety by simply planting each one in a different receptacle. The not too bright red Porto Rican and so-called chiffon mats are fine where the selling price cannot be greatly increased, but where the trade will pay for odd pieces of pottery, etc., these may be made a means of landing many a sale. The araucaria on page 34 was planted directly into a uniquely shaped spun copper tub, with brass feet, hoops and handles.

MODERATE PRICED NOVELTIES.

More and more each year the holiday business makes a call for novelties. The time was when the trade was almost wholly on the staple articles. Nowadays the bulk of the holiday trade is done with something out of the ordinary. Where retail florists have equipped themselves with holiday stock different from that offered their customers week after week the year around, they have found the Christmas sales jumped in a most satisfactory manner. The Christmas shopper is not looking for every-day articles; what is wanted for gift purposes is something out of the ordinary.

The Christmas novelties need not be expensive; indeed, in the great majority of flower stores there is no sale for the high-priced affairs, and in even the best of stores the bulk of the sales will be articles of moderate value.

While it is not the easiest thing to pick up cut flower or plant novelties, with the aid of the supply houses nothing is easier than to diversify the stock through the use of plant receptacles. These may be of any material, from the ordinary red pot, with its crepe paper cover, to an imported decorated china art novelty that has a value many times greater than that of the plant it contains. Any florist can supply himself with a stock in variety by taking poinsettias, Christmas cherries, tulips, hyacinths, primulas, cyclamens, and ferns of various kinds and planting them in these different receptacles. These novelties can be made up to sell anywhere from 50 cents to $5 or more, depending largely on the price of the receptacle and the tone of the store that is making the sale; a fashionable store in a big city cannot sell 50-cent articles at holiday time, rents and the cost of delivery necessitating sales that give greater profit.

The illustration on page 35 gives an idea of the variety of small receptacles and planting used in a Chicago store last Christmas.

The forehanded florist keeps an eye open for pleasing novelties and buys them a few at a time as he finds them, but any who have neglected to prepare themselves for Christmas can stock up by wire. One of the developments of the supply business of recent years has been the sale of what the supply people call assortments, by which they mean that if the buyer gives an idea of what he wants, mentioning either price, size or style as well as purpose of the article, the supply man will pick out and ship a selection, one or two pieces of each style. So well do the supply people know the tastes and needs of the various communities that these assortments seldom fail to give complete satisfaction and many stores in small towns buy all their supply stock in that way.

TULIPS IN PANS.

Tulips are not Christmas flowers, but nevertheless a few pans of these invariably sell well at the holidays. Long stems cannot be had, and the only way the tulips can be used is in some sort of a low receptacle, like the gold box shown in the illustration on page 32. The La Reine color, with the green moss over the soil and the gold of the box, makes a pleasing combination, and one of the advantages is that no high-priced "floral artist" is required to get it ready for delivery; the planting is as simple as any operation in the preparation of the Christmas stock.

BIG BASKETS BRING BUSINESS.

There are few stores that can sell the big and expensive plant combinations in any quantity; in even the best of stores the bulk of the sales are made on articles that range around $5 in price, for when it gets to be $15 or $25 the number of sales is limited. But it always pays to make up a few plant combinations of larger size and better quality than those ordinarily called for. Such large baskets and hampers not only make excellent display pieces for window and store, but their presence seems to help the sale of the better class of articles in the general stock. The customer enters the store intending to buy something for about $5, admires the basket at $20, and ends by making a selection at $7.50.

The big basket illustrated on page 37 may be cited as a symposium of the Christmas stock; it contains a great variety and it takes a man of considerable skill to plant these with the right effect.

KEEPING POINSETTIAS FRESH.

I have learned so much from the experience of others, as told in The Review, that I should like to add my mite, if I can. So I offer my experience with poinsettias.

Last year I bought a few plants, but they did not do much, producing only fair bracts. When I cut them for sale, however, I dipped the stems, as I cut them, in hot water, and let them stand until all were cut. Then I got some paraffine wax and dipped the stems, fresh from the water, in the wax. My customers told me they kept finely for four to five weeks.

I saved the old stumps and raised my own cuttings this year. They came last at least as long as cut flowers would.

The Lorraine can be made up in innumerable ways and is the plant selected for the most expensive arrangements, but it really is best when planted in some simple receptacle that does not come above the foliage to obscure the grace and beauty of the plant. KEEPING POINSETTIAS FRESH.

I have learned so much from the experience of others, as told in The Review, that I should like to add my mite, if I can. So I offer my experience with poinsettias.

Last year I bought a few plants, but they did not do much, producing only fair bracts. Then I got some paraffine wax and dipped the stems, fresh from the water, in the wax. My customers told me they kept finely for four to five weeks.

I saved the old stumps and raised my own cuttings this year. They came on in fine shape. Some were used for Thanksgiving and the rest will be in excellent condition for Christmas. Some plants eight to twelve inches high have bracts eight to nine inches across; others, three to eight feet high, have bracts fifteen to nineteen inches across. Not seeing any others, as grown in large places, I have felt that they were good.

J. E. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Poinsettias.

The bracts on the poinsettias in pans should now be well developed and, this being the case, it is better to reduce the heat 5 degrees at night where they are growing. They will then better withstand vicissitudes such as will probably be their lot a few days hence. If the bracts are not matured, give them a few degrees more heat, for if they are not sold at Christmas they will bring little later. The poinsettia is a popular Christmas flower, but once the holiday is gone it is as hard to sell as mistletoe or holly.

Where plants are being grown in pots or benches for cutting, it is also an advantage to gradually lower the temperature for a few nights before cutting them. There are some who claim that this temperature drop is all that is needed to hold the bracts fresh when placed in water, but it has not always been found so. Either water, boiling or nearly so, in which the bottoms of the stems can be stood for a few seconds, or a hot iron on which the cuts can be seared, will stop the bleeding, after which lay them in a bench. Tie some soft tissue paper around each bract, then plunge them in vases containing a good depth of water and place in a cool room, kept at 40 to 45 degrees.

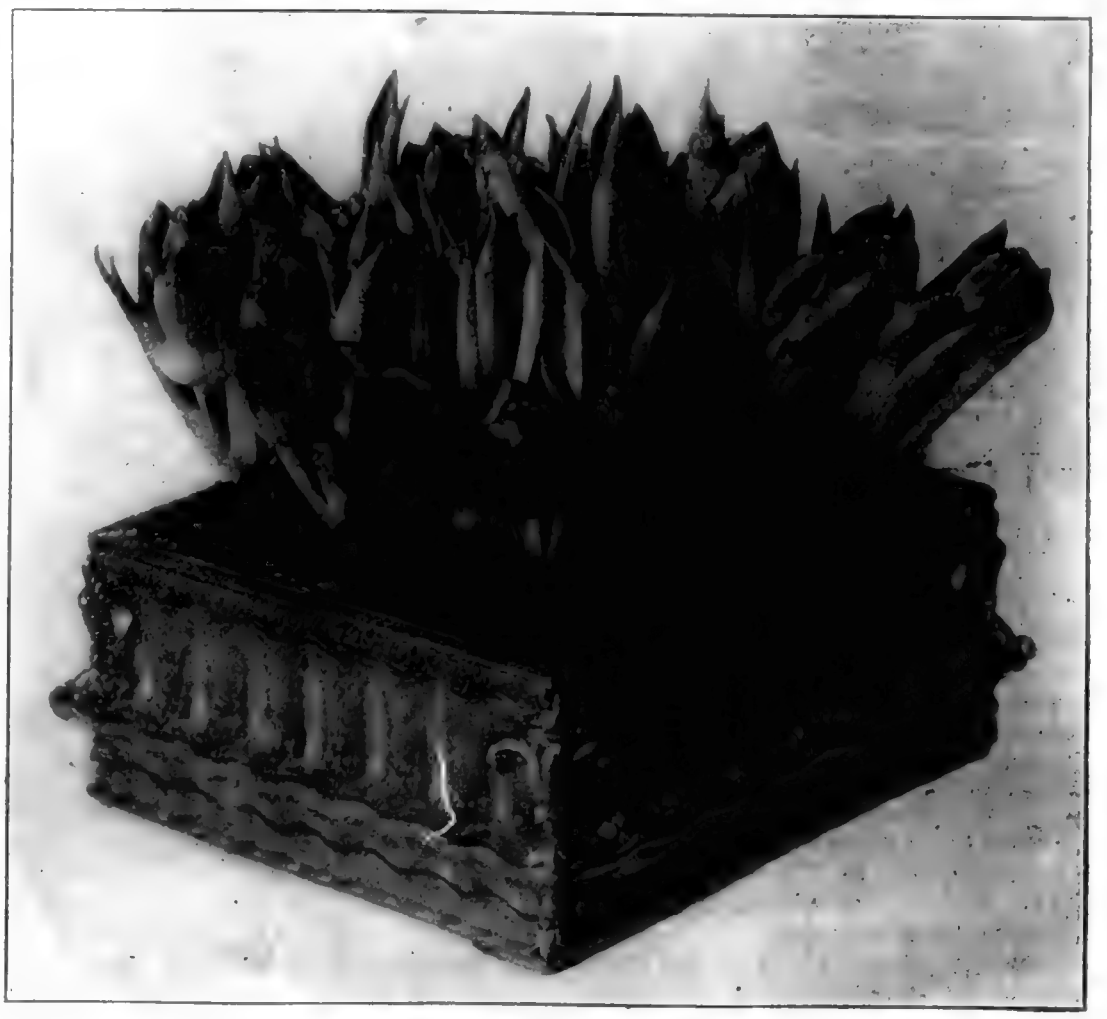
There is often so active a call for poinsettias that growers unthinkingly sell out too closely. Be sure to keep a good number of stock plants. The older ones, which have been planted in the benches, will provide the largest number of strong cuttings, and if these are not reserved, it will be found difficult to secure what is wanted at the time the plants are to be started.

Azaleas.

There is no great difficulty in getting Hexe, Deutsche Perle, Mme. Petrick or Vervæneana in flower for Christmas, provided a warm, moist house is allotted them. It is an advantage to keep plants which are in flower 10 degrees cooler before selling to the stores or selling direct to your customers. Take an azalea grown at 65 to 70 degrees at night and subject it at once to 45 degrees and the flowers will probably wilt badly and any customer securing such are bound to make a kick. Last year a neighbor tried to get in a lot of Mme. Vander Cruyssen for Christmas, a variety which is ill-adapted for early forcing. By keeping it at 70 degrees at night and syringing with warm water, a few flowers expanded. These same plants went to a store 25 degrees cooler at night. They wilted so badly as to be practically unsalable. This hard forcing on pot plants hardly pays in the long run.

Lack of bench room compels many azalea specialists to crowd their plants intended for Easter, on the benches or even underneath, just as they are unpacked. With Christmas stock out of the way, these should now be potted as fast as time will permit. There is, of course, no need to hurry them into heat, as Easter is a long way ahead yet.

Camellias.



There is a pleasing growth in the popularity of camellias, and at Christmas plants in 6-inch, 7-inch and 8-inch pots, carrying a few open flowers, sell well. Camellias are not plants which can be hurried into bloom. Too much heat will cause a heavy loss of buds. The only time they rather seem to revel in warmth and moisture is when making their growth. Plants which are a little backward should be syringed freely, but keep water away from the flowers as they show color. At a swell dinner a few nights ago, where 200 guests were present, red camellias and Lilium speciosum magnificum were used on the tables and made a pleasing change from the rather stereotyped roses and carnations. When packing camellias in flower, use great care not to press or bruise the flowers in any way, or they will surely drop to pieces, and a plant lacking flowers is, of course, unsalable.

Spanish Irises.

If a batch of Spanish irises has not yet been brought into heat, they should be got in at once, now that the cleaning out of Christmas stock gives some needed bench space. Anything like hard forcing is to be deprecated, as these irises will simply not stand it. The best flowers are produced in a temperature not exceeding 45 degrees at night, but to get some early flowers 5 degrees more can be allowed. Where many thousands are grown, bench culture is often adopted, but it has not been found in general practice that any better flowers are produced in benches than in flats, and when the latter are used there is the added advantage of being able to store them in a frame or pit until wanted, and when in flower the flats are readily moved to cooler quarters and their places occupied by other plants.

Gladiolus America.

Gladiolus America continues to decline in price and is now sufficiently moderate to be within the reach of all. In the whole gladiolus family no other variety has yet approached it in popularity and no one can go far wrong in planting it, either under glass or outdoors. The bulbs are now obtainable and after Christmas any spare bench room can be utilized for it. There is no need for any special soil. What will suit carnations or mums will be just as good for gladioli. The distance apart will depend on the size of bulbs used. Usually ten inches between the rows and four inches between the bulbs will be found ample. Small bulbs can go closer than this. A carnation temperature, which would not exceed 55 degrees at night, suits gladioli, but, of course, they do well 10 degrees cooler.

La Reine Tulips in a Tin-lined Gold Box.

In a Roman Jar. In a Gold Basket.

The Cyclamen is one of the Most Popular of Inexpensive Christmas Plants.

Do not plant all your bulbs now, as you will want two or three batches to give a succession through the season. Other useful forcing varieties in addition to America are May, Augusta, Shakespeare, Mrs. Francis King and the old Brenchleyensis.

Gladiolus The Bride.

The small-flowered, early gladioli, such as Colvillei The Bride, Blushing Bride, Peach Blossom, Sappho, and others of the nanus type, do well treated similarly to the Spanish iris. They will, however, stand a little more heat, but 55 degrees should be the night maximum. Give them a bench well up to the light and as the flats become well filled with roots, liquid cow manure once in four or five days will improve them. These gladioli are welcome in spring, when people have become somewhat satiated with roses and carnations and are looking for a change.

Lilacs.

Pot lilacs are now at hand. After they have had one or two good freezings, a batch can be started in heat at once. If cut flowers only are wanted, a warm, dark cellar or mushroom house will answer well as a forcing house until the flowers are ready to expand, when more light can be given, or they will lack substance. If, on the other hand, nice plants in pots are desired, the plants need a hot, moist and close house. Syringe freely and the plants will break quickly. For cutting, any of the lilacs, colored or white, are suitable, as all will come white if forced mainly in the dark, but where the plants are to be used and foliage as well as flowers is necessary, Charles X, Mme. Lemoine, Marie Legraye and Philemon are a good quartette of varieties. Start the plants hot and moist, keeping them a little cooler as the flowers expand.

Azalea Mollis.

Azalea mollis is excellent for forcing. It should be potted up at once, if this has not already been done. It is inadvisable to start more than a few plants at a time, as they do not last so well in flower as the Indian azaleas. As they possess some charming colors not found in the evergreen-leaved azaleas, they are popular with buyers who are somewhat fastidious and looking for something out of the beaten track. The forcing of these does not differ from that of lilacs. Heat and moisture, with frequent syringings and a cooler, drier house when the flowers are nicely expanded, are conditions which they like.

Canterbury Bells.

Both at Easter and Memorial day, Canterbury bells in pots sell well. The white and pink shades are the best at Easter. Other colors will sell later in the season. Singles and hose-in-hose, or calycanthema varieties, are to be preferred to the doubles. For Easter flowering it is now time to bring the plants into gentle heat; 45 degrees is sufficient for a start and 50 degrees as a minimum is warm enough at any time. These Canterbury bells succeed even better in pots than outdoors, and if neatly staked make about as beautiful pot plants as it is possible to see.

Seed Sowing.

Now, while the daylight steadily declines and the solar rays are less powerful, is a good time to make sowings of a few seeds. With steady fire heat, germination is usually better at this season than later. The following may be sown now: Asparagus plumosus nanus, Asparagus Sprengeri, Clematis paniculata (fresh seed picked and sown now in flats will germinate next summer), Ampelopsis Veitchii, cyclamen to flower for Easter 1912, Begonia Erfordii, B. Vernon, also the tuberous varieties; candytuft for an indoor crop, ten weeks and other forcing stocks for bench culture, Grevillea robusta, Aralia Sieboldii, a useful foliage plant not as much seen as it ought to be; the common myrtle (Myrtus communis), smilax, myosotis for spring flowering in pots, such as Eliza Fanrobert and dissitiflora, torenias, double daisies and pansies. The two latter, sown now, will be suitable for late spring sales. All these seeds like a light soil; one which is two-thirds leaf-mold and one-third loam will be found suitable, with some fine sand added. No manure of any kind should be used.

Chicopee Falls, Mass.—Frank Burfitt expects that a new railway, recently surveyed, will pass partly through his place, and he hopes, if it is true, he may be put on Easy street, for a while, anyhow. He grows considerable stock for the downtown stores, in addition to his own extensive home trade.

Kokomo, Ind.—W. W. Coles has sent stock of his new crimson carnation, Mrs. W. W. Coles, to two prominent growers in widely separated parts of the country. If the variety does as well for them as it has done at home it will be disseminated next year.

ADVERTISING.

[A paper by Charles O. Youngstrand, of Springfield, O., read at a meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club, November 14, 1910.]

Advertising, in its various forms and phases, is too vast a subject to discuss in the short space of an evening's discourse. Its ramifications are so far-reaching, when followed out, that there seems to be no beginning and no end to advertising.

When the average man thinks of advertising, he thinks of newspapers and magazines. These, of course, are the acknowledged mediums, and in most advertising campaigns, large or small, they are entitled to a large per cent of the appropriation. In the case of newspaper or magazine advertising the medium used, of course, should be consistent with the goods offered—as a rule, "high class goods, high class papers," "cheap goods, cheaper papers." The daily press caters to all classes. Some, however, have large rural circulation, while others excel in city circulation. All these points must be taken into consideration. Then, of course, there are the various trade papers, every subscriber of which is usually, in some way or other, interested. The circulation of each particular paper has to be considered, although large circulation is not always a criterion.

Advertising rates also come in for a share of thought. However, the cheapest mediums are sometimes the most expensive. The medium used depends, of course, on whether a wholesale or retail business is solicited. From these sources come the inquiries—first orders, trial orders, etc.

Turning Inquiries Into Orders.

It is rarely the case that the "direct returns" will pay the advertising bill, and right here is where some people stop and say, "Advertising doesn't pay." Of course it hasn't paid, for at this stage we are just in the preliminaries of the campaign. The newspaper or magazine has performed its function. From now on it is up to the advertiser to make the most out of the results of his primary expenditure. It is here that further methods of procedure differ according to the business engaged in and the class of people the concern is catering to. The mail order house sends out its catalogue. Business houses selling merchandise of values involving a considerable sum, or firms seeking large contracts, will probably send a special representative. Other firms will enter into correspondence with the prospect. To all of them, however, each inquiry has cost a certain sum of money and it is of vital importance that the advertiser bear this in mind and handle the inquiries as an asset.

Turning inquiries into orders is one of the most important points in any advertising campaign. Sometimes a catalogue will turn the trick, but every year thousands of catalogues are laid aside, only to be forgotten. Here is where the clever "follow-up" is brought into play and various devices are used with great success.

The Follow-up.

All of you have, no doubt, subscribed to leading periodicals and when your subscription expired, if you failed to renew, you soon found yourself besieged with an avalanche of mail matter. They appear to be vitally interested in your welfare. They bring before you the brilliant array of writers they have engaged for the ensuing year and a thousand other offers. If you are so hardened that all this has no effect upon you, you finally receive a "personal letter" from the president of the company, perhaps enclosing a "bond" worth $1, if you subscribe; or offering you almost anything from a cook stove to a trip to Europe. They are hot after you; they realize the value of every prospect and want your business, because they need it. This is the "follow-up."

These same magazines sell advertising space. They also buy it in other magazines, and they all believe in it and nearly all practice what they preach, as you who have had dealings with them have probably learned. The methods of "follow-up" are numerous—postal cards, from the ordinary size of which Uncle Sam is the vender, to those large as a wall map—when not folded up—calendars, blotters, novelties, personal and form letters, and sometimes samples. Every device calculated to make you "sit up and take notice" is brought into play.

Personal Letters and Form Letters.

If you use letters, by all means don't forget that there are two kinds—personal and form. Each has its place. If you really think a personal letter is necessary in any particular case, by all means make it personal. What is more disgusting than to receive a so-called "personal letter" with the body of the letter three shades lighter than the name and address? Such are invariably destined to find a lodging place in the waste basket, and your stamps, prospect, time and money are all lost, with no return. How much better it would be in this case to simply send legitimate printed matter than to try to palm off a fake personal letter, with all the earmarks of deception staring the prospect in the face!

Every advertiser using printed matter in any considerable quantity should get posted on type, paper, ink, the various processes of making illustrations, etc. It will bring you large returns for the time expended. Good paper is essential. It need not necessarily be expensive, but should show up the printed matter and illustrations to the best advantage. Of course, the weight is an all-important item on any matter that goes through the mail, but it is sometimes profitable to use a better paper rather than spoil the effect in a vain effort to save a little postage.

The Type and Illustrations.

Illustration plays a tremendous part in modern and up-to-date advertising. The day of the woodcut is past and it has been almost entirely superseded by the half-tone and etching. In illustrating the products of our greenhouses and nurseries the half-tone is by far the better. It prevents exaggeration, portraying the subject as it actually is. We all know there is no need of exaggerating the beauty of nature, so why not use the half-tone?

Type of various sizes is, of course, used in all printed matter, but for some purposes some type is more appropriate than others. An easy way to determine the particular style desired is to examine the printed literature of successful advertisers, and make your selection, but be sure your printer or publisher has the particular style in stock or will get it for you without too much expense.

A great mistake is often made in using too large type and capital letters. It is well to remember that eighty-five per cent of the printed matter we read in the course of a day is printed in "lower case." The eye is thus trained to read the "lower case," and in most instances, in both large and small type, its use is advisable.

General Publicity.

Advertising is usually divided into two classes—special and general publicity. The former usually calls attention to some special offer or article; the latter is to keep your business before the public.

All kinds of advertising help business in many ways. The liberal use of general publicity has an effect that is far-reaching. It serves as an introduction to your salesman or catalogue, and inspires a confidence in the firm or article advertised. "Goods well advertised are half sold."

In conclusion I wish to call attention to an important and fundamental principle upon which to base advertising—the firm name. Personality as identified with a firm name is a valuable asset. This is especially true when business is done directly with the consumer, although it applies in all cases. To cite a case: One of the largest retail clothing firms in the country has spent several years in gradually changing its name from "The Hub" to that of the president of the company, and for no other reason than to inject some personality into the firm name.

Now, does advertising pay? The answer is: Yes, if you advertise judiciously; no, if you go about it in a haphazard and half-hearted manner.

WORMS ON VIOLETS.

I make a specialty of growing single violets and have a nice lot of them, which are doing well. I send you a box containing some worms, and also some leaves of the violets. These worms came from outside when the plants were brought into the houses. Some of them are extremely small. They seem to stay under the leaves at night and on cloudy days, but when the sun shines they come out in large numbers. Is there any means of destroying them, besides picking them off? This we have been doing, but some are so small that they can scarcely be seen. I am well acquainted with red spider and am sure my plants are free from it. The violets are fine, but I fear these worms will get to the blooms, as they are now spoiling the foliage. M. E. H.

The worms were active when unpacked. This particular variety is not known to me, but I can well imagine that such formidable looking creatures would soon create havoc in a house of violets. It will be difficult to spray with poisons without damaging the leaves, but if hand-picking fails to keep them in check, it will be necessary to get rid of them in some more expeditious manner, so I would recommend spraying with Paris green, at the rate of one ounce to ten gallons of water. Add a little lime, which will release the free arsenic and lessen any chances of burning. If one application does not exterminate them, give a second a week later. You can spray the plants the day following the application of poison and wash away any traces of it. Arsenate of lead, hellebore and other poisons will discolor the leaves too much. Nicotine juice, sprayed on according to directions, will probably destroy a large part of the worms, as it contains considerable poison.

SHORT STEMS ON HERRICKS.

I am sending under separate cover some samples of violets. I am unable, as you see, to get any length of stem on Governor Herrick. The Princess of Wales enclosed will give you an idea of the stem that comes on this flower. Does anyone get a stem on Governor Herrick, say, six inches long? The stems on Princess of Wales will satisfy you that my soil and cultivation are both as they should be. I have no trouble in getting good stems on Princess of Wales. F. M. B.

The flowers of Princess of Wales are certainly fine. I do not remember seeing finer stems anywhere this season. You can surely grow excellent single violets. Governor Herrick, with you, acts as it has done with about everyone in the east—poorly. The stems have averaged short and the flowers small; except for the color, the plant had apparently little to recommend it. Some growers seem to have had good success, however, with Herrick, by growing it much warmer than Princess of Wales. One or two Review readers have stated that it needs 45 to 50 degrees at night to do it justice, whereas this temperature would soon spoil Princess of Wales, which thrives best at a minimum of 40 degrees. Growing Princess so beautifully, I do not see any advantage in growing the other variety, which even at its best is vastly inferior to Princess of Wales. C. W.

LILAC FORCING.

In the Vicinity of Philadelphia.

Little is known about the forcing of lilac in Philadelphia floral circles, beyond the fact that there are three places where lilac is forced for cut flowers, and that some fine stock is seen in the leading retail stores in winter. The three places are those of W. F. Lacroix and two other forcers. A few days after Thanksgiving Mr. Lacroix extended an invitation to Phil to visit him at his home in Buena, N. J., to see his lilacs. Mr. Lacroix stated with manly frankness that everything on his place was open for inspection, and that he would gladly give his experience in lilac growing and in lilac forcing. December 7 was set for the day; for two days before it snowed with a persistency that made it seem more than likely that Mr. Lacroix would be unable to keep his appointment, owing to heavy drifts. Yet there he was at the station at the time appointed, knee-deep in snow, cheerily calling which way to come to reach his horse nearby. Two and a half miles' drive through country covered with pure white, a drive made easy by Mr. Lacroix's energy in opening the road the day before, ended at the comfortable farm house with the lilac-forcing houses in the rear.

Before entering the houses, a few words about the industry itself will be of interest.

The lilac first forced in this country was imported stock of a number of varieties. On this stock a duty of twenty-five per cent ad valorem is charged, in addition to the cost of packing and transportation. Owing to the bulky nature of the stock, this was no small item, and it soon became evident that home-grown stock would not only be better, but less expensive. A nursery, then, with good soil adjacent to the forcing houses is indispensable.

Preparatory Outdoor Culture.

The first lilacs set out at Buena were experiments; they proved successful, more and more stock being planted out each year and gradually replacing the imported stock, until this season the last of the imported is being forced, with a strong probability that future lilac will be entirely home-grown. The difficulty about immediate change lies in the long time required to prepare the lilac for forcing.

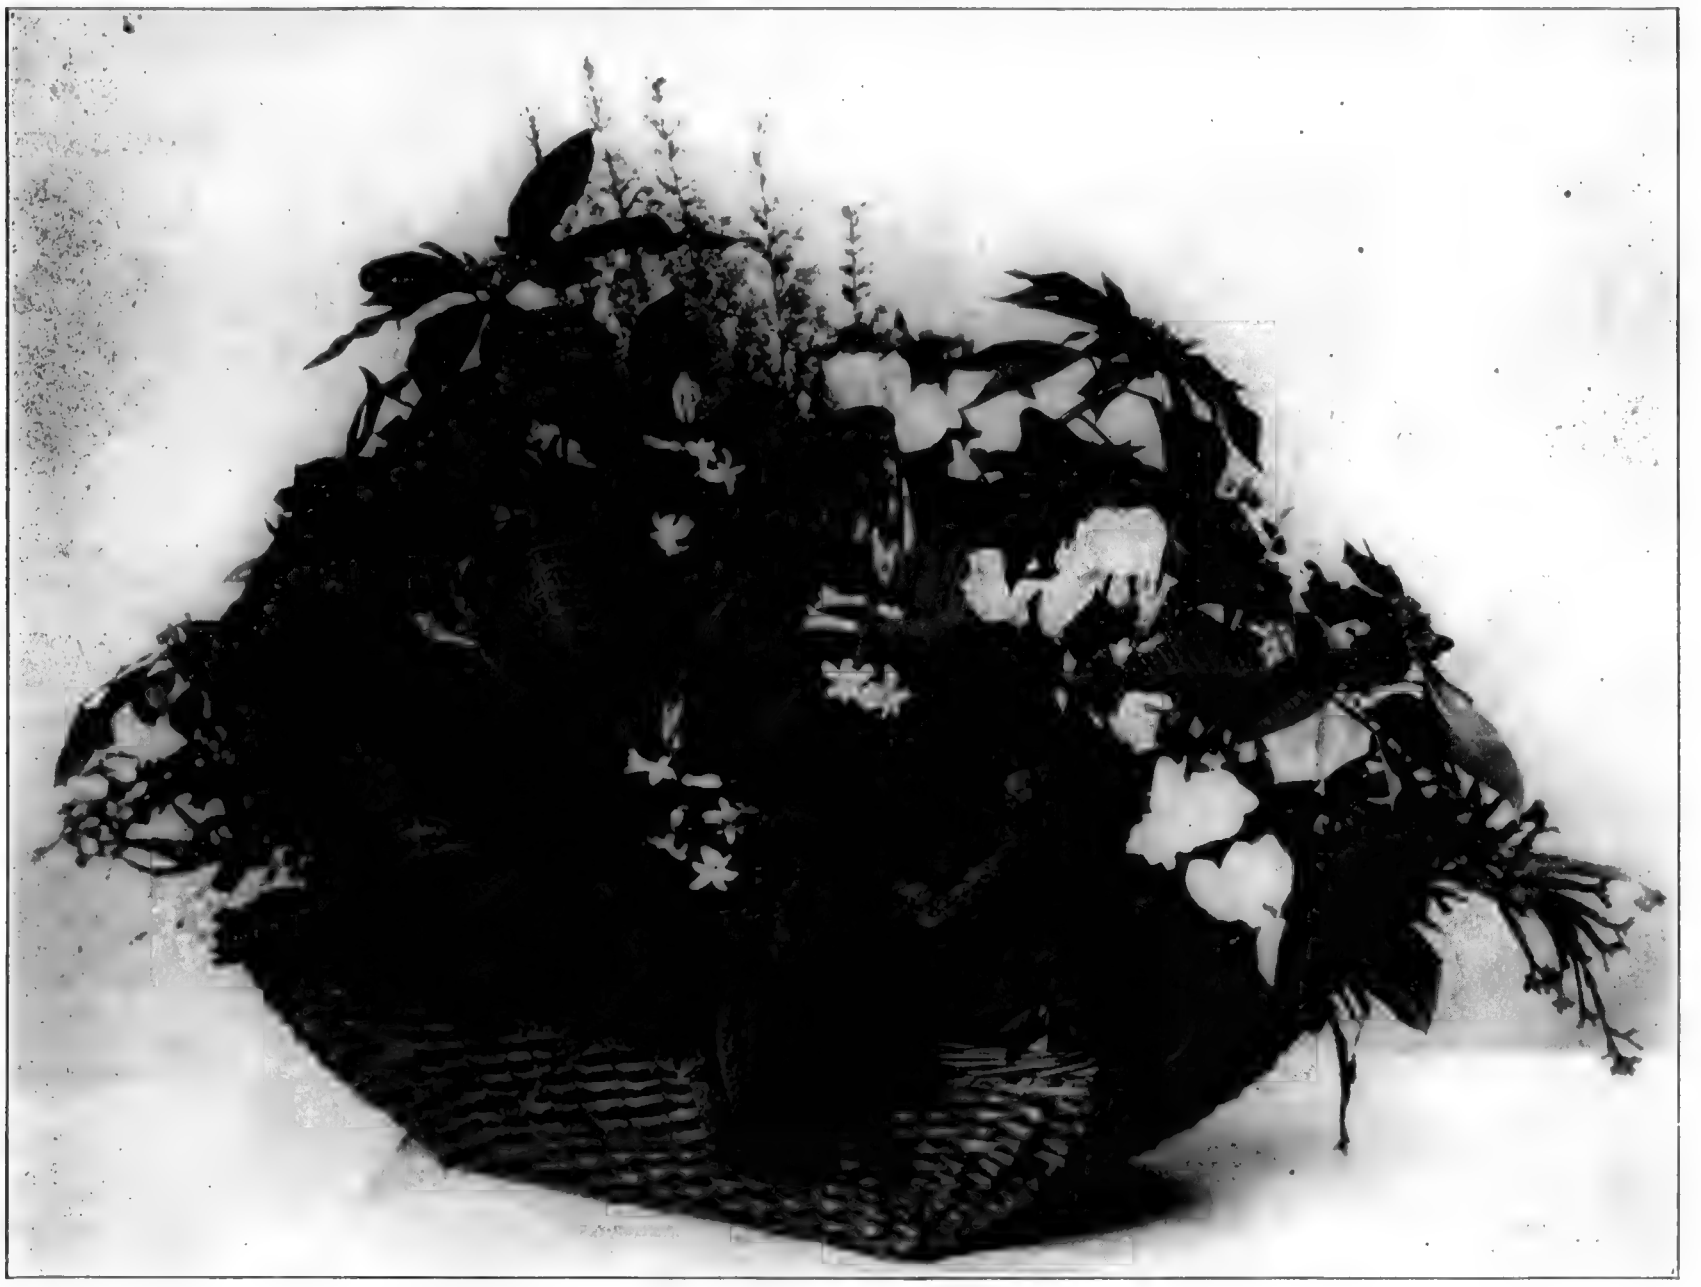
When a sucker is taken in the spring, preferably from two and three-year-old plants (suckers from older plants are not satisfactory), it is grown in the field for six or seven years before it is ready for forcing. The first year the lilac is cut down almost to the ground to induce heavy bottom growth and free suckering; the second year the plants are again pruned, almost as hard as the first year. This heavy pruning is continued until the fourth or fifth year, when longer growths are permitted to remain. No pruning is done the winter the plants are to be forced.

The field methods consist in clearing a suitable piece of ground; then it is often planted with corn and manured before the lilacs are set out. After the lilacs are set out, the cultivating is regularly and thoroughly done; pruning is done during the winter, removing of suckers during the growing season. These suckers must be as faithfully removed when they are merely to be thrown away as when required for stock, as they take strength from the plant. The cultivating is especially aimed to give the plant a good ball of roots for lifting; the plow is run close to the rows, cutting off roots that wander too far from the lilac, thus inducing a compact growth of roots. The lifting is done in the fall, and in the winter when the ground is not frozen; the plants when dug are taken from the field to a storehouse, where they are placed until required for forcing.

W. F. Lacroix's Methods.

The lilac forcing houses of W. F. Lacroix, ten in number, are 11x36 each. The houses are built somewhat like the ordinary greenhouse in shape, but, unlike the ordinary greenhouse, the roofs as well as the sides are covered with boards; only four sashes are used in each to give light. Two thicknesses of boards and two of paper make the sides and roofs tight. Three rows of steam pipe keep the houses at a night temperature of about 65 degrees and a day temperature 10 or more degrees higher. Each house accommodates 275 lilac plants, set out in beds. No effort is made to prepare the soil in the houses, the plants remaining there for only three weeks, the time required to flower them. The flowers are simply forced as in the case of valley, tulips or hyacinths, and not formed after being brought inside.

Heat and moisture, then, are the essentials. The former is furnished by upright boilers, a little larger than an ordinary stove, each boiler heating two houses. Stove coal is burned, the fires requiring no attention between 10 p. m. and 5 a. m. Water is supplied by a 35-foot well, operated by a windmill, and is warmed in a horizontal tank. Spraying is an important operation during the earlier stages of forcing, the moisture aiding the buds to break nicely from the hard wood.



The forcing of lilac before New Year's is much more difficult than later in the season, when it forces quite naturally. Entirely different methods have to be employed, and even then there is far less certainty of securing fine flowers. The average yield from a seven-year-old, well grown lilac is about ten flowers to the plant; a smaller number than this is not considered profitable. The plants are unprofitable in their earlier stages because they will not bloom, and later because they will not grow enough good flowers. When once forced, lilac plants are useless.

Best Varieties for Forcing.

Careful study has been given to the varieties of lilac best adapted for forcing. Marie Legraye, Charles X and several other standard sorts have had a thorough trial; the result of nine years'

Lorraine Begonia in a Side Handled Basket.

Large Baskets of Christmas Plants are Necessary in Every Store.

experimenting is that the fine double varieties are not so well suited for cutting as the good old single. The handsome doubles made a finer showing when cut, but they did not keep so well. It frequently happened that perfectly fresh flowers would fall over in a day or two. It was necessary to cut the stems daily in order to prevent this drooping; few customers took the trouble, so the handsome doubles waned in popularity. Rouge, the standard forcing variety of today (the favorite of Paris), is nothing more or less than the best of the old-fashioned common lilac; purple when grown naturally outdoors, almost pure white, with occasionally a delicate tinge of pink or lavender, when forced under shaded houses. Rouge forces readily, blooms freely and keeps wonderfully well—longer, it is believed, than any other flower except the chrysanthemum.

To return to Mr. Lacroix's forcing houses. Air can be given from ventilators above the sashes, but is seldom used in severe weather. The houses open from a central shed, where the teams can be driven in from the field and the lilacs unloaded into storehouses, not frost-proof, where they remain until required. Light is furnished by a gas machine that gives abundance of acetylene light, both in the shed and in Mr. Lacroix's home. The storeroom for cut flowers was happily arranged. A concrete tank, perhaps six inches deep, filled with water, was covered with lath stripped crossways, accommodating 250 bunches of lilac.

The Succession of Crops.

The cropping plan is to bring in three houses every week at this time, the extra house probably coming in for Christmas. The season started October 21 and will end about Easter. The total output should be about 15,000 bunches this year, as against 350 bunches nine years ago, the first year lilac was forced at Buena.

The Christmas crop is looking well, the eyes just swelling nicely. Earlier crops are in further stages of development. Those in full flower, while good, did not show the freedom or quality of bloom of those that were to come in during mid-December.

Mr. Lacroix shows two photographs with pride. One is a beautiful picture of a bunch of lilac that he exhibited at the Florists' Club's meeting in Philadelphia, February 2, 1908—the upper flower spikes twelve inches long, the lower fourteen inches; this photograph was taken by Robert Kift. The other is the picture of the first sale of lilacs made by Mr. Lacroix, who says he would not change the two-dollar bill for anything.

Thirty-six acres are planted in lilac to be used during the next seven years; 52,000 plants will be set out next spring. The business has shown steady advance, year by year; an advance marked by the increase in the number of plants grown and forced and, let us hope, by proportionate increase in the prosperity of one of our pioneer lilac growers. Five men are required to run the place during the winter, seven or eight during the summer, when the work of cultivating and suckering is arduous. Success is entirely dependent on the cut flowers sold during the social season; the lilacs are not flowered in the spring, nor are any plants or suckers sold.

GLADIOLUS AMERICA.

Would it be well to plant Gladiolus America between the carnations as I get them, or how should they be planted? Will there be more than one flower from each bulb? H. E. Y.

This gladiolus can be planted between the carnations to fill up gaps caused by plants dying out, but it would not be good policy to plant them among carnations which are doing well, as that would seriously injure the carnations. A much better plan is to allot the gladioli a piece of bench to themselves. Soil which will grow good carnations or mums will suit gladioli. Set the bulbs in rows ten inches apart, allowing three to four inches between the bulbs, according to their size. Occasional heavy bulbs may throw two spikes, but as a general thing one is all you can expect. C. W.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

THE BEST THIRTY.

White and Yellow.

In accordance with my custom for the last few years, I am naming herewith a selection of thirty best varieties to grow for exhibition, as judged by the way they have shown up during the season which has just closed.

White: Syme, Moir, B. May, Merza and Onunda. Mrs. Syme has most effectively made good as an exhibition white and today I know of nothing better in its color. Moir, while it is rather necky, is also near the top in the exhibition class. Merza seems finally doomed to be on the toboggan, from the proud position it has so long occupied as queen of the whites.

There is another white that has shown up strongly in the western exhibitions—one of Smith's last year's novelties, called Naomah. New varieties to be grown in this class next year include William Turner and Lady Carmichael, both of which come highly recommended.

Yellow: C. Montigny, Felton, Appleton, Yellow Miller, Mary Donnellan and Naceur Bey. The yellow class was enriched by Felton, from the novelty class of last year, but, while it is a glorious color, it will hardly come as large with average cultivation as Appleton. Mary Donnellan was also shown in good shape and was the best flower in this color.

Pink, Bronze, Etc.

Pink: William Duckham, Alice Lemon, Hankey, Lady Hopetoun, Frank Payne, Rousseau, Wells' Late Pink and Reginald Vallis. The pink class shows two fine novelties from last year—Wells' Late Pink and Alice Lemon, both of which pushed themselves right to the front as exhibition pinks. Duckham was also largely shown, but I think its place will be taken to a great extent by Alice Lemon and Wells' Late Pink.

Bronze and any other color: Howard Gould, Mrs. H. Stevens, Mrs. O. H. Kahn, Rose Pockett, Glenview and Mary Mason. Bronze is my favorite color in chrysanthemums, and some of the most beautiful things are included in the combination which calls for "any other color." Two of last year's novelties, Howard Gould and Mrs. H. Stevens, showed up wonderfully well in this section. Glenview also came to the front at several exhibitions and Mary Mason more than held its own. Bronzes are, as a general rule, classed as undesirable by commercial growers, but some varieties of this color were the most profitable ones grown for the New York market this past season. Harry E. Converse is a notable addition to this particular class in the novelties for 1911.

Crimson.

Crimson: W. Woodmason, Pockett's Crimson, Leslie Morrison, Partridge and C. H. Totty. In this class W. Woodmason showed itself as king in its color and was the largest flower at the last two exhibitions. There is enough bronze in its make-up to keep it from damping, which is the bugbear of the grower who tries to get size into his crimson varieties. Pockett's Crimson more than held its own, and Partridge and Totty were not one whit behind. F. T. Quittenton is the novelty addition in this class, which is now rich in splendid varieties that are easily handled.

The year 1910 will be chiefly remembered by the excessively high atmosphere during the month of October and part of November, which caused many of the best flowers to damp and be practically useless.

It cannot be said that the shows, generally, were a financial success as compared with previous years, but this was due largely to the weather and other circumstances over which the exhibitors had no control. Judged from the purely exhibition standpoint, the mum growers had no more than the usual cause to complain.

AT THE ZENITH CITY.

The chrysanthemum house shown in the accompanying illustration is one of those of J. J. Le Borious, at Duluth, Minn., and was photographed November 10. The center bench is filled with Yellow Eaton and the side benches with Dr. Enguehard. Mr. Le Borious grows only for his own retail trade and is a large buyer in the Chicago market. Many of the old-timers in the trade in Chicago will recognize the bald-headed gentleman at the right in the picture as John K. Richter, who many years ago worked for Hovey & Co., Farrell, Gallagher, J. T. Anthony, Walter Kreitling, and other of Chicago's pioneer retailers. Mr. Richter says business in Duluth was never better than it has been this season.

REMOVING WHITEWASH.

I noticed some directions in The Review for removing whitewash. I have another method which works well with me. Just spray water on the whitewash, so as to wet it thoroughly. Then get some screened ashes and scatter them over the whitewash and, with a long-handled brush, scrub and wash off the ashes, and the whitewash comes off also.

ROSE MRS. A. R. WADDELL.

The beautiful hybrid tea rose, Mrs. A. R. Waddell, was introduced by the well known French firm, Pernet-Ducher, in the spring of 1908. William H. Elliott, of Boston, Mass., tried a few of it in 1909 and one or two of the better class stores were enabled to handle small lots of it. This season Mr. Elliott has a larger batch and H. R. Comley, of Boston, and one or two other prominent retailers are displaying it. Mr. Comley thinks highly of it, as does Mr. Elliott himself. A small bunch shown at a recent meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston attracted considerable attention.

The plant is quite vigorous in habit. The flower buds are rosy scarlet, opening reddish salmon, the reverse side of the petals being of a rosy red color. The flowers are quite large and semi-double. The color is fine under natural light and even more beautiful under artificial light. In England this variety has proved an excellent bedder. It is too soon yet to speak of its usefulness in this line here, but as a forcing rose it has great possibilities. The color is quite distinct from that of any other forcing rose and the flowers keep wonderfully. The E. G. Hill Co., in its last catalogue, recommends it as a grand improvement on Safrano and Ma Capucine for those wanting a fancy forcing rose. It will probably be well shown by Mr. Elliott at the coming national show in Boston.

BABY RAMBLERS.

I would like to know how to treat potted roses, Baby Ramblers, so as to have them in bloom by Easter and Decoration day. When should they be brought into the greenhouse? What temperature should they be kept in and will tobacco smoke hurt them any?

G. H. P.

Keep the plants cool for some time yet. Anything near freezing, or a trifle above it, will be all right. Easter next year comes April 16 and to be on time start the plants twelve weeks before that date in a temperature of 48 to 50 degrees at night, advancing it 5 degrees, or if necessary 10 degrees, later. If the plants seem likely to be a little backward, ten weeks would suffice in an average night temperature of 60 degrees, but the plants are better if not grown too warm. As they come into flower they can be moved to slightly cooler quarters. For Memorial day the plants will need less time and, as they will be starting naturally about the end of March, that date is suitable for placing them under glass.

Smoke of tobacco stems will not hurt the roses if given in light doses. A strong fumigation, while they are in flower, will take the color out of the flowers and also cause them to droop. As tobacco stems, when used for fumigation, cause a disagreeable odor for a couple of days, the bulk of growers have now discarded them in favor of some of the nicotine extracts or papers, which are more cleanly, easy to use and leave no unpleasant odor behind them.

C. W.

HYBRID PERPETUALS.

The demand for hybrid perpetual roses in pots for Easter is not what it used to be, but quite a number are still disposed of. It takes considerable nice manipulation to strike a batch just right, when extreme climatic vagaries are taken into consideration. Plants wanted for spring blooming should now be potted; as a rule, 7-inch and 8-inch pots will be found suitable. In using budded plants, endeavor, if possible, to bury the worked portion. Stand the plants where the pots are protected from frost, but where the temperature is as low as freezing, or a little lower. Do not do any pruning until starting the plants, which will not be for some weeks yet.

A fine Easter seller is that queen of white roses, Frau Karl Druschki. Other varieties that do well in pots are the old General Jacqueminot, Mme. Gabriel Luizet, Mrs. R. G. Sharman Crawford, Mrs. John Laing, Ulrich Brunner, Magna Charta and Prince C. de Rohan. Among other types of roses which are suitable for pot culture for Easter are Clothilde Soupert and Hermosa, each of which is old, but hard to beat; Catherine Zeimet, the white baby rambler; Souvenir de Malmaison and White Maman Cochet.

HARDY YELLOW ROSES.

Will you please send me a list of hardy yellow roses, which are floriferous and will stand the Ohio winters?

J. G. H.

The number of hardy yellow roses for your state is practically nil. Austrian Copper and Persian Yellow have small flowers and bloom early, but do not flower through the season. Soleil d'Or, orange yellow, sometimes reddish gold, has a fine flower. This will withstand a temperature below zero, but it is not very floriferous. The best of the yellow roses are found in the hybrid tea class. These are continuous bloomers all summer and fall. These would not carry over with you, unless heeled in a cold-frame or buried in the soil outdoors just before the ground freezes up. One or two fine varieties of hybrid teas are: Betty, ruddy gold; Franz Deegen, golden yellow; Gustave Regis, golden yellow.

MORE DATA NEEDED.

I have a bench of White Killarneys which are in seemingly good health, with the foliage rich, dark green, and the new growth rich, bronzy green, but the growths are short—do not lengthen out as they should. What feeding would you recommend to correct this condition?

B. H. I.

This querist has given me no data to go on. Had he been more explicit and stated some of the conditions under which his roses have been grown, I might be able to help him. As he does not give these conditions, such as temperature, feeding and ventilation, or whether they are in solid or table benches, it would be rash of me to advise.

Ribes.

BEDDING GERANIUMS.

With chrysanthemums out of the way, it is possible to give some needed additional space to the little bedding geraniums. It never pays to keep them crowded at any stage of their growth. Spread out the plants and, when doing so, remove dead or decaying leaves from them and loosen the surface soil a little. In some cases the plants, where placed in pots quite early as cuttings, have now made sufficient roots to necessitate a shift to a larger size of pot. Do not use any manure in the soil, unless it be a little fine bone, or you will promote a soft, rank growth, which will not flower satisfactorily. Make it a point to let the plants dry out well between waterings. An excess of moisture promotes a soft, rank growth, and, if ventilation is not carefully given, may cause damping off.

Any plants sufficiently strong to yield a cutting can be topped and the tops may be placed in 2-inch pots of sandy loam and stood where they will get a bottom heat of 60 to 65 degrees. There will be only a small loss from damping off if potted in this way—considerably less than if inserted in a regular propagating bench. Do not keep the little pots constantly wet, but after the first watering let them get quite dry. When thus hardened, they are less liable to rot off. Unless there is some sale for small geraniums in bloom, which is hardly likely at this season, keep all flowers pinched off.

IN NEBRASKA.

Out in the middle of the great grain state of Nebraska the business of the florists is on the boom; the people out that way all have money beyond the sum required for the necessities of life, which means that they are adding plants and flowers to the list of their necessities. The accompanying illustration shows the place of Edward Williams, an establishment that is typical of those of the western towns: store, office and dwelling on the corner, several greenhouses built from time to time, and over in the far corner of the property a new house that shows up for itself as wider, higher and lighter.

PELARGONIUMS IN SUMMER.

I should like to get a few hints on the treatment of show pelargoniums—how to treat stock during summer and when to propagate for best sales. What size of pots should produce the best plants for retail? Can you tell me where the Freddie Dorner pelargonium can be procured? This was popular in the eighties and was almost a perpetual bloomer. It was the most satisfactory variety I ever saw. S. C. T.

I assume that you refer to the large flowered show pelargoniums and not the zonal type. After these are done blooming, stand them outdoors in a sunny location. This would naturally be about the middle of June. Water freely for a time, then gradually reduce the supply. By the middle of July they can be laid on their sides and, beyond an occasional spraying, will need no other moisture or attention. About the middle of August, or a trifle earlier if preferred, stand them up and prune them back quite hard. The plants will by this time have lost much of their foliage and the wood will be of a nutty brown color. After pruning, place in a coldframe on a bed of cinders, under glass protection. Spray freely and water quite moderately until they have broken nicely. Then they can be shaken out of the pots, removing all the soil and pruning back the longest roots. Repot in smaller sized pots. Plants which were in 7-inch can go into 5-inch, and those in 6-inch into a couple of sizes smaller, also. Stand them in a frame or cold greenhouse and be careful not to overwater. The plants will soon start to grow and should at all times be kept cool, well aired and repotted as required.

The best time to take cuttings is just before laying them down to rest. These cuttings, grown along and flowered in 5-inch and 6-inch pots, make the most salable stock. The variety Freddie Dorner I do not seem to remember. It is possible, however, that some florists may still have it, as older sorts are still in cultivation. C. W.

ORCHIDS

TRANSPLANTING CATTLEYAS.

I have about 100 Cattleya labiata which have not been transplanted since three or four years ago. The roots are hanging down from twelve to twenty-four inches, coming through the holes of the pots and baskets, which are in a hanging position. I would appreciate it if someone would inform me as to the right treatment in transplanting—whether it will be good to cut the roots in order to put them in the new pots or baskets, and whether the regular orchid pots or hanging baskets made from hardwood are preferable. I also should like to know whether Cattleya labiata stands dividing, provided that each plant has sufficient roots, and how should this operation be done? What kind of material is the best for orchids and which is the most practical book on orchids for this country?

C. W.

The cattleyas cannot be in a satisfactory condition if they have not been potted or rebasketed for three or four years. There are some who applaud the appearance of long roots hanging from cattleyas and lælias, laboring, as they do, under the popular delusion that it is good for the plants to send out their roots in this way, as they practically exist on what the said roots derive from the atmosphere. As a matter of fact, when the roots of cattleyas hang down over the edges of the pots or baskets, it means that the plants will rapidly deteriorate and any bulbs made will produce few flowers and those of poor quality.

Pots or moderately deep pans are better, on the whole, for cattleyas than baskets. In them we have the roots under more perfect control. Of course, superb plants are grown in baskets and they are convenient for hanging up, but if you give earthenware receptacles a fair trial, you will prefer them. You can, of course, get special pans, with holes for wires to suspend them.

As C. labiata's flowering season has just ended, this is a suitable time to overhaul your plants. It will be difficult, if not impossible, to save all the lengthy roots, but preserve what you can. It may be necessary to tear the baskets in pieces, the better to preserve the roots. Wash the plants well after repotting them. Drain the pots well; they can be filled from one-third to one-half with clean crocks. For compost there is nothing equal to osmunda fern fiber, purchasable from most of the orchid specialists and also from one or two firms who make a specialty of it. Chop this up in squares. Shake out the fine particles. No moss need be used with it. Endeavor to get all possible roots inside the pots without breaking.

Use a pointed hardwood stick to thoroughly firm the fern fiber. All plants must be firmly potted, or they will never thrive. The crowns of the plants should be slightly elevated above the rim of the pot. Water sparingly at first, and until roots are being freely produced and new growths pushing it is safer to run the plants on the dry side.

Plants can be divided with a sharp knife, always leaving one or more sound eyes or leads on each division. Give the plants a winter minimum of 55 to 58 degrees. Anything higher will be injurious. I would prefer 52 to 62 degrees. Plants should be overhauled every year after blooming. The bulk of them will be benefited by potting.

I know of no good American work on orchids. There are several excellent English works by W. Watson, B. S. Williams and H. A. Burberry. Their cultural conditions, however, are radically different from ours and these books would not give you the right culture for America. Bailey's Encyclopedia treats on orchids quite fully from an American standpoint, however.

CYPRIPEDIUM ROTHSCHILDIANUM

Cypripedium Rothschildianum, which caused quite a sensation when first introduced in 1887, is a native of Borneo. It is named in honor of Baron Ferdinand de Rothschild, a noted amateur orchid enthusiast. Hybridists have not been slow to use this remarkable variety and there are now some fine Rothschildianum crosses. The foliage is glossy green and remarkably strong, attaining a length of eighteen to twenty-four inches in well established plants. The leaves are also quite thick. The scape is reddish brown and carries several flowers. The dorsal sepal of the flower is yellowish, with dark longitudinal stripes and white borders. The petals are spreading and of a yellowish color, striped and spotted with dark purple. The lip is cinnamon brown. It is strong and leathery. The labellum is of slipper form and brownish, with the margin light yellow. The staminode has a projecting beak.

C. Rothschildianum is a winter-blooming variety. It succeeds well at the warm end of the cypripedium house, in a compost of osmunda fiber and sphagnum, with plenty of drainage in the pots. This is one of the boldest and most striking of the numerous varieties of cypripediums.

CATTLEYA DOWIANA AUREA.

Please give me some information as to how to grow Cattleya Dowiana after the plants are through blooming. Should I reduce the water, as with C. labiata, and should they be kept warm?

H. R.

Reduce the water supply after flowering, as in the case of C. labiata and other cattleyas. Any potting or basketing should be done after flowering. Keep the plants at the warmest end of the house. They like 5 degrees more heat than C. labiata and at this season need no shade at all. C. Dowiana, if grown shaded, will make fine growths and dark foliage, but if you want it to bloom well, hang the plants well up to the light and give only a thin shading, even in summer. The foliage will look yellow, but you will get what you especially desire, viz., flowers. C. W.

MARGUERITES AT CHRISTMAS.

In The Review of December 1, page 12, I noticed an article about marguerites, in which it states that the marguerites may be had in fine flower for Christmas. Please tell me what varieties that has reference to, as I cannot manage my Queen Alexandra so as to get flowers at that time. S. G.

Marguerite Queen Alexandra is not an early bloomer and will not flower for Christmas satisfactorily. The old, silvery-leaved form of Chrysanthemum frutescens, with much smaller flowers than Queen Alexandra, blooms well at Christmas in pots. Young plants are of no use for this purpose, however. Plants propagated the previous winter, which have been planted outdoors all summer and lifted early in September, will flower satisfactorily if given a sunny house in a night temperature of 50 degrees. Of course, these plants will not bloom as heavily as at their natural flowering time, which is in the spring. If carried over summer in pots of a good size under glass, both the yellow variety, Etoile d'Or, and the improvements on it, as well as the white sorts, will give a fair Christmas crop. In fact, marguerites are now procurable from Thanksgiving until July. To bloom well in winter, the roots must be restricted. Planted out, they make too rank a growth and will not bloom until spring. C. W.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The first real winter blizzard struck Buffalo early last week and the country has been covered ever since. Ideal Christmas weather prevails and the temperature has been mild enough so as not to cause too much trouble. The dark weather continues and stock has never been so scarce, especially carnations. Roses are not any too plentiful, but the scarcity is not so marked as in the carnations. If these conditions continue, the cut will only equal about forty per cent of the demand.

Sweet peas are slow in opening and the shortage is marked. Beauties are poor, excepting the long stems. Plants largely have taken the place of cut stock, and begonias and azaleas have sold the best at this date. Poinsettias have made their appearance, but the bulk will be shown a little later. Green stock and holly have arrived on the market, and the abundance of cheap stock gives promise of an oversupply again this year. Nearly every commis-less than if inserted in a regular propagating bench. Do not keep the little pots constantly wet, but after the first watering let them get quite dry. When thus hardened, they are less liable to rot off. Unless there is some sale for small geraniums in bloom, which is hardly likely at this season, keep all flowers pinched off.

IN NEBRASKA.

Out in the middle of the great grain state of Nebraska the business of the florists is on the boom; the people out that way all have money beyond the sum required for the necessities of life, which means that they are adding plants and flowers to the list of their necessities. The accompanying illustration shows the place of Edward Williams, an establishment that is typical of those of the western towns: store, office and dwelling on the corner, several greenhouses built from time to time, and over in the far corner of the property a new house that shows up for itself as wider, higher and lighter.

PELARGONIUMS IN SUMMER.

I should like to get a few hints on the treatment of show pelargoniums—how to treat stock during summer and when to propagate for best sales. What size of pots should produce the best plants for retail? Can you tell me where the Freddie Dorner pelargonium can be procured? This was popular in the eighties and was almost a perpetual bloomer. It was the most satisfactory variety I ever saw. S. C. T.

I assume that you refer to the large flowered show pelargoniums and not the zonal type. After these are done blooming, stand them outdoors in a sunny location. This would naturally be about the middle of June. Water freely for a time, then gradually reduce the supply. By the middle of July they can be laid on their sides and, beyond an occasional spraying, will need no other moisture or attention. About the middle of August, or a trifle earlier if preferred, stand them up and prune them back quite hard. The plants will by this time have lost much of their foliage and the wood will be of a nutty brown color. After pruning, place in a coldframe on a bed of cinders, under glass protection. Spray freely and water quite moderately until they have broken nicely. Then they can be shaken out of the pots, removing all the soil and pruning back the longest roots. Repot in smaller sized pots. Plants which were in 7-inch can go into 5-inch, and those in 6-inch into a couple of sizes smaller, also. Stand them in a frame or cold greenhouse and be careful not to overwater. The plants will soon start to grow and should at all times be kept cool, well aired and repotted as required.

The best time to take cuttings is just before laying them down to rest. These cuttings, grown along and flowered in 5-inch and 6-inch pots, make the most salable stock. The variety Freddie Dorner I do not seem to remember. It is possible, however, that some florists may still have it, as older sorts are still in cultivation. C. W.

ORCHIDS

TRANSPLANTING CATTLEYAS.

I have about 100 Cattleya labiata which have not been transplanted since three or four years ago. The roots are hanging down from twelve to twenty-four inches, coming through the holes of the pots and baskets, which are in a hanging position. I would appreciate it if someone would inform me as to the right treatment in transplanting—whether it will be good to cut the roots in order to put them in the new pots or baskets, and whether the regular orchid pots or hanging baskets made from hardwood are preferable. I also should like to know whether Cattleya labiata stands dividing, provided that each plant has sufficient roots, and how should this operation be done? What kind of material is the best for orchids and which is the most practical book on orchids for this country?

C. W.

The cattleyas cannot be in a satisfactory condition if they have not been potted or rebasketed for three or four years. There are some who applaud the appearance of long roots hanging from cattleyas and lælias, laboring, as they do, under the popular delusion that it is good for the plants to send out their roots in this way, as they practically exist on what the said roots derive from the atmosphere. As a matter of fact, when the roots of cattleyas hang down over the edges of the pots or baskets, it means that the plants will rapidly deteriorate and any bulbs made will produce few flowers and those of poor quality.

Pots or moderately deep pans are better, on the whole, for cattleyas than baskets. In them we have the roots under more perfect control. Of course, superb plants are grown in baskets and they are convenient for hanging up, but if you give earthenware receptacles a fair trial, you will prefer them. You can, of course, get special pans, with holes for wires to suspend them.

As C. labiata's flowering season has just ended, this is a suitable time to overhaul your plants. It will be difficult, if not impossible, to save all the lengthy roots, but preserve what you can. It may be necessary to tear the baskets in pieces, the better to preserve the roots. Wash the plants well after repotting them. Drain the pots well; they can be filled from one-third to one-half with clean crocks. For compost there is nothing equal to osmunda fern fiber, purchasable from most of the orchid specialists and also from one or two firms who make a specialty of it. Chop this up in squares. Shake out the fine particles. No moss need be used with it. Endeavor to get all possible roots inside the pots without breaking.

Use a pointed hardwood stick to thoroughly firm the fern fiber. All plants must be firmly potted, or they will never thrive. The crowns of the plants should be slightly elevated above the rim of the pot. Water sparingly at first, and until roots are being freely produced and new growths pushing it is safer to run the plants on the dry side.

Plants can be divided with a sharp knife, always leaving one or more sound eyes or leads on each division. Give the plants a winter minimum of 55 to 58 degrees. Anything higher will be injurious. Green stock and holly have arrived on the market, and the abundance of cheap stock gives promise of an oversupply again this year. Nearly every commission man on the market has sent out letters about the high class holly he has to sell. This class of trade has increased every year and the result is too much poor holly on every corner and in front of every grocery store, and this hurts the trade of the florists.

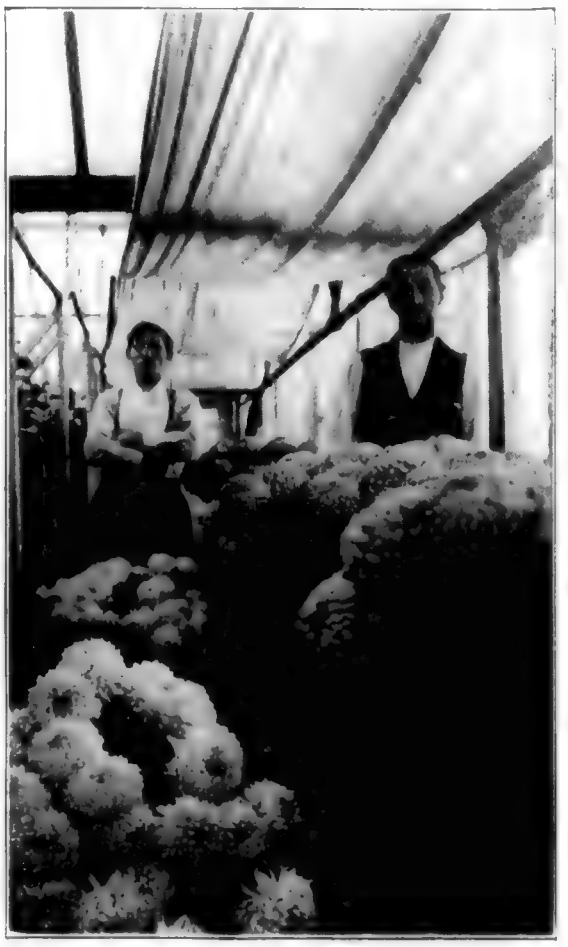
Various Notes.

A special meeting of the Florists' Club was held last week to close up the details of the flower show. William F. Kasting was chairman of the flower committee and gave the figures to the members present. George McClure and Charles Sandiford read their reports, and the final figures showed a slight loss. The members were not at all displeased with the results and are quite anxious to repeat the show another year. Owing to other attractions and the election taking up so much of the people's time, the members thought that with another year's advertising the show would be a decided success. Without a doubt it was the best treat the Buffalo people have had in years, not barring any style of attractions, music, racing, or any class of entertainment. The writer is in a position to hear the comments from the "four hundred," and knows that this is the sentiment that prevailed with them. With this lasting impression on their minds, there is no doubt but that the show would draw a sufficient crowd next year to cover all expenses. The question is up to the exhibitors, whether it pays from this standpoint. This will be decided shortly and if the show is to be held all growers, however small, will be notified, and the time afforded will give them ample opportunity to make preparations for the show in 1911.

The Bowling Club has been flourishing ever since its start and each week the boys enjoy one good night's sport. Excitement runs high, especially as the evening goes on and the boys begin to bet on the game.

In going around to size up the Christmas stock, we ran into the place occupied by Henry Weber on North Main street. He has four houses, all King construction and nicely kept up. Mr. Weber has just cut some good mum stock and is now selling his begonias, with which he did so well at the recent flower show. A good lot of cuttings in the sand speaks well for a house of good begonias for another year. Mr. Weber has a store in connection with the greenhouses and in all has a neat arrangement. R. A. S.

NORBY AND HOEFLE.



The firm of Norby & Hoefle, at Des Plaines, Ill., turned out a notable crop of chrysanthemums this year and the accompanying illustration, which found its way to The Review through their sales agents, Kennicott Bros. Co., will be of interest not only for the fact that it shows a portion of one day's cut, but that both Mr. Norby and Mr. Hoefle appear in the picture.

Montpelier, Vt.—Emslie & Co. grew Enchantress inside this season and are convinced it is the best method for early crops. Planted from 3½-inch pots June 1, they say it "trimmed all others." They are growing Pink Delight and believe it will prove to be a good variety.

BOSTON.

The Market.

We have had a week of quite severe weather, with temperatures 5 to 10 degrees below zero on several nights close to Boston, and with a good snow supply in addition. Winter has certainly started in dead earnest and much earlier than usual. The effect on the market has been a materially reduced supply of flowers and the maintaining of nearly all prices well up to the Thanksgiving mark. Roses are now in the ascendant, with the gradual passing of chrysanthemums, and are making good prices. The favorites still are the two Killarneys. Of Richmond the supply of good flowers is inadequate. Rhea Reid is seen superior to Richmond. Beauties continue to improve in quality and the price is gradually ascending. Mrs. Aaron Ward is seen on every hand and is popular with retailers. In the way of other roses, Chatenay, Perle, Safrano and Bon Silene are arriving of good quality.

Carnations are not plentiful. Growers whose stock was lifted from the field, and they number over nine-tenths of the whole, state that their plants are blooming less freely than usual, blaming the severely dry summer for the same. Prices are holding up well. The variety, Pink Delight, is popular. Beacon as a scarlet remains at the head of the list, while White Enchantress and White Perfection each have their champions. Violets remain scarce, but there will probably be a big outpouring of them for Christmas. The severe weather hurts the sale of these, as they are rarely seen on the streets while the temperature is low.

A good many Roman hyacinths and Paper Whites are arriving and a few Trumpet Major narcissi have made their appearance. Callas are more abundant and quite a number of lilies are coming in, including some specimens. Chrysanthemums are still seen on many stands, but are getting small and do not sell particularly well. Bonnaffon and Nonin are the best. Valley is of better quality than for some time. Quite a few yellow and white marguerites are arriving and some good mignonette and antirrhinums. The scarcity of cattleyas has been acute and higher prices have rarely been obtained for them. One prominent retailer paid $15 per dozen, with express added, last week for a number for a decoration.

Growers of pot plants report trade as good and a large proportion of the flowering stock is already sold. Poinsettias are pretty well cleaned up and azaleas are moving well. Lorraines continue to sell in quantity. Erica melanthera is beautifully flowered. Scarlet primulas, geraniums, cyclamens and bulbous stock make up the balance.

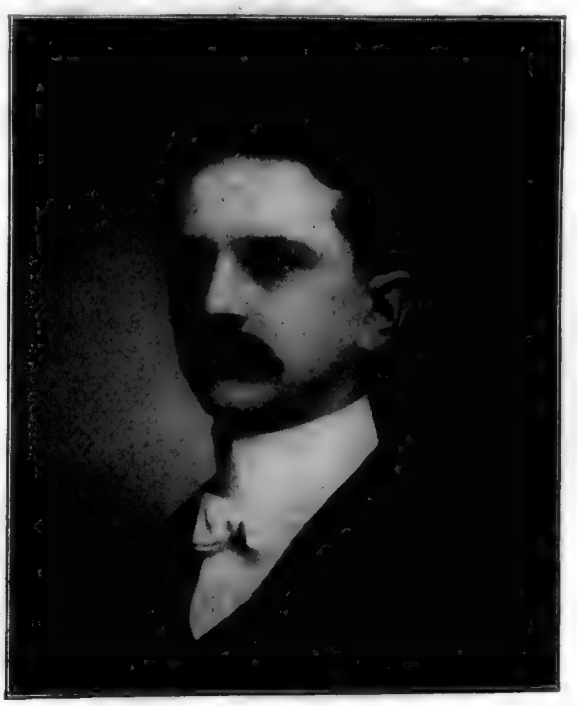
An active demand exists for holly, boxwood, laurel and other greens.

Various Notes.

New England is now facing one of the most serious droughts in its history. Our rainfall to date this year has been 26.6 inches, or 14.5 inches below the normal. Florists are hard hit with the rest.

Wheeler & Co., of Waban, orchid specialists, have a fine lot of Cattleya Trianæ coming on. Dendrobium Phalænopsis is now in season. It flowers later than the form Schrœderianum, usually grown, and has darker flowers. Blooming now, it is quite valuable. Oncidium tigrinum is coming into flower, while O. bicallosum and O. Cavendishianum promise a fine crop later. Extra fine batches of Odontoglossum Rossii majus and O. citrosmum and Cattleya Harrisoniæ are to be seen here. Under Mr. Mutch's care plants are looking exceptionally well.

At the Montrose Greenhouses a house of Rose Mrs. Aaron Ward, which is enjoying great popularity in Boston, is looking fine. Killarney and White Killarney are carrying excellent crops. The deep sport of Killarney, which originated here, will probably be considerably grown in a year or two. It succeeds particularly well in the same temperature as Richmond. The old Perle is well grown here. This and other roses grown are tried not only on their own roots but on a variety of stocks, and an accurate record kept of their productiveness. Eber Holmes, the manager, has everything here in apple-pie order and it is a pleasure to visit a place where everything is so well grown and neatly kept.



Henry M. Robinson & Co. have received some unusually well berried consignments of holly and mistletoe. For the former demand is active. All evergreens are selling well, but there is a marked shortage of ground pine and other sorts, owing to early heavy snows. For red immortelles there has been a heavy call.

Some of the finest Princess of Wales violets arriving at the Boston Flower Exchange are from Nelson & Johnson, of Framingham. Sweet peas are also well grown. In carnations their Beacon, White Perfection, Enchantress and Winsor are all that could be desired. W. A. Hastings handles the entire cut of this firm.

Paul De Nave, of Fall River, is one of the newest of our local orchid specialists. He has two houses stocked with well grown plants. He has had a heavy crop of Cattleya labiata and is now cutting C. Percivaliana and C. Trianæ in quantity and will have a fine holiday crop. Dendrobium Formosum giganteum is done extra well, some growths carrying nine to twelve of the large pure white flowers. Mr. De Nave states that his volume of business in 1910 has been double that of a year ago. The bulk of his flowers are handled by Welch Bros.

A. Leuthy, of Roslindale, has an extra good lot of flowering plants for Christmas, of which he is already pretty well cleared out. Azaleas are grown in large numbers, including Firefly and Mme. Petrick, also poinsettias, Lorraines, cyclamens, primulas, ardisias, Dracæna terminalis and many other varieties. A large variety of palms and ferns are also carried.

Andrew Christensen, of Stoneham, has this season 45,000 carnations benched. He is well pleased with Pink Delight and wishes he had more of it. Scarlet Glow he does not consider superior to Beacon. Sangamo is not liked here. Among standard varieties the Queen is largely grown and continues to pay well, also Winsor, Beacon, Enchantress and White Enchantress. All Mr. Christensen's flowers are disposed of at the Boston Flower Exchange.

George W. Ayer, of Reading, grows Princess of Wales violets remarkably well. He has 7,000 plants, all the flowers from which are spoken for in advance. For several years he dropped carnations, but has this season taken them up again. Pink Delight is doing splendidly, as are White Enchantress, Beacon and Winsor.

The first Trumpet Major narcissi of the season from French bulbs came to the Boston Flower Exchange December 10, from the Sutermeister estate, of Readville. The same firm is marketing Paper Whites, Roman hyacinths and stevia in quantity.

Quite a number of local gardeners are leaving to spend Christmas in Europe. Daniel McFie, of Nahant; James Rust, of Chestnut Hill, and Arthur E. Thatcher, of the Arnold Arboretum, have sailed. Fritz Berkhahn, of Wellesley, will sail for Glasgow December 23 and will make a ten weeks' European trip. Before coming to America he was for some years with A. & C. Pearson, the well known English nurserymen and publishers.

S. J. Goddard is one of the local growers who is able to grow Jeanne Nonin chrysanthemums well. His crop will last until Christmas. This is far the best of the late white mums. Mr. Goddard has a fine crop of Pink Delight, Beacon, Winsor and other carnations for the holidays.

Wax Bros., on Tremont street, this week have among other specialties fine Beauty roses, gardenias, Cattleya Percivaliana, violets of grand quality and camellias in pot plants. Their large show windows always are attractive.

Thomas F. Galvin, at his Tremont street store, has one window devoted to orchids, individual vases being devoted to Vanda cærulea, Cattleya Trianæ, C. Percivaliana, cypripediums, Dendrobium Formosum and other seasonable sorts.

A. A. Reed, of Whitman, who is one of our local orchid specialists, is cutting some excellent Cattleya Trianæ. All of Mr. Reed's cattleyas are looking well. He also has a nice crop of Cypripedium Leeanum. A new carnation house contains a fine holiday crop of Pink Delight, Fair Maid, Winsor and White Perfection.

Arthur Griffin, of Woburn, who only recently left private gardening for commercialism, is sending in a splendid lot of Enchantress, Fair Maid, Beacon and Winsor carnations to the Boston Coöperative Market.

John W. Foote, of Reading, grows the finest Bouvardia Humboldtii it has been my privilege to see. The stems run from twenty-four to thirty-six inches and bunches of a dozen sell quickly at $1 to $2 each to the back bay stores. Mr. Foote devotes one large house to this fine bouvardia in benches and, like everything else he handles, grows it well. H. T. Capers, at 2 Park street, handles Mr. Foote's cut.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, one of our plant wizards, has purchased eleven acres of land in Revere and will soon start the erection of a big block of plant houses. We have no finer plant grower than Mr. Roland and anything he undertakes is well done.

Edward MacMulkin, on Boylston street, has for the Christmas trade an unusually fine assortment of azaleas, poinsettias, Lorraines, ericas and other flowering plants, also fine Cattleya Trianæ. The bulk of these are grown at Mr. MacMulkin's own greenhouses at Norfolk Downs.

Visitors last week included J. J. Karins, representing Henry A. Dreer, and Mr. Hall, of Hall & Robinson, of Montreal.

Quite a number of flowers in Philip L. Carbone's windows are already suggestive of spring, including wall flowers, calendulas and pansies. He has a fine lot of Ardisia crenulata, beautifully berried. His lavender sweet peas are unusually good.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, will be cutting quite a variety of French tulips and narcissi within a day or two and will have a fine cut of these for the holidays. Dutch La Reine tulips are also nearly ready.

Miss Ivy Wheeler, daughter of James Wheeler, of Natick and late of Brookline, will be married December 15 to William J. Arbus, of Dorchester, at the Baptist church, Brookline.

Remember the meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, December 20. There will be a lot of interesting business and this being election night a large attendance is assured.

Ernest H. Borowski, of Roslindale, who is one of the best growers of pot plants for the Boston market, has a superb lot of Lorraine begonias, beautiful specimens, of which he is already nearly sold out.

John McFarland, of North Easton, has his usual excellent lot of poinsettias in 6-inch pots for Christmas. He is at present cutting an unusually good lot of valley.

Donald Carmichael, of Wellesley, at the Boston Coöperative Flower Market has a grade of carnations which are hard to beat for quality. They include some excellent seedlings of Mr. Carmichael's raising. W. N. Craig.

Davenport, Ia.—J. W. Davis has been sick for three months with typhoid fever and complications, but is now able to be around again.

Princeton, Minn.—W. G. Fredericks is building a greenhouse, in which he will grow both flowers and vegetables. W. C. Middlebrook has gone out of the business.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

The buying public is busy spending its big round dollars for Christmas presents and, as a consequence, is neglecting the usual round of social gaieties that take up a great deal of our commodity. This is the usual pre-holiday state of affairs. Still, business is by no means dull. The regular orders from the local stores and the heavy out-of-town buying about clean up everything worth while. Prices in almost all lines are stiffening.

As a whole, there is a sufficiency of roses of all kinds, with stock increasing in quantity and white moving most slowly. The varieties offered are Killarney and White Killarney, Bride, Bridesmaid, Taft, Ivory, Richmond, Rhea Reid, Jardine and Beauties. The supply of Beauties is ample for all demands.

Carnations are comparatively scarce. The prices in this line are advancing and advices of prospects for the immediate future are not a bit encouraging. Other lines are about sufficient for requirements, with the exception of single violets. The cloudy weather is doing its best to put this flower out of running for the holidays. They are, however, coming in a little more strongly than for some time. A sufficient quantity of double violets is offered to meet requests. Last week the market for them was slow, but the early part of this week shows a decided advance in demand. Longiflorum, narcissus and stevia are more plentiful than they were and help nicely in rounding out the general supply. Lily of the valley is a regular factor. Boxwood, owing to the absence of lycopodium and the consequent shifting of demand toward it, is becoming scarce. It is shipped out as fast as it arrives. The supply of other greens is ample. The Christmas decorative greens are of good quality this year. Holly is well berried and laurel roping was never cleaner.

Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society was held at the club rooms December 12. The flower show committee's report was enthusiastically received by the members present. In less than five minutes $4,000 was subscribed toward the $10,000 guarantee fund for the flower show to be held next autumn. With the spirit shown by those present and the cooperation of the other members of the society, the affair should be an unqualified success.

The club accepted the invitation of William Murphy to meet for the next regular meeting at his wholesale place. Mr. Murphy and C. E. Critchell will furnish refreshments for a general housewarming after the business meeting.

Various Notes.

P. J. Olinger has had Michael Matchen, of Peter Reinberg's establishment, look over the heating circulation at his greenhouses at New Castle. When asked about business, Mr. Olinger said: "Fine. I clean up every day. My Killarneys are some of the best I have ever seen."

Robert Buck & Co., of Washington C. H., O., have been sending some fine mums and snapdragons to C. E. Critchell.

C. C. Murphy is right in line with a large supply of carnations for Christmas. His houses of his seedling red will be in full crop at that time, no matter what conditions are between now and then.

Gustav Meier, of the Hyde Park Rose Co., is seriously ill with bronchial pneumonia.

F. J. Farney, representing M. Rice & Co., and Martin Reukauf, representing Bayersdorfer & Co., were both in town December 12.

The bowlers will meet Monday, December 19, at Finke & Craig's. C. E. Critchell has offered a box of cigars to the individual making the highest average on Monday, in the two championship games. The two Als, Al Sunderbruch and Al Heckman, have been "kidded" so much on being "bunch bowlers," and on having a streak of extraordinary luck, that they are out with a challenge to bowl any other two men of the bowling club a series of games for pleasure or a consideration.

Rutland, Vt.—G. E. Hunt has a good opinion of the carnation, Fair Maid. He considers it freer than Enchantress, a good shipper and the best of all in the light pink shades.

De Land, Fla.—It is reported that Dr. Henri Dux, of Germany, recently located here, will establish a plant for preserving foliage of ornamental plants and shrubbery and will ship this north to be used for decorations. The doctor has discovered a process by which the natural color of leaves can be preserved indefinitely and at present will use principally the palmetto and magnolia for that purpose.

NEW YORK

The Market.

We are having real winter weather. The cut flower market had a healthful tone all last week. There have not been larger shipments than the market could digest and prices have remained at a reasonable level, and a little lower than a year ago. The mum shipments are practically over. It has been a long season for them and the public seems satiated. There are a few Chadwicks, Eatons and Bonnaffons yet, but all of any value are sold before arrival.

Violets were abundant all the week and the quotations December 10 fell to 60 and 50 cents. It is likely 75 cents will be top until a few days before Christmas. Some wholesalers are contracting to deliver violets for Christmas at $1.25 per hundred. Others think this too liberal a figure and predict a shortage, because so many growers in Rhinebeck now ship direct to customers in the smaller cities and give New York the cold shoulder. A good many growers are shipping as lightly as possible.

Beauties are as much in demand as ever. The banquet season is on and these are always the favorite dinner decoration. Rose stock of all kinds is now superb. Prices are rising slowly. My Maryland grows in popularity. Richmond is in wider demand and will reach a record mark for Christmas.

Carnations are rising. The novelties bring 6 cents readily; 4 cents was general for all the older varieties of merit. There is nothing under 2 cents in the market. Doubtless choice stock will bring 8 cents shortly.

The outlook now is for a sufficiency of orchids. There are many growers around New York and many wholesalers are handling them. The price held at $1 last week for cattleyas. Cypripediums could not rise above $12 per hundred. Valley is firm at 4 cents for the best. Gardenias, when selected, bring $5 per dozen. Callas are worth 12 cents to 15 cents, and Harrisii advanced to 10 cents and 12 cents and will even do better for the holidays. There is an abundance of rubrums. The market is still flooded with stevia and sweet peas, hyacinths and narcissi.

Smilax and asparagus show an oversupply, especially smilax. A good deal of it went as low as 50 cents per dozen strings. Princess pine is scarce; 15 cents a pound is offered for it, but no one seems to have it for sale. Holly is selling for $5 per case and will go higher when it has the quality. Christmas trees are here, many thousands of bundles, but prices are firmer than usual. The outlook is bright for a merry Christmas for grower, wholesaler and retailer.

Club Meeting.

The contest for the presidency, December 12, resulted in the closest vote in the history of the New York Florists' Club, J. B. Nugent defeating Joseph A. Manda by one vote. Other officers elected were: Vice-president, Harry A. Bunyard; secretary, John Young; treasurer, W. C. Rickards; trustees, F. H. Traendly, C. H. Totty, Charles Weber, I. S. Hendrickson. The election was conducted by Walter Sheridan, William Duckham and Joseph Fenrich, as tellers. The election of vice-president and secretary was unanimous, other nominees withdrawing.

The committee to further state legislation for greenhouses at Cornell was appointed as follows: P. O'Mara, chairman; J. A. Shaw, secretary; C. H. Totty, Eugene Dailledouze, W. E. Marshall, C. Weber and A. H. Langjahr. A letter from W. F. Kasting said that an appropriation bill has been prepared for early presentation to the assembly at Albany. Frank H. Wilshire and J. F. Slimon were elected to membership and with Mr. Blomburg and Mr. Reuter pledged their loyalty. The outing committee was discharged with a rising vote of thanks. Messrs. Weathered, Traendly and Bunyard were appointed a committee to draft resolutions on the death of the brother of the Manda boys.

The display of roses and carnations was the most interesting of the year. E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was present and staged vases of Rose Queen and Sunburst, each of which was scored ninety points and awarded a preliminary certificate. Mrs. Aaron Ward by the same exhibitor was given the thanks of the club. F. R. Pierson brought two vases of his new rose, Improved Killarney, and was given eighty-seven points and a preliminary certificate. C. H. Totty was awarded ninety points and a preliminary certificate for Carnation White House and received the club's thanks for Carnation Princess Charming, which had previously received the certificate. W. A. Manda staged his new unnamed red seedling begonia in several sizes and received the club's thanks. Charles Lenker staged some of his fine double stevia and was awarded a cultural certificate.

Interesting addresses were made by Mr. Hill, Mr. Pierson, P. O'Mara, C. H. Totty, W. A. Manda, Robert Schultz, Robert Berry, Robert Simpson and Henry Weissman. Mr. Hill was especially entertaining and said a better spirit of appreciation of new roses and other flowers is manifest and that greater encouragement is being given those who originate and disseminate them. He told of his European travels and described the methods of rosarians there and of the behavior of American varieties on that side.

During the recess the new president, who had served long and faithfully as chairman of the house committee, served a turkey luncheon.

Harry A. Bunyard.
(Elected Vice-President of the New York Florists' Club.)

Various Notes.

Never have finer blooming plants been seen than the supply at College Point, Flatbush, Jersey and among the Long Island growers this season, azaleas, poinsettias, ericas, camellias, cyclamens, orange trees, and all at their best. Every retailer has already made his selections. There will be none unsold the night before Christmas.

J. K. Allen has his usual big display of poinsettias in pans, grown by Charles Hunt, of Staten Island. He received the first shipment of the Clarence Mackay light pink carnation last Wednesday, and says its keeping quality exceeds any other variety.

L. W. C. Tuthill is back from his western trip, much enthused by the wonderful promise of prosperity he found everywhere he visited around Chicago. The Lord & Burnham new plant at Des Plaines is about ready for the anticipated boom.

Few retail florists ever have celebrated the sixty-first birthday of their firm. But this is what David Clarke's Sons are doing this month.

A. L. Miller will be kept busy in presidential work in 1911. No sooner does he retire from the chair of the New York Florists' Club than the plant growers confer upon him their place of honor.

The F. R. Pierson Co. is cutting large crops of American Beauty and Killarney.

The Cottage Gardens Co. is sending fine Mrs. Alma Ward to the New York Cut Flower Co., where Joseph Millang holds sway.

Kessler Bros. have their two stores filled to capacity with Christmas plants and palms and ferns. Their cut flower department is growing rapidly. They say there is a fine demand for Dreyerii.

Moore, Hentz & Nash's importation of English mistletoe is going fast. Mr. Nash now wishes he had brought over from his "hold 'ome" 500 cases.

This is Charles Millang's twenty-sixth year in the wholesale cut flower business. With every inch of space in his store utilized, he says he is doing the business of his life this season.

Born under a lucky star, M. A. Bowe finds his two stores just what he needed for his big Christmas trade. His headquarters still are 1294 Broadway. He says he has already booked enough Christmas orders to keep an ordinary flower store busy until January.

The venerable Henry Arthur Baker is again a member of the force of H. E. Froment, who says there will be plenty of stock next week.

August Millang maintains daily a window decoration that compares favorably with any on Broadway.

One of the prettiest conceptions of the season is the gilded bamboo baskets invented by the Forster Mansfield Mfg. Co. Mr. Beauplaine, the manager, is a genius at such work.

George Saltford says he will sell over 200,000 violets Christmas week. There are over forty wholesalers in New York and every one sells violets. Figure up how many will be used in the big city.

George Cotsonas says the princess pine shortage is a serious one. Other greens are abundant. The supply department of the firm is doing a big business, as expected. It is the only Greek florists' supply house in America and the Greeks are fraternal.

M. C. Ford says he does not recall a time in his long experience when stock was of better quality, especially carnations and Beauties.

The big store of the Kervan Co. is now complete. Mr. Kervan, Sr., and his three sons make a competent quartette, and they have built a fine home for the business.

John J. Perkins has opened his wholesale place on West Twenty-eighth street and looks good for another thirty years.

At the annual meeting of the New York and New Jersey Association of Plant Growers December 6, the election of officers resulted as follows: President, A. L. Miller, of Brooklyn; vice-president, Herman Schoelzel, of New Durham, N. J.; treasurer, Herman C. Steinhoff, of Hoboken; secretary, William H. Siebrecht, Jr., of New York; directors, C. W. Scott, of the Hinode Florist Co. and the Yokohama Nursery Co., John H. Fiesser, of North Bergen, N. J., David McKenzie, executor of estate of John Scott, of Brooklyn.

Wertheimer Bros. report the heaviest mail in the history of their business and state that an extremely large local telephone trade also is being done.

Mr. Westwood has bought out his partner in the firm of Mengham & Westwood, on upper Broadway.

As the Christmas rush draws near Walter Sheridan and Traendly & Schenck come to full appreciation of the value of the increased space in their new quarters.

W. G. Badgley, of Madison, who is a member of the commission firm of Badgley, Riedel & Meyer, now comes to town nearly every day, to lend a hand to his partners.

John Foley, manager for Lecakes & Co., is seriously ill, just when his duties are most pressing.

J. W. Merritt, the Brooklyn supply man, says his out-of-town trade has quadrupled during 1910.

E. W. Wiles, Brooklyn green goods man, has a large force of extra help making roping.

J. J. Coan, manager of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., says business has doubled in 1910.

Frank H. Traendly is the new president of the New York Wholesale Florists' Protective Association.

William Duckham, of Madison, has returned from a hunting expedition in the north woods.

P. J. Smith says the lily is no longer the special flower of Easter; he will market nearly as many in December as in April this year.

The Aphine Mfg. Co., of Madison, has added Fungine to its repertoire.

John Young.

(Re elected Secretary of the New York Florists' Club for the Steenth Term.)

Bowling.

The match between New York and Astoria December 9 was won by the Long Islanders by only fifteen pins, as follows:

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The fact that we are in the midst of the most beautiful winter weather one could imagine, with the ground covered with snow most of the time since Thanksgiving and the thermometer registering as low as 8 degrees above zero one night last week, will satisfy you that the growers are burning up about as much money as the few carnations they are cutting will bring in. One grower says he has only had the steam out of his pipes once in the last month.

As Christmas approaches and the short carnation cut stares the grower in the face, it does not look quite as cheerful as he would wish. Business, however, continued good last week, with just about enough demand to use up everything that comes in, and that includes about everything that is grown anywhere. Saturday night every wholesale house had cleaned up at good prices.

The retailers have been quite busy all the week. An exceptional amount of funeral work, along with the great number of large social functions, gave them almost more than they could do, and Saturday called for every flower in the city.

Christmas trees are coming in, as well as some extremely poor holly, which it is claimed is as good as will be gotten this year. The unexpected heavy snows and sleet in the boxwood districts have delayed the shipments of this green, for which there is now constant demand.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club met in the Dutch room, Fort Pitt hotel, December 6, with P. S. Randolph in the chair. After the usual business had been disposed of, the exhibits were taken up.

S. S. Pennock Meehan Co. sent Melody and Double Killarney, two of the best things seen in a long time. The Double Killarney is a good Killarney—that should be enough, but it is also much more double than the one that sounded the death knell of other pink roses and showed to the best advantage when it was full-blown.

John Featherstone, gardener for H. J. Heinz, exhibited fine cyclamens and Begonia Glory of Cincinnati.

David Fraser, gardener for H. C. Frick, showed white begonias of the Lorraine class. All admired them, but thought them hard to get to perfection.

Randolph & McClements showed Begonia Agatha. Mr. Randolph says that Glory of Cincinnati is good enough to take the place of all the others, but he just has to grow a lot of Agatha—it is such easy money. He also called attention to plants of Adiantum Farleyense, which so many have said cannot be well grown about Pittsburg for some reason; these were from a lot of about 1,000, grown by a 16-year-old boy who has charge of one of his houses.

In the midst of it all the telephone rang and called N. McCallum home, as his home was on fire, but before we left he telephoned it was only the chimney, and no harm was done, which made all present more comfortable.

T. P. Langhans, for his share, called attention to a number of novelties, all advertised in The Review: Pine Cone, a fine Christmas novelty; Yetter's Security Staple, so useful in holding cut flowers and designs in boxes; Binley's Cut Flower Holders.

There were a number of others who had exhibits, including two exhibits of growing mushrooms, and the evening was so well enjoyed that it was proposed to continue the idea of each one bringing something and saying something.

Various Notes.

Mr. McClements, of Randolph & McClements, has been having a strenuous season of decorations, but had to give up in the middle of one last week. He was assisted home by one of his men, but after a couple of days in bed he was back in the push Saturday.

H. L. Blind & Bros. are having much the best season they have ever known. Both stores are showing such an increase in business that Mr. Blind has been looking for additional help, fearing that those on hand may reach the limit before the holidays really set in.

Hoo-Hoo.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

The florists were last week experiencing the customary lull before the holiday rush sets in. A few days more and it will be almost impossible to meet the demands. Cut flowers, while not a drug, are certainly not a big seller at present, but it is whispered that there will be a scarcity at Christmas. Prices, which stiffened about a week ago, have been maintained and another advance is expected in a few days, with the usual holiday jump to follow shortly. A few small social functions and weddings call for occasional work and funeral work helps to keep things moving. The growers are busy preparing for their shipments of potted stock in about another week and the store men are simply waiting.

Last week made a hard pull on the coal piles and the growers have had to be on the alert to guard against frozen pipes or chilled stock. With the thermometers playing around 20 degrees below zero, extra precautions are called for. On Friday, December 9, the record low mark was reached, reports from various parts of the state showing the following marks below zero: Wood River Junction, 20; Carolina, 19; Shannock, 14; Rickland, 14; Wickford Station, 12; Kingston, 11; Woodville, 11; Kenyon, 10; Woonsocket, 14.

William C. Rickards.

(Elected Treasurer of the New York Florists' Club.)

Various Notes.

Bernard J. Conroy, of the Pawtucket Floral Store, 353 Main street, Pawtucket, reports good funeral business during the last month.

Mr. Blaisdell, of Fall River, is bringing in some of the finest sweet peas ever seen in this market at this time of the year.

Daniel E. Newell, of Attleboro, Mass., was in the city a few days ago and states that he intends erecting a new greenhouse 150 feet in length in the spring.

Joseph Kopelman has just put up an attractive electric sign in front of his place at 25 Washington street.

Albert L. Warner, of Pawtucket, is bringing in some fine asparagus, both plumosus and Sprengeri.

The regular meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island will be held at the rooms, 98 Westminster street, this city, Monday evening, December 19.

William B. King, of Apponaug, had a number of large pieces for a funeral December 12. He reports good business.

F. E. Saunders, 25 Burnett street, is taking many large orders for Christmas greens.

One of the fine delivery wagons belonging to T. J. Johnston & Co., Edward Brooks, manager, was struck by an electric car a few days ago and badly damaged. No one was injured.

John Johnston, of Johnston Bros., was in Boston and vicinity December 7 and 8, ordering plants for the Christmas trade.

C. H. McAndrews has resigned his position with George Johnson & Sons at the Elmwood Nurseries, and has started in business for himself on Public street, having purchased the greenhouses of Mrs. Gilbert O. Westcott.

A number of florists and gardeners were among the candidates for various offices at the election held in Newport last week. Among those most known were Alexander MacLellan, Wm. H. Maher, and several others.

T. J. Johnston & Co. had several small dinner decorations at the Crown hotel last week.

William E. Chappell had two Masonic dinner decorations, including furnishing potted plants, last week.

Louis Petri, who went to Washington, D. C., about a year ago, is in the city for a short vacation visit.

Visitors—J. J. Karins, of H. A. Dreer, of Philadelphia; Mr. Crosby, of Franklin & Crosby, Danbury, Conn.; Mr. Zirkman, of M. Rice & Co., of Philadelphia, and William J. Stewart, of Boston.

W. H. M.

OBITUARY.

W. A. Appleton.

William A. Appleton, of Providence, R. I., died December 7 at his home on Tobey street. He had been ill since last March, suffering from a complication of kidney troubles. He was well known in New England as a landscape gardener and horticulturist, as well as a florist. He was born in Providence in 1855 and attended the public schools there and in Pawtucket. When 18 years old he entered the employ of Walter Hogg, at the greenhouses on Benefit street. He next worked under Superintendent Timothy McCarthy, at Swan Point cemetery, for several years, finally becoming head gardener. He bought out the business of Robert Hogg, at 294 Broadway, in February, 1888, and had since conducted a flourishing business at that place. He was a former president of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, of which he was one of the charter members. His son, Eugene Appleton, is now vice-president of the club, and during his father's illness was in charge of the flower business. Mr. Appleton was also vice-president of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, and until his illness of last March was in charge of the benching of the flower shows given by that society. He also acted as judge at horticultural exhibitions throughout New England. He is survived by a widow, six sons, three daughters, five sisters and two brothers.

Joseph F. Klimmer.

The illness of Joseph F. Klimmer, the well known Chicago florist, whose greenhouses are at Forest Park, terminated fatally December 12. Mr. Klimmer was 56 years old, and had been engaged in the business at Chicago many years. His first enterprise was a retail store on Madison street, near the intersection of Halsted, which in 1880 was, comparatively speaking, on the outskirts of town. Along about 1885 he opened a store at what was then 548 West Madison street, subsequently occupied and conducted for years by H. F. Halle. At about 1889 Mr. Klimmer removed to Forest Park, a western suburb, where he did a retail business, but at the same time grew cut flowers for the Chicago market. He was a man of keen perception and early came to appreciate that the man who was getting the money was the one who was just a little ahead with his crops—ahead either in time, or in quality, or both. He therefore made it a point to see that the flowers he marketed were second to none and that he had his crops ahead of the general run. As a recent instance showing his method, it may be cited that he was the first grower to produce Golden Glow chrysanthemum in quantity in late summer for his market, and that he promptly dropped it as soon as everybody else took it up. Coupled with his powers of observation was a forceful style of expressing his ideas, and no better entertainment could be wished than was afforded on those occasions when Mr. Klimmer could be drawn to his feet at the meetings of the Chicago Florists' Club, of which he was for some years a trustee.

At Forest Park Mr. Klimmer was a leading citizen, having served for seven terms as the president of the town board. He leaves a widow, two daughters and one son, Frank Klimmer, who has been associated with his father in the business. The funeral was held at the residence Thursday, December 15, and was largely attended, interment being at Forest Home cemetery.

Oscar L. Dorr.

Oscar L. Dorr, of Sharon Heights, Mass., one of the largest and most successful commercial vegetable growers, died December 9 from a shock. Mr. Dorr made a specialty of cucumbers, which he grew extensively under glass. He also followed other branches of market gardening with great success. For some years he was a large and successful grower of double violets, his flowers being handled in Boston by Thomas Pegler. The deceased was in his sixty-ninth year.

Joseph F. Klimmer.

Robert Buist.

Robert Buist, one of the oldest, wealthiest and most widely known seedsmen in America, died of pneumonia at his home at Philadelphia, December 14.

A. Koster.

According to the European trade press, there died, October 13, at Boskoop, in Holland, A. Koster, aged 80 years. About thirty years ago he found among his seedlings of Picea pungens the fine form of P. pungens Kosteriana, with blue needles, which has meanwhile been distributed over the whole temperate parts of the world. The deceased was famed for his rhododendron hybrids, crosses of R. Chinense (molle) which bore his name and earned him many prizes. He worked 800 hectares of land and must have sent out many millions of trees and shrubs. The mother plant of Picea pungens glauca Kosteriana still exists on the edge of a broad ditch in the Boskoop nursery.

Joseph Pennar.

Joseph Pennar, of Alexandria, Minn., died at his home November 24, after a lingering illness of heart trouble and complications, caused primarily by an injury received in a railroad accident six years ago, while he was engaged in the mail service. Though he was not, strictly speaking, a member of the florists' trade, yet he was practically as well as financially interested in the flower business conducted by his wife at Alexandria.

Archibald Small.

Gored by the tusks of an infuriated Berkshire boar at his stock farm near Forest Glen, Md., Archibald Small died December 6, after lingering three days. The funeral was held at Silver Springs, December 8, interment being at Oakville cemetery.

Archibald Small was born in Georgetown, D. C., August 2, 1863. His father, the late John H. Small, was for years gardener at Windsor Castle, the home of Queen Victoria, and became, at Washington and New York, one of the best known retail florists in the United States. Archibald Small, who was the first to die of a family of nine children, was for a time in the retail flower business on upper Broadway in New York, but had some years since retired, to give his entire time to stock breeding interests at Providence Farm, in Maryland. He was not a member of the firm of J. H. Small & Sons, though widely known in the trade. A widow survives.

Mrs. I. P. Whittet.

Mrs. Isabella P. Whittet, wife of Alexander Whittet, of Lowell, Mass., died December 3, in her home at 31 Wentworth avenue. She had been ill with heart trouble since last August, although at times she had sufficiently recovered to be able to go out of doors. She was born Isabella Proudfoot, in Perth, Scotland, in 1840. She came to Lowell as a young woman and in January, 1867, was married to Alexander Whittet. Mr. and Mrs. Whittet had ever since made their home in Lowell. She is survived by her husband, three sons, former Alderman William D. Whittet, Charles A. Whittet, superintendent of parks, and Rufus M. Whittet, assistant engineer for the state board of health.

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Lead, S. D.—Phil Ryan, formerly of New Castle, Pa., is now with T. W. McDonald, in this city.

Waterford Works, N. J.—Charles H. Ballier has purchased the greenhouses of Frank Thomas and will continue the business.

La Porte, Ind.—W. C. Kaber states that he is no longer connected with the Kaber Co., and is contemplating removing to the south.

Burlington, Ia.—The Burlington Floral Co. has opened a retail store at 216 North Fourth street. The store will be under the management of John G. Hamelman.

Kansas City, Kan.—Two negroes recently made an unsuccessful attempt to rob T. A. Moseley, the florist at 848 Barnett avenue, but Mr. Moseley ran away from them.

Elm Grove, W. Va.—At Cumberland, Md., December 12, occurred the wedding of Leon S. Hines and Miss Mary La Velle. The groom is with the John Dieckman Co., of this place.

Shelbina, Mo.—Mrs. Kathryn H. Brenneman, formerly of Broadway, Va., recently made a visit to Virginia and reports a most enjoyable time there climbing the mountains, and says they were snow-capped when she left there, December 2.

Ravenna, O.—Chappell & Son, of Garrettsville, have purchased seven acres of land adjoining the Ravenna fair grounds. The coming summer they will remove their entire establishment here. They will add new houses as occasion requires.

Marshalltown, Ia.—The Western Grocer Co. Mills is building a greenhouse and coldframes, in which to grow its own stock of tomato and cabbage plants. The company has also leased some farm land, which will be partly used for the outdoor culture of the same crops.

Green Bay, Wis.—Martin Goerger, foreman for Charles De Clerc, sailed December 10 on the steamer New Amsterdam, to visit his home at Alsace-Lorraine, Germany. He expected to spend Christmas with his parents, and later to call at various places of interest in the country.

Piqua, O.—William Gerlach has purchased the interest of William Frisch in the business of Frisch & Carpenter, on Washington avenue, and the firm will hereafter be known as Gerlach & Carpenter. For the last six years Mr. Gerlach has been with Honaker the Florist, in Lexington, Ky., as carnation and violet specialist.

Alamosa, Colo.—D. W. Watson is starting in the florists' business here.

Sycamore, Ill.—William Swinbank furnished several handsome floral pieces for the funeral of Carl Gorgensen.

Overbrook, Pa.—Richard Edmondson, whose partnership in Edmondson & Fenton, at Darby, has been dissolved, is moving the greenhouses to this place.

Cleveland, O.—The Floral Homestead Coöperative Co. has been incorporated, with a capital of $30,000, by C. H. Knight and others.

Clinton, Mass.—Robert Brydon, formerly with E. W. Breed, in this city, has gone to Orlando, Fla., to enter the employment of a florist there.

Randolph, Vt.—H. M. Totman has added to his greenhouses, on Elm street, a storage shed, 20x50 feet, with coal pockets and a subway connecting it with the boiler room.

Waynesboro, Pa.—Henry Eichholz has distributed and is using a post card which shows his new light pink carnation, Princess Charming, as near the natural color as the printing art can get.

Utica, N. Y.—The greenhouses of William Mathews, at the corner of York and Warren streets, were slightly damaged by fire December 1, but the flames were confined chiefly to the boiler room, where they originated.

Shiremanstown, Pa.—John F. Rupp has sold the greenhouse end of his business to Mervin S. Etter, who will continue the growing of Chinese primroses as his specialty. Mr. Rupp, however, will retain the seed department as heretofore.

Racine, Wis.—Fire almost completely destroyed Clark E. Adams' greenhouse at 3009 Washington avenue, Friday night, December 9. The flames were caused by overheated hot water pipes and for a time the residence, which stands in front of the greenhouse, was threatened. No insurance was carried and Mr. Adams will suffer a heavy loss, as he was just getting in his Christmas stock.

El Campo, Tex.—Mrs. J. E. Wheeler, whose greenhouses were wrecked in July, 1909, has entirely rebuilt the range, which now consists of four houses, 15x50 feet each. Mrs. Wheeler reports having some mums recently that compared favorably with those she received from Chicago. She grows two crops, spring and fall, of cosmos, dahlias, etc., and says: "My dahlias last May stood eight feet high, with flowers nine inches and more across and stems twelve to sixteen inches long."

Owatonna, Minn.—A. J. Skalicky is planning to build three new rose houses next summer, each 30x200 feet.

Brookline, Mass.—James Quinn says he has no kick coming, especially since the advent of cold weather. His stock looks good and there is plenty of it.

Brookline, Mass.—F. E. Palmer says Jack Frost caught him with a rush of outside planting to be finished. The landscape department has greatly increased of late. He finds his early training as a draftsman comes in handy now.

Lockport, N. Y.—Charles L. Dole recently opened his new store at 88 Main street and large crowds were attracted by the fine display made. The entire store was arranged to give the appearance of a garden and was well stocked with all the up-to-date novelties in baskets, plants, cut flowers, ribbons, chiffons, etc.

Cambridge, Mass.—John McKenzie has fully recovered from his long spell of sickness and is back again at the old stand. He has a grand batch of Lorraine begonias and also of J. A. Peterson's variety, Glory of Cincinnati. The latter is a fine plant and looks hardy; it has large flowers and foliage and will prove a good seller.

Garrettsville, O.—H. J. Alford is planning to build a greenhouse. Last summer he shipped large quantities of gladiolus spikes and found them the most profitable crop on his farm. He expects to cut at least 30,000 next season, besides having quantities of bulbs for sale. He is a recruit from the ranks of the commercial travelers, set on the right road by M. Crawford.

Rhinelander, Wis.—The greenhouses of Peter Philipp, on North Brown street, were partly destroyed by fire December 1. The boiler room and the back part of two houses were burned and a large proportion of the stock was ruined. At the time of this disaster Mrs. Philipp was in St. Mary's hospital, to which she had been taken a few weeks previously on account of a serious attack of pneumonia. At last report she was convalescent.

Portland, Ind.—W. Frank & Sons will at once begin work on an addition of three greenhouses, each 31x390. The houses are to be of modern cypress construction. One thousand boxes of glass will be needed to glaze the houses; 40,000 feet of pecky cypress will be used for the benches; 2,000 18-foot sash bars will be used for the roof, and there will be 300 ventilator sashes for roof ventilation on the three houses. The John C. Moninger Co., of Chicago, will furnish the material.

Entered as second class matter December 8, 1897, at the post-office at Chicago, Ill., under the act of March 3, 1879.

This paper is a member of the Chicago Trade Press Association.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Cold weather is imposing many difficulties for all branches of the trade.

With bouquet green scarce, extra demand is turned to wild smilax and boxwood.

There is no dearth of new roses this season; and some exceptionally good ones among them.

All sorts of Christmas greens are scarce in the west this season: Lycopodium, boxwood, even moss wreaths.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, have been sustained in a protest at the rate of duty recently assessed on a large importation of moss wreaths.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

After outside forms were off the press McGregor Bros. Co., Springfield, O., advised that a stenographic error had occurred in their advertising copy, making it read 3-inch, where 4-inch was intended.

Although larger stocks than ever were prepared of all the popular Christmas plants, the demand has been so strong that azaleas, poinsettias, and to a somewhat less extent, cyclamens, already are pretty well sold out of wholesale hands.

This is the largest Christmas Number The Review ever has sent out—largest in number of pages and largest in number of copies printed, for circulation is growing even faster than advertising patronage. The white paper consumed in printing this issue weighed within a few pounds of five tons.

CHICAGO IS FLOWER CENTER.

Under the above caption the Chicago Tribune, in its commercial supplement December 14, prints the following by Ald. Peter Reinberg:

"In 1910 Chicago wholesale florists have maintained the city's standing as America's greatest flower center. Chicago flowers go every day to Winnipeg, Texas, Pittsburg, Omaha, hundreds of other points within that radius, and frequently to places still farther afield.

"The development of smaller flower centers at various points within the territory served from Chicago has not affected the Chicago market. The fact is the public appreciation and consumption of flowers has increased faster than the population, so that Chicago florists have had to keep steadily adding to their glass area to supply the need. Probably three-quarters to four-fifths of the great quantity of flowers produced in Chicago greenhouses are shipped to retail florists in other cities.

"Ten per cent increase over 1909 sales would be a conservative estimate for 1910. In this year of general complaint of high cost of living it is worth while noting that the values of flowers steadily are falling. Probably in a majority of cases the person who buys in the retail flower store pays the same old price, but gets much finer flowers. Such splendid roses and carnations, the two great staples of the trade, as Chicago now produces in enormous quantity were unknown ten years ago.

"Chicago's large volume of business in the distribution of flowers has in part been due to the city's superior transportation facilities, but is mainly the result of the unrivaled quality of Chicago flowers; Chicago florists have led the march of progress in their trade and the superior excellence of their product is recognized wherever flowers are grown, sold or admired."

IT PAYS TO PUSH.

The secretary of the American Gladiolus Society says it pays to advertise in The Review. This is what he wrote:

The advertisement gave me splendid results, but the weather is so cold that I have had to stop further shipments. Discontinue the advertisement, but you will hear from me further. L. Merton Gage, Orange, Mass., December 8, 1910.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business has been and is excellent. The only complaint any retailer has to make is that cut flowers are costing him more than he likes, and the only complaint any wholesaler has to record is that cut flowers are scarcer than he wishes they were. Shipping trade and local business are on a par—both are good.

The demand is so strong that there is no surplus of flowers in any line, but the nearest approach to it is in long Beauties and the special lengths of other roses. Usually at this date prices on long Beauties have stiffened, in anticipation of Christmas, but this year the reverse has been the rule. Splendid cuts have been on so early that nothing could be done toward holding back, and the supply has been so large that some of the big buyers have been picking up rare bargains, considering that it is the second week in December. The quality of Beauties never has been better and it is predicted that crops for Christmas will beat all previous records.

In the rose department there is an abundance of the better grades and a shortage of the cheaper stock. Considering that the medium length of roses brings a normal price, short roses are commanding a premium and the finest grades are selling at a discount. The quality of stock is fine—too fine—for there are not enough buyers who, for every-day purposes, will pay above 10 cents to consume the quantities of stock that really is well worth the higher prices. There have been several days of bright, though cold, weather, and it has done much to put color into

WE NEVER HANDLED BETTER FLOWERS

Or so many as we shall have next week

Beauties, Killarney, Poinsettias, Carnations, Violets, Lilies--those are our leaders. We have splendid crops just right for the holiday--far the largest supply we ever have had and quality that never was equaled for Christmas. Business will be big with YOU if you use our stock. Order enough.

Beauties

WERE NEVER FINER THAN OURS

We never have seen a finer crop of Beauties than we now have—splendid color, large, perfect buds, fine foliage and all lengths of stem, but specially strong on long to medium. When you have tried these Beauties you will agree with us that nothing finer could be asked. We are in full crop. Write us today about your Christmas supply.

KILLARNEY

The Largest Heads on All Lengths.

Length for length of stem, our Killarneys carry the largest flowers we ever have seen on these roses. It is not alone on Killarney and White Killarney that we are strong—we can supply all other roses of excellent quality and in quantity. Splendid crops of Richmond and Maryland.

CARNATIONS

Our stock is widely known as always the most uniformly high quality large lot in this market. We have a fine crop on for Christmas.

DOUBLE VIOLETS SINGLE

We handle the cream of the crops of the Hudson river doubles, and they are fine. Also fragrant, home-grown singles that are the best the market affords.

We always have the Novelties, such as fancy Cattleyas, Bouvardia, Sweet Peas, Daisies, and every other flower that's in season.

A Large Cut of Fine Smilax Now on.

Fancy Valley and Easter Lilies

always on hand; can supply in quantity every day in the year.

the Killarney and tone up the rose crops generally. One scarcely could conceive of finer roses than those now being cut, and the growers almost unanimously report that crops are on the upgrade.

Carnations are slightly more abundant than they have been, but still are selling at splendid prices. While the quantity of carnations cut in the last month has not equaled the quantity cut in other years, the quality never was better. The man who wants the fancy grade has no trouble in being fixed up wherever he happens upon some unsold stock, but the man who is looking for cheap carnations for funeral work has his own troubles in locating his supply. White commands a premium. There is need for a good pink in the Lawson shade and wholesalers are recommending to growers that they try some of the novelties offered this season in this color.

The pressure of double violets noted last week has subsided. There continue to be adequate supplies, but not so many that the best grade does not clean up at first-class prices. In general, the quality of the New York violets also is better than usual. The local singles are not in large supply and are selling satisfactorily.

Poinsettias in quantity have been added to the list of miscellaneous flowers. They do not sell as well as the growers would like. Sweet peas are increasingly abundant and stems are lengthening. Chrysanthemums have practically disappeared, though a few whites occasionally come in. The demand for valley has subsided to some extent. Cattleyas continue scarce, and it is on record that a Wabash avenue retailer paid $5 for a spray of three fancy flowers December 12. Easter lilies are in short supply, but there are a few more callas. Stevia is abundant. Romans are now fairly plentiful and there are Paper Whites in abundance.

The shortage of bouquet green appears to be turning demand to boxwood. Many shipments are en route, but not much stock is on hand. It appears that red berries will be even scarcer than bouquet green and, as these have been largely used with the lower grades of holly, those who have booked orders find themselves in something of a dilemma.

Christmas Prospects.

In the wholesale market there is unusual unanimity as to the Christmas supply. There will be a large, fine lot of Beauties, a good crop of roses, enough violets, but a decided scarcity of carnations, almost everyone says. But certain buyers of long experience are assuring their supplies of Beauties and roses and leaving the carnations till later—to use a sporting term, they are coppering the bet.

It has happened more than once in recent years that what eventuated was just the reverse of what everybody predicted—the more unanimous the prediction, the more likely it was to turn out otherwise. With everybody booking orders freely for the article thought to be plentiful and holding off on the one thought to be scarce, accumulation of the latter was the natural result.

Demand this Christmas will be heavier than ever before—advance orders show that—but growers who are working up a cut of carnations will do well to remember that present prices for first-class whites are certainly as good as the prices sleepy flowers will command Christmas Eve.

Van Gelder, doing business as Percy Jones, the entire second floor of the building for the term of three years, at a rental of $4,300 a year. The present tenant is the Flower Growers' Market Co., from which Percy Jones has a sublease.

It has for some time been understood that Mr. Van Gelder was looking about for accommodations which would provide for increasing business. He now has secured these, and something to spare, but states that he has as yet made no arrangements for the disposition of the space he will not require, which is among the best in the wholesale section. The Flower Growers' Market Co. lease runs to May 1.

A New Ventilator.

The Foley Mfg. Co. recently has put up in one of the houses of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., at Morton Grove, a new ventilating apparatus, a patent on which has been applied for. P. J. Foley thinks he has in this the best development of recent years in the line of mechanical aids to the grower, asserting that repeated tests show speed of operation amounting to a saving of from one-half to two-thirds the time ordinarily required for raising the sash, while little strength is required to lift a long line of sash. He is preparing to go ahead with the manufacture and marketing of the apparatus on an extensive scale. The Foley Mfg. Co. has just taken the agency for the Giblin greenhouse boiler.

What's in a Name?

Shakespeare tells us that "a rose by any other name would smell as sweet," but that a good name is a fine business asset no one will deny. That many Chicago florists have good names is easily shown. For instance: Bohumil Vacha has a prosperous business at 2447 West Forty-seventh street, and Rozakles & Sgoros handle a lot of stock at 78 Madison. Then there are Peter Sroczynski, perhaps better known as Big Pete, whose gift for money-making is well known, and A. Kowalkowski, whose place is at 4339 Thomas street. If that were not enough, there is Erich Arlt and B. Zima, Paul Pavelchik, the Wolniewiczes, Vlk, and Raichart & Krejci, one and all men of good names—if some of them difficult to pronounce.

Various Notes.

At E. H. Hunt's the several departments are working overtime and C. M. Dickinson says it is the busiest season they have seen. W. E. Lynch has found time to visit a few growers and says favorable weather will mean great crops next week.

land Co., made a flying trip to Logansport, Ind., December 10, and was back on the job again at Des Plaines Monday morning. He says business is so good that considerable night work has been necessary.

G. H. Pieser, president of Kennicott Bros. Co., has taken his turn on the sick list, E. E. Pieser having returned to duty.

Probably the largest bunch of mistletoe ever seen in Chicago hangs in the store of the A. L. Randall Co., though the only ladies who venture near it are the ones who keep retail flower stores. A large sale for laurel wreathing is reported as a substitute for bouquet green.

E. F. Winterson Co. and Winterson's Seed Store have stocked heavily of boxwood and laurel wreathing, anticipating a big call as soon as the scarcity of lycopodium becomes recognized.

Frank Ayers, right-hand man for C. W. McKellar, returned to duty this week after several days' illness.

George Razakles, who keeps a flower store at 78 Madison street, is credited with having won $700 on a quail-eating contest, in which he was successful.

The building of an Illinois Central station at Monroe street now seems an immediate prospect, and will do much for the location of the Bohannon Floral Co.

When seen at Kyle & Foerster's December 10, Mr. Kidwell, of Kidwell & Ellsworth, said that they are preparing to erect a boarding house at Wellworth Farms, instead of adding to the glass this season. They hope to secure a switch for the handling of coal through giving the Burlington railroad the use of some land it needs. Cartage costs them $1 a ton and they use about twenty-five cars a season.

Hoerber Bros. are so well pleased with the way their crops have come on in the last few weeks, and with the way the business has been going, that they are again thinking of adding to their glass. The next addition will be ten houses, each 300 feet long, for Beauties, but it was not expected to do anything on them until one year hence.

George Pieser is assisting in the holiday rush at W. J. Smyth's.

Mr. Loeber, well known in the greenhouse building trades, is now with the Foley Mfg. Co.

M. C. Gunterberg is among those of the wholesalers who plan a little expansion for the near future, referring especially to an incursion into the shipping field.

C. A. Samuelson says business has been excellent for some time, but that it has been mostly funeral work, with much less than the usual social activity.

Mrs. George Hartung, wife of the Kensington florist, has been ill for several days.

Miss Josephine Then's picture as the girl detective was published in the Sunday papers because she caused the arrest of two men, whom she charged with stealing flowers from Anton Then's greenhouses.

The names of W. L. Hoerber and J. H. Hoerber appear in the lists of contributors to the United Charities.

John Michelsen, of the E. C. Amling Co., says Christmas orders far exceed those booked at this date in any previous year.

Bassett & Washburn grow only four varieties of carnations: Bassett, Winsor, Enchantress and White Enchantress. The latter are specially fine this season. They dropped White Perfection last year.

Leonard Kill is one of the incorporators of the Commercial Eucalyptus Co., a corporation with $75,000 capital.

John Kruchten says that the latter part of last week brought him the biggest run of shipping business he ever has had. Fred Klingel, who keeps the Kruchten books, has been on the sick list for several days.

The Allegretti Floral Co. has been incorporated by B. P. Barasa, A. S. Berdine and E. J. Rice, with a capital stock of $500.

Viola Mae Jones, daughter of A. L. Jones, well known as an onion set grower, and granddaughter of the late L. A. Budlong, became the bride, December 10, of Robert Leesley, nurseryman. Phil Schupp, who is manager of the selling end of the business of the late J. A. Budlong and that gentleman's son-in-law, was one of the large number who were present at the ceremony.

Zech & Mann have been offering a novelty that many of the retailers have picked up for window decoration. It consists of cut sprays of the kumquat, filled with the little, ripe orange-like fruits.

When seen at the store of Kennicott Bros. Co., December 12, Fred Schramm was congratulating himself on the promptness with which he procured a section to replace the front of his Furman boiler, which cracked one cold night last week. The Moninger Co. now carries a stock of these boilers in Chicago and repairs were made within twenty-four hours.

John Evert has had his best season with chrysanthemums. He had eight houses, all late varieties, and hit the best part of the market. His father, Mat Evert, had only early sorts, and now has a crop of radishes ready in the houses.

As an interesting side light, and a possible explanation of a number of things, August Poehlmann states that Poehlmann Bros. Co. used under its glass last season 182 carloads of manure. The statement of quantity also gives an idea how important a problem fertilizer supply is to a large grower.

Tim Matchen says Peter Reinberg's sales have been running steadily ahead of a year ago ever since the early part of November.

Robert Northam, at George Reinberg's, says the scarcity of short roses is worse than of white carnations.

SPRINGFIELD, O.

The regular meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club was held Monday evening, December 12, at the office of the Good & Reese Co. The paper of the evening was read by Burt C. Blake on the subject of "Leaks," which proved quite interesting as well as practical. Mr. Blake has had an extensive factory experience, in which he has had occasion to watch small details as affecting costs. An animated discussion followed, in which a great variety of leaks was freely conceded and various remedies suggested. A system of cost keeping introduced by Opha Jackson, in the growing department of the American Rose and Plant Co., aroused a lively discussion and a free interchange of ideas, the consensus of opinion being that among commercial growers of floral stock there is vast room for advancement along the line of modern methods.

We will be particularly strong for CHRISTMAS in ROSES,

BRIDES AND MAIDS

Our Roses grade higher than the average stock. One of our customers last year after Christmas wrote us: "YOUR PRICES FOR ROSES SEEMED HIGH, BUT HAD WE KNOWN THE QUALITY WE WOULD HAVE ORDERED MORE." We repeat this because it tells the story so well. Our supply of ROSES this year will exceed that of last season both in QUALITY and QUANTITY.

When we satisfy our customers at holidays year after year, and the list of customers shows a steady and substantial increase, "THERE IS A REASON FOR IT."

That satisfaction that goes along with our goods and service is not confined to any one day in the year, it means every day in the year.

In CARNATIONS we can offer you flowers of Alma Ward and Mrs. C. W. Ward, none better grown, and we have the largest supply of them in Philadelphia.

We will also have splendid stock of all the good varieties.

Our stock for CHRISTMAS will include a large supply of:

VALLEY,
VIOLETS, double and single,
POINSETTIAS,
SWEET PEAS,
PANSIES,
MIGNONETTE, STEVIA,
PAPER WHITES, etc.,

and a complete stock of GREENS.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

The current week, December 8 to 14, has been variable in the cut flower market. The last three days of last week were fairly active, but the first three of this week marked the beginning of the dullness that usually precedes a holiday.

Carnations are the most active feature of the list; prices have averaged higher than usual at this season. It is only fair to say that a better grade of carnations is sold than can usually be obtained so early; there are few poor ones. Roses are not so active. There is no special demand for Beauties, while the fancy grades of Richmond, Killarney and My Maryland are in excess of the demand, sometimes having to serve for shorter grades. Cattleyas continue in lively demand. There is no doubt that the present high price will be maintained until after the holidays. Gardenias have moved up another dollar per dozen and are going out as fast as they arrive. Valley is in splendid demand; top prices are more readily obtained than usual, indicating great activity. Sweet peas are rather more plentiful and in fair request. Violets are rather dull, as usual during extremely cold weather, when the street corsage is impossible. Callas are scarce, with indications of an advance. Easter lilies are fairly plentiful. Chrysanthemums are down to Jeanne Nonin, a great favorite for decorative or design work. Pompons are out. The poinsettia ball seemed to start the demand for those Christmas red bracts, a demand hardly yet in full swing. Mignonette is improving; some fine stock is offered. Paper Whites show some activity. Romans are quite dull. Yellow daisies sell better than white.

American Beauty, Killarney and Richmond roses in the finer grades, a fair supply in the shorter grades, with the probability of prices about equal to those of last year. Carnations are unlikely to be plentiful, though the stock to be offered promises to be finer than usual. All other flowers, with the exception of cattleyas, gardenias and it may be valley, are likely to be in good supply. There will be few chrysanthemums.

The Christmas green condition is unusual. The early October snows in the mountainous regions of Pennsylvania prevented the usual gathering of lycopodium and that useful green is, in consequence, extremely scarce. The December snows in Virginia, an almost unprecedented thing, have interfered with gathering boxwood sprays and consequently boxwood, expected to be plentiful last week, has failed just when needed. To increase the shortage, bronze galax, which was arriving in quantity at this time last year, is coming in slowly, only a case or two at a time. Holly is good, also plentiful.

The Christmas plant situation is healthy. The demand has taken larger quantities of fine blooming plants than ever before. Choice cyclamen and poinsettia are nearly all engaged. Foliage plants and ferns are selling well, though not so well as flowering plants. The chief difficulty lies in the cold weather. The shippers are holding shipments for a rise in the mercury.

Ranstead street December 15. The new quarters will enable Mr. Reid to handle his increasing business with greater facility; the same amount of effort will secure results in less time.

Edward Reid opened for business March 4, 1894, in the basement of the corner at Sixteenth and Ranstead streets, moving to 1526 Ranstead street in October of the following year, where he has remained until now, in quarters that were especially prepared for him. Mr. Reid was a pioneer in an important feature in the wholesaling of cut flowers. He believed that the plan then in vogue of pooling the products of the growers of the same variety of flower and then dividing the returns among them was unfair because it gave the best returns to the grower who produced the most flowers rather than to the grower who produced the finest flowers. To quote Mr. Reid's own words: "Labor is cheap, but brains come high." He commenced the now prevailing plan of crediting each grower with what he actually produced in each grade, instead of pooling the whole. This plan encourages effort to secure quality.

It may not be generally known that Mr. Reid's intimate knowledge of the growing of cut flowers is derived from nine years' work with Charles F. Price, one of the early rose growers of Lansdowne, Pa. Mr. Reid was the first grower to see the value of wire stakes which have now been adopted everywhere, in place of the then popular bamboo stake.

A Steady Advance.

Two paragraphs that have appeared recently in this column, under the head of "Various Notes," are specially interesting and may prove instructive to those young men who are wondering whether there is a chance for them as florists. These paragraphs both referred to Stephen Mortensen, of Southampton. The first chronicled his return and that of Mrs. Mortensen from a short trip to Europe; the second, his possession of a Buick motor car.

It is not so very long ago that Stephen Mortensen came to Philadelphia from the west. He was a hard worker, with muscle and brain, thoroughly in love with his profession, and, most important of all, he understood the value of money as few of us understand it. When the time came that he had saved enough money to start in business for himself, Mr. Mortensen laid and carried out his plans with prudence and foresight. He selected his ground, built his houses and chose his commission merchants so well that he has never had cause to regret or to

The Market.

Business was fairly good last week, the bulk of it being funeral work. The market is in such condition that the local trade cannot get enough to supply the demand and it looks as though the consignors are holding things back so as to have a big cut for Christmas. There is usually plenty of stock to be had about ten days before the holidays, but this year is an exception. This shortage in our local market stiffens prices, so that they are now equal to what they will be at Christmas.

The retailers are all busy preparing for Christmas. Bouquet green is so scarce that most of the florists who have not placed advance orders will be without any. Holly is plentiful and of fine quality. Carnations in all varieties bring top prices, $5 per hundred for fancies and $3 for common. Roses are more plentiful, but these, too, are up in price. Romans and Paper Whites are scarce so far this year and it looks as though our local growers are growing only about half the usual amount.

California violets are coming fine and in these the market should have a big supply soon; 75 cents is now the top price per hundred. Chrysanthemums are about over for this season and only a few worth anything are now coming in. Lilies and valley sell well. Sweet peas are in only fair supply at present. Smilax, asparagus and bronze galax leaves sold well last week.

Club Meeting.

The scholarship to the Missouri Botanical Garden, which is at the club's disposal in January, came up for discussion at the meeting of the Florists' Club, Thursday afternoon, December 8. Applications were received from R. A. Smith, of Charles City, Ia., and Gus Grossart, of Belleville, Ill. These, and any others which come in, will be voted upon by the members at the next meeting.

Twenty-five members were present and the bulletin committee and trustees made their final report for the year. A letter was read from J. F. Ammann, expressing regret for not being able to be present. A number of bills were paid, leaving a healthy balance on hand with which to begin the new year. Otto Sander was elected to membership in the club and the following applied for membership: John Held, Jules Bourdet and John Houlihan. These will be voted upon at the New Year's meeting.

Henry Emunds, of Belleville, showed a fine vase of fancy chrysanthemum blooms of Jeanne Nonin, which were greatly admired. The Chicago Carnation Co., of Joliet, Ill., staged a fine vase of its new carnation, Washington, which scored eighty-eight points. The judges were Messrs. Guy, Fillmore and Windler.

E. W. Guy, chairman of the trustees, gave a good talk on making the meetings more attractive for the members during the coming year, inasmuch as the club will be enjoying its twenty-fifth year of existence.

Various Notes.

W. C. Smith, R. J. Windler and V. Gorly took prominent parts in the Elks' circus, given at the Coliseum last week.

Fred Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., attended the Illinois State Florists' Association meeting at Champaign, Ill., last week. The trip prevented him from attending the club meeting.

Otto Sander is now located at 913 Olive street, in the store recently vacated by the Foster Floral Co. The move should greatly benefit his business.

The Engelmann Botanical Club held its December meeting Monday night, December 12, in the graduate lecture room of the Missouri Botanical Garden.

The feature of the meeting was a talk by C. H. Thompson, of the garden, who exhibited and discussed a few hybrid succulent plants, which have been produced in the garden. The election of officers took place later in the evening. The meeting was well attended.

The Ladies' Home Circle held its regular monthly meeting Monday, December 12, in Trimp's hall. The election of officers took place.

W. C. Smith, head of the W. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., says stock in carnations has been scarce of late and they have been having clean-up sales on them daily. They expect a big cut of California violets from their Kirkwood consignors for Christmas and have hopes for a good cut in carnations.

The west end florists who have showhouses are stocking up with fine plants of all descriptions and preparations for Christmas are going on daily. Among them are: Fred C. Weber, Ellison Floral Co., Fred H. Weber, Kalisch Bros., Theo. Miller, George Waldbart and Mrs. Ayers. Everything of the best is seen at these places.

Martin Moran, representing the St. Louis Seed Co., says that they have orders for several thousand yards of wreathing, but that green is scarce, while holly is plentiful. Their store decorations are attractive.

The flower business has also been good with them.

C. A. Kuehn is having a good run on Christmas supply goods, in both shipping and local demand. The demand for cut stock has been good.

Ostertag Bros. are having a big run of decorative work, having no less than ten big jobs last week. They are making a specialty of red smilax in their decorations—something new. Henry Ostertag says it is taking well in store decorations.

Henry Berning receives a large amount of first-class stock each morning, which has a good local demand. Shipping orders also are coming good.

The Retail Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting Monday, December 5. President Sanders opened the meeting to a good attendance. The New Year's meeting takes place Monday, January 2, at 8 o'clock.

Harry Nicholson, traveling salesman for the Chicago Carnation Co., spent last week with the growers, showing them sample blooms of their new carnation, Washington.

W. C. Woodruff, representing W. M. Woodruff & Son, Lowgap, N. C., was a caller last week.

Frank C. Kegris, representative of Ralph M. Ward & Co., New York, called on the trade last week, introducing their famous Horseshoe brand products.

The Market.

Business has been good and the weather has been favorable all the fall. Roses and carnations are excellent. Mums are gone. Bulbous stock is here and indications are for a good supply of stock for Christmas.

Various Notes.

Julius Niednagel & Sons will have a nice crop of roses for Christmas. The carnations look good. This firm has a brand new delivery wagon.

The Wm. Blackman Floral Co. reports business good, with plenty of stock being cut. The roses and carnations are fine. My Maryland does well here, and they expect to plant a full house next year and discard Killarney. Their Beauties are fine, but a little off crop. George Blackman says that they will cut more flowers for Christmas than ever before. They have large lots of azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamen and ferns that will be just right for the holidays. Lily of the valley and bulbous stock is good.

NEW IRISH MELOD

FOR several years we have made a study of the Pedigree Seedling Roses of Messrs. Alexander Dic when from 3000 to 5000 Seedlings were in bloom, and our earnest endeavor has been to select v flower as freely during the Winter as Killarney. We have tested several beautiful Roses that th produce enough flowers during the Winter months to be profitable to the Grower. In Melody we have introduced; it is a Yellow Pedigree Seedling of Messrs. Alexander Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Irela for Winter forcing, their former introductions being Killarney, Liberty and Mrs. Jardine.

Melody has a strong, willowy growth, unlike any other forcing variety, with rich glossy foliag yellow, shading toward the center to deep apricot yellow, and very double. It will be particularly valua quantities of flowers in Winter, when other varieties are apt to be shy. With us in Sharon Hill it is as and from one two-year-old plant, last December, we cut 26 flowers, and from the same plant on the next c

DETROIT.

The Market.

A lull before a storm, seems to describe the situation here at present. There is, of course, the usual amount of funeral work, and things are pretty lively in a social way, but still the sale of plants and flowers for the home has fallen off.

Chrysanthemums are about at an end; there are a few stray ones, but they are of little use. Roses and carnations are in fairly good supply and the quality is fine. Valley is a little more plentiful and meets with a good demand. Sweet peas are as yet so scarce that they are not to be reckoned with.

Owing to the high price of ground pine, the demand for southern smilax is extra heavy.

Various Notes.

E. C. Fetters spent several days of last week in Chicago.

A Brush delivery car is being used by The Flower Shop, with most satisfactory results.

The creation of waterproof ribbon and chiffon has created a new use for these materials. They are being used extensively on cemetery wreaths, as they withstand the weather.

The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange is handling Christmas trees as a side line. This concern is doing a big business in statice, moss wreaths, etc.

B. Schroeter has some exceptionally fine cyclamen for his Christmas trade.

J. B. Blessing and Fred Meyer, of Jackson, were recent visitors.

H. S.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The weather last week was not of a variety that was favorable to the roses, carnations and other cut flowers; consequently the prices are high. We usually expect a lull in trade between Thanksgiving and Christmas, but such has not been the case here this season. The retail stores have had a busy week with reception and funeral work, and the fascination of beautiful store windows is quite noticeable.

Sweet peas are now coming in of excellent quality, with long stems, and are having a good sale. Potted plants of all kinds are to be had now, and the stores are all well prepared for the great Christmas demand.

W. J. Barnes has a fine house of begonias.

The Market.

Stock is more plentiful just now, but business is rather slow. The weather is ideal, and everyone is shopping, but not for flowers. One florist says the weather is too nice, that no one stays at home long enough to want flowers; but as this article is being written snow is beginning to fall, and we are hopeful that it will improve trade.

Everyone anticipates a big Christmas business. Cut flowers will be rather high-priced, but that is generally the case, and still they are always sold.

California violets are still being sold on the street corners. They are arriving in better shape, and find ready sale.

It is reported that stands on the streets for the sale of wreaths, holly, mistletoe and other Christmas greens will not be allowed this year. If this is so, a great deal of that trade will go to the florists.

Various Notes.

Warren D. Smith, who for some years has had charge of the outdoor planting for the Park Floral Co., and Len Obrecht, barn foreman for the same concern, have resigned their positions and have started in business for themselves. They intend to do all kinds of outside planting. At present they are busy improving their land on East Colfax avenue.

The Speth Floral Co. was exceedingly busy last week. They had twelve decorations, which kept all the force on the jump. Some fine cattleyas were received from New Jersey, and 800 valley came from Chicago for one wedding.

The New York Floral Co. made up a large bunch of Beauties last week. It consisted of six dozen long-stemmed flowers tied in a bunch, for presentation to an actress.

Fred Hall is bringing some fine long Beauties to the Denver Wholesale Florists' Co. each day, and expects to have a good crop at Christmas time.

J. A. Valentine, N. A. Benson, Emil Glauber, Ben. Boldt, Frank Fraser and George Zimmer went to Colorado Springs November 29, the trip being made in Mr. Valentine's and Mr. Benson's machines. Four games were rolled with the Colorado Springs florists, the Denver men winning three.

George H. Cooper and Harry J. Berry will open a store at 833 Fifteenth street, January 1, where they will handle seeds and goldfish, as well as cut flowers and plants. Mr. Cooper will give up his place at 330 East Colfax street. He says that he has done well there, but that the location is not desirable, being too far from the business district. Mr. Berry is at present manager of the Denver Wholesale Florists' Co., and is an experienced florist and seedsman. Both young men have a great many friends, who wish them luck in their new undertaking. The style of the concern will be Cooper & Berry.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., E. L. Page, Greene, N. Y.; First Vice-pres., L. H. Vaughan, Chicago; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.

THE catalogues are now mostly on the press, if not in the bindery.

THE holly thus far received is of fair average quality and the market is easy.

THE Haven Seed Co. has removed its headquarters from Lodi to Santa Ana, Cal.

ANNA B. CURRIE, widow of the late James Currie, the Milwaukee seedsman, died December 11, aged 83 years.

THE California seed growers, in consequence of the good crops of 1910, are looking forward to increased acreages for 1911.

THE building of the Cassville Produce & Seed Co, Cassville, Mo., was destroyed by fire December 6, without insurance.

THE government statisticians have figured up the corn crop as 3,121,381,000 bushels, the largest yield on record, with an average of 27.4 bushels per acre as against the ten-year average of 25.8 bushels.

THE 1911 general catalogues are coming to hand. Arthur T. Boddington's book of 144 pages with cover designed by Harry A. Bunyard arrived December 12, as did the books of Holmes Seed Co. and the Ebbert Seed Co.

BEFORE it will be possible to increase the supply of labor in the seed trade it will be necessary to make the occupation attractive to those who have had a little experience of it; and that means as profitable all-the-year-round employment as can be found in other trades.

THE government at Washington estimates that there now are in this country approximately 1,000 concerns, big and little, engaged in the seed trade. This does not include any of those that handle seeds as a side line.

THE FIRST 1911 CATALOGUE.

The first of the season's crop of seed catalogues to reach The Review is that of the Livingston Seed Co., Columbus, O., which came to hand December 10. It is the usual book of 130 pages within lithographed covers, illustrated with new halftones from photographs made at their own trial grounds, but what will interest the seedsmen more is the prices. The pea page tells of the short crops and in most cases quotes nothing larger than pecks, half pecks of some varieties: Early round seeded sorts, $1.75 to $2.50 peck; Gradus, $1.75 half peck; American Wonder, Nott's Excelsior, Advancer, Alderman, $2.50 peck; Telephone, $1.70 half peck; Alaska, $1.75 peck, $6.50 bushel. In beans, Wardwell's and Burpee's Stringless White Wax are $6 bushel; Refugee, $4.50; Dreer's Bush Lima, $6.75; Burpee's, $6.50; Henderson's, $6.25; Kentucky Wonder, $6.50, prices but little changed from last year. In beets, homegrown Crosby's remains 90 cents per pound, but contract grade of Crosby's is not quoted this year. Detroit Dark Red Turnip is moved up to 90 cents from 75 cents last year; Crimson Globe from 65 cents to 75 cents, Extra Early Eclipse from 60 to 65 cents, and others in proportion. Southport White and Yellow Globe onions remain unchanged, at $3.25 and $1.75 per pound, respectively, While Red Globe is cut down to $1.50. Wethersfield is reduced to $1.65. Cauliflowers are unchanged. The early pointed-headed cabbages are unchanged, but All Head Early is $2.50 per pound as against $1.75 last year; Danish Ball Head is $1 a quarter pound as against 85 cents last year; Surehead is $2, against $1.75 in 1910, and Succession is advanced from $2 to $2.50. Celeries get a good lift, Golden Self-blanching, French grown, to 75 cents an ounce, and American grown to 50 cents. Radishes stand about as last year, but Scarlet Turnip White-Tipped is 65 cents per pound and Early Snowball also gets 10 cents advance. Champion Moss Curled and Hamburg, or Turnip Rooted, parsley are advanced 20 cents to 75 cents per pound, while Fine Double Curled gets only 10 cents lift, to 65 cents. Sweet corn remains at about last year's prices. There is a slight advance in cucumbers, but cantaloupes stand at last year's prices. The changes on tomatoes are reductions.

When the 1911 catalogues are all out it seems likely the planters will be found buying their seeds proportionately a good deal cheaper than the seedsmen bought them.

IMPORTS.

The imports of seed through the port of New York for the week ending December 3 were as follows:

Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.	Kind.	Pkgs.	Val.

FREE SEEDS MANN.

Under a congressional frank, voters in the Second Illinois district are receiving the following communication from James R. Mann:

Following my custom for years, I will during the winter and spring months send out by mail packages of flower and vegetable seed furnished me by the U. S. Department of Agriculture for distribution. Each package of seed sent out consists of five smaller packets, each containing a different kind.

I can send to you, or, at your request, to some friend of yours, a package of either vegetable or flower seed, as you may request, and I will be glad to send to some others who may write to me.

Formerly I used to send out about 400 packages of flower seed each year; now I send out several thousand packages and I am sure that this distribution of seed has had much to do with the increased interest in flowers and beautiful yards in our part of the city. I want to help make Chicago a town which is attractive in appearance as well as important in affairs.

If you desire the seed sent please write me at Washington.

And remember that I am always glad to be of proper service to my constituents and also to hear from them expressions concerning public questions of the day.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

It may not be amiss to give a brief account of the prospects for the holidays. Unless we get a good deal of sunshine from now on conditions as reported will not vary much. In pot plants there seems to be a large supply of stock, such as poinsettias, azaleas, cyclamens, primroses and a few more. Even though there is a large supply wherever one goes, everyone is confident of selling out clean. The cut flower proposition is somewhat different. In roses, including Beauties, the supply will be about equal to the demand. The same can be said of narcissi and Romans, sweet peas, valley and stevia. The prolonged cloudy spell, which has extended back for nearly two months, has had its effects on carnations, and from present reports the supply will be inadequate. The supply of local-grown violets will also run behind former seasons.

Various Notes.

Death has claimed two out of our midst within a week. Miss Alma Wolgast, a promising young lady who for some years had charge of the flower department of Horne Bros., died last week; she was well known and liked by all who had dealings with her. Mrs. Anna B. Currie, widow of the late James Currie, Sr., passed away December 11, aged 83 years. Interment took place at Forest Home.

The large hall of the Auditorium was again tastefully decorated with palms, pine trees, Alabama smilax, southern

Surplus Bulbs

Easter comes April 16, and you will need blooming Hyacinths, Tulips, Narcissi, etc., at that time. There is plenty of time to force them for your Easter trade, and we have a fine lot of bulbs for the purpose—the surplus left from our fall trade. We'd rather sell these below cost than throw them out, and now is the time for you to get a real bargain. You know how low these prices are:

NAMED HYACINTHS, $35 per 1,000.
NAMED TULIPS, $12 per 1,000.
NAMED NARCISSI, $12 per 1,000.
MONSTER YELLOW CROCUS, $6 per 1,000.
LARGE NAMED CROCUS, $4 per 1,000.
MIXED HYACINTHS, $20 per 1,000.
MIXED TULIPS, $12 per 1,000.

If you are in need of a large quantity of any of these or other bulbs, write us. We can quote you prices that will interest you.

Write us, also, if you are interested in Asparagus and Maidenhair fern as house plants. We have a fine lot of them at very attractive prices.

GLADIOLI

ANNOUNCEMENT

I am prepared to fill orders for Gladioli, as I have a fine stock of large, clean bulbs. I wish to call particular attention to President Taft, a large pink of very robust growth, and Golden Queen, a fine rich golden color. Both of these varieties received an award at the Cincinnati Convention last year, and Golden Queen won the Boddington Trophy for "Best Yellow Gladiolus," at the Rochester Exhibition this year. I am growing these kinds to sell and am not asking a fancy price.

President Taft, 1½ to 2½-inch, $3.00 per 100; $25.00 per 1000.
Golden Queen, - - 4.00 per 100; 30.00 per 1000.

I can also supply America, all sizes; Easter, Florida, Eugene Scribe, Geo. Paul, Klondyke, Madame Monneret, Mrs. Francis King, Mohawk and many other varieties, besides mixtures. Write for trade list.

Yours for trade,

palm leaves and pumpkin blossoms for the annual charity ball December 8, by J. M. Fox & Son. A great addition was the large smilax baskets suspended from the ceiling, which at last year's flower show attracted considerable attention. This work was done by the August F. Kellner Co.

Everyone who attended the mid-winter dancing party given at Miller's hall, December 8, by the Milwaukee Florists' Club reports a grand time. Members of the club donated decorative plants and foliage, which helped to brighten the surroundings.

The Wisconsin Floral Co., on Grand avenue, reports an increase of business since the opening of this season over that of a year ago.

Wm. Zimmermann took advantage of the calm before the storm December 11 to join the Eagles on their trip to Janesville.

Arthur Leidiger, of the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., spent December 8 in Chicago.

The Sherer Co., on Wisconsin street, used poinsettias to good advantage in the window display last week.

C. C. Pollworth Co. reports shipping trade fine.

The Holton & Hunkel Co. has two houses of fine poinsettias, but reports most of the stock spoken for at this time. The cyclamens and azaleas also were in prime condition.

Visitors: E. J. Fancourt, of Pennock-Meehan Co., Philadelphia; Mrs. Tremain, Hartford, Wis.; Messrs. Lassen, John Bragase and John Benstead, all of Racine, Wis. E. O.

Three Grand New Sweet Peas For 1911

WELL WORTHY OF PROMINENCE IN EVERY "UP-TO-DATE" LIST

A Spray of the Grand New Spencer, ETHEL ROOSEVELT,— Accurately reproduced from a Photograph

"Ethel Roosevelt"

It is a true waved variety of the largest and most perfect Spencer type. There is naturally some variation even in Spencers, and ETHEL ROOSEVELT claims the most exclusive Spencer perfection. The ground color is a soft, pleasing primrose, or straw color, overlaid with dainty flakes and splashes of blush crimson. The crimson is not at all pronounced and simply gives some warmth and golden tinting to the yellowish groundwork. It bunches splendidly and will easily lead in this type of coloring for a long time.

We were unable to plant a large acreage owing to the fact that we had only a little seed to sow for 1910 crop, and, like all good Spencers, it flowered freely but refused to seed.—Description of the originators,—MESSRS C. C. MORSE & Co.

In sealed packets containing 10 seeds each: Per pkt. 15c; $1.00 per doz. pkts.; $7.00 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 pkts. or more, $6.25 per 100 pkts.

In sealed packets containing 20 seeds each: Per pkt. 25c; $2.00 per doz. pkts.; $13.75 per 100 pkts. In lots of 500 pkts. or more, $12.50 per 100 pkts.

A Spray of Florence Nightingale,— Engraved from a Photograph

"Florence Nightingale"

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE is by far the largest and best Lavender Spencer yet introduced! This statement is warranted by comparative trials at Fordhook and the field crop at Floradale.

The flowers are truly magnificent and of immense size. The standard is unusually large and bold, pronouncedly waved, yet standing erect and broad,—frequently measuring two inches across. The color is most charmingly soft and yet rich lavender, which is enlivened by a very faint sheen of rose-pink. The large, well-spread wings are of the same coloring, frilled and well waved. It is practically a self color and bunches beautifully,—attracting universal admiration. The plant is extremely robust in growth, flowering most profusely. The stout stems attain twelve to sixteen inches in length and a large proportion bear four well placed flowers, as shown in the illustrations from photographs. FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE comes entirely true from seed,—both as to color and the highest ideal Spencer type.

In sealed packets of same sizes and at same prices as "Ethel Roosevelt."

"Rose du Barri" This new Grandiflora affords an entirely new shade in Sweet Peas. The name itself suggests the color, which is a lovely combination of deep, rich carmine-rose and orange. While the flower is not of Spencer form or size, yet it is slightly waved and for boutonnieres or table decoration it is "really a gem." Its brilliant beauty must appeal to every lover of esthetic shades.

The plants, of strong, vigorous growth, are wonderfully profuse in bloom,—and every flower is alike! The crops growing at our Fordhook Farms have attracted great attention the past two seasons.

In sealed packets containing twenty seeds each: Per pkt. 15c; $1.00 per doz. pkts.; $7.00 per 100 pkts.; in lots of 500 pkts. or more, $6 25 per 100 pkts.

You may have heard about the little fellow who stole very cautiously up to the letter box and when no one was looking, slipped a letter in without a stamp on it, thinking he had saved two cents. Well now, that's just about the way some growers buy lily bulbs. They think it is smart practice and good business to "jew" down a salesman; but, gentlemen, it's not. It is not good for either the buyer or the salesman. In lily bulbs you are going to get just what you pay for and no more. It's the same in many other bulbs, plants, etc., and the wise buyer is the man who pays a fair price for the article he wants and insists upon getting what he buys. We have the most direct connection possible in the Japanese bulb business and we know the value of the bulbs, and by costly experience we have learned that it don't pay in the long run to buy cheap lily bulbs—excuse us, we prefer others handle that part of the business. Good lily bulbs, at reasonable prices, we can supply in any ordinary quantity for immediate delivery or for shipments during 1911 from cold storage.

Boston, Dec. 12.—Cucumbers, $4 to $10 box; lettuce, 90c to $1.25 box; tomatoes, 20c to 25c lb.; mushrooms, 35c to 50c lb.; mint, 50c to 75c doz. bunches; parsley, $1 to $1.25 box; romaine, 75c to $1 doz.; escarolle, 50c to 75c doz.

LETTUCE ROT.

I should like to ask you about lettuce rot, and whether there is any remedy for it. Frequently, after setting out a bed of lettuce, a plant rots here and there. By removing the affected plant at once, and applying air-slaked lime, with a little sulphur in it, on the soil from which the plant was removed, the disease seems to be checked. But when it attacks a bed that is half grown or older, it seems impossible to do anything with it, and sometimes I lose half the bed. W. E. G.

Lettuce rot can often be avoided by taking off an inch of the top soil and putting back the same quantity of good, clean, new soil. If the plants are kept watered too much, so that the top soil is always wet, this condition is pretty sure to bring on the disease called lettuce rot. Give plenty of ventilation and keep the soil cultivated. H. G.

RHUBARB UNDER BENCHES.

Please tell me how to plant rhubarb under carnation benches. N. F. C.

Select good, strong, healthy plants, not less than three years old. Lift these clumps carefully, leaving as much soil on them as will cling to them with reasonably careful handling. Place these clumps close together in a row under the edge of the benches. Pack fine soil in between them carefully and put about two or three inches on top of them. Soak the soil thoroughly to settle it around the clumps, but be sparing of the water then for a while, as they require little of it until they get roots and leaves to take up and evaporate it.

Burbank's Linnæus and the Giant Victoria are both good forcing varieties. Others may be as good, if good, healthy, strong old clumps are obtainable. Some could be dug and stored in a cold shed now, so as to be ready for starting up later if wanted. H. G.

SNAILS AND MOLES.

Will you please tell me what I can do to get rid of snails in my greenhouse soil? They eat the young lettuce plants and also the sweet peas, and altogether they do a great deal of damage. I am also troubled with the field mouse, which rakes up the ground and eats the roots. We have the smilax, asparagus and other plants in a bench made on the ground. We tried to catch the pests at night, but did not succeed.

M. & C. Co.

These snails or slugs can be caught by taking large lettuce leaves and laying them around on the beds. The slugs will eat on them and stay there, as they can hide under them after daylight. They should be collected each morning and more leaves should be laid in place before evening. They work mostly at night, but sometimes on cloudy days.

I have also heard that the slugs can be poisoned by hollowing out half potatoes, putting a little Paris green inside them and laying them around, but I am afraid to leave poisoned vegetable matter scattered about.

I think they are ground moles, instead of field mice, that are digging in your solid beds. They can be caught easily in the regular mole traps. All supply dealers handle these traps. They have several prongs, which are driven down through the mole if he ventures along the route over which the trap is set. In raising the soil as he goes, he springs the trap that spears him.

The Livingston Seed Co.

Columbus, Ohio

Columbus, O.—At the greenhouses of the State Institution for Feeble Minded Youth, on West Broad street, large quantities of flowers and vegetables of fine quality are grown, and the work is done principally by the boys of the institution, under the direction of Robert Buehler, the florist in charge. It is apparent that, under the circumstances, Mr. Buehler deserves a double degree of credit for what is accomplished.

PACIFIC COAST.

San Diego, Cal.—Miss Kate O. Sessions, of this city, recently delivered an interesting horticultural address to a large audience in the Opera House at La Mesa, Cal.

Portland, Ore.—John G. Holden, whose greenhouses were destroyed in the big exposition fire, has brought suit against the Law, Union and Rock Insurance Co., in London, to collect on a policy of $500.

Los Angeles, Cal.—G. Harold Powell, who until recently has been acting as chief of the bureau of plant industry in the Agricultural Department at Washington, has now accepted a position as manager of the Citrus Fruit Growers' Protective League, in this state, and will make his headquarters in this city. He will receive a salary of $10,000 a year.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

During last week we had all sorts of weather, from a heavy downpour of twelve hours' duration to a continued spell of bright sunshine and frosty nights. From present indications this style will be in vogue for some time at least, and if it does it will go a long way toward making things all right for the holidays. There was a noticeable decrease in the amount of flowers brought into town during the last few days, and a general stiffening of prices is in evidence all along the line. Carnations and roses are slightly in advance of last week's prices, and they can be looked to for further rises any day.

Daffodils are in season again and quantities of narcissi are being brought into town. Mums are slightly scarcer, and the prices on these, too, have increased. Smilax, which is rather slow in attaining any length of stem, is becoming more plentiful, and other sorts of green goods are as usual. The price of California red berries is from 3 cents to 4 cents per pound, delivered, and at these prices there does not seem to be a surplus. The native madrona berry is also used in large bunches for decorations, but is not quite as popular as the smaller article.

Business is fair and everyone is hoping that the pleasant weather will continue until after the holidays.

Various Notes.

The Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held its election of officers on the evening of December 3. A. Rossi was elected president and Wm. Kettlewell was elected vice-president for the coming year.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. extended an invitation to the members of the gardening fraternity, as well as the florists and growers, to be their guests on their grounds near San Mateo, Sunday, December 11.

Philip Murray, recently with C. C. Morse & Co., is associated at present with Clarke Bros., of Oakland.

Carl Purdy, of Ukiah, Cal., delivered a lecture on bulbs, at Berkeley, on the evening of December 1.

The horticultural authorities have condemned over 100 boxes of Iris Kæmpferi, consigned to local dealers and shipped from Japan. They were found to be infested with a root borer.

The Market.

There is no prospect of any surplus of either cut flowers or flowering plants this Christmas. The cut of all the standard lines is this season quite up to the average, but is disposed of faster—as fast as it is produced. Plants, generally, are scarcer than usual, and the demand is quite up to the average.

be small. The present season is proving hard on the plants. Up to the present time—December 6, there has been no trace of frost here, but there has been a much larger fall of rain than the average and extremely little sunshine.

Carnations will be the staple, as there are a great many growers. The quality will be quite up to the average. Scarlet, of course, will be scarce. Chrysanthemums will be present in considerable quantities. Chadwick, Nonin, Jones and Nagoya are the favorites here with the growers for Christmas.

Poinsettias will be scarce. Some fine batches are seen, but the tempting offers made by our Seattle friends will, I am afraid, cause many of the best to cross the border. Local violets will be present in small quantities only. This deficiency, however, will be easily made up by the California stock, which is arriving in good shape.

In plants, Gloire de Lorraine is in larger supply and better quality than usual, and the same is true of cyclamen. Of the other popular varieties the supply seems to be smaller than usual. F. W. B.

VARIEGATED DUSTY MILLER.

Please tell me whether anyone has a variegated dusty miller in four colors—lemon yellow with two different shades of green, slightly tinted with pink. I cannot tell whether it is a centaurea or cineraria, but think it is a gem. I should like to know if it is something new, as I fail to find any description of anything of this kind. A. S. F.

Cineraria maritima and Centaurea candidissima each have silvery foliage and are used in bedding. I do not know of a variety of either of these plants which answers to your description. Perhaps, however, some other reader may, and can supply the needed information. The name dusty miller is occasionally applied to Cineraria maritima. It is in Europe a common name for auricula, but the latter charming spring flowering plant is little grown here, the climate being against its successful culture. C. W.

SPANISH IRIS IN PANS.

Some time ago I purchased a lot of Spanish iris bulbs to force for Easter. How many bulbs should be put in, say, 6-inch and 7-inch pans? Would ten and fifteen, respectively, be about right? Should they go outside and be covered with ashes for six or eight weeks, as hyacinths and tulips are treated? What subsequent treatment should they have, to be in good condition by next Easter? J. R.

It would not be well to try to grow the Spanish iris in smaller sized pans than 8-inch, unless you have them deeper than the ordinary bulb pans. An 8-inch pan will hold and flower fifteen bulbs. Do not plant them any closer than this, if you want good flowers. A 10-inch pan will hold twenty bulbs. Of course, you could stand them thicker than this, but a considerable percentage would probably not flower.

Spanish iris should not be covered with ashes, as are tulips and hyacinths. They need light all the time, as they commence to grow soon after planting. You can keep them in a coldframe until time to start them indoors. Easter, 1911, comes about the middle of April, and bulbs intended to be in flower then should be placed in a minimum temperature of 48 to 50 degrees about March 1. Do not give them a higher night temperature than 50 degrees, or you will spoil them. These irises will not stand hard forcing. They need an abundant water supply and feeding after being started in heat.

The reason these bulbous plants are so little seen in pans is that they grow a little too tall. If you intend growing them in pans, select the dwarfer growing kinds, like Louise, chrysolora and Midley. C. W.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

THIS week's obituary column records the death of A. Koster, of Boskoop, in whose nursery was discovered Picea pungens glauca Kosteriana.

THE thirty-second biennial session of the American Pomological Society will be held at Tampa, Fla., February 10 and 11. John Craig, Ithaca, N. Y., is secretary.

SADDLER BROS., the nurserymen of Bloomington, Ill., have prepared for an extension of their business by purchasing 440 acres of land in Starke Co., Ind. The new tract is said to be finely adapted for the purpose.

THE Western Association of Nurserymen will hold its annual meeting at Kansas City December 20 and 21. E. P. Bernardin, of Parsons, Kan., is president, and E. J. Holman, of Leavenworth, Kan., secretary.

Two nurserymen had places on the program for the meeting of the Colorado State Horticultural Society, at Rifle, December 12 and 13: M. R. Kilburn, president of the Northern Colorado Nursery Co., Loveland, read a paper on "Small Fruits;" and James R. Hogg, nursery superintendent for the Northern Nurseries, Denver, discussed "Preparation of the Soil and Choice of Stock in Planting a New Orchard."

T. C. THURLOW'S SONS, of West Newbury, Mass., have recently bought an additional farm of eighty-three acres, thirty acres of which is available for nursery and the rest will eventually be planted to orchards, which they are taking up as a side line. Their total acreage is now about 300 acres. Their sale on peonies this year has been the largest, both wholesale and retail, for a number of years. Other lines have also sold well, the business having nearly doubled in the last two years.

JEWELL'S PACKING HOUSE.

The Jewell Nursery Co., Lake City, Minn., is the big industry in that town. Founded in 1868, by Dr. P. A. Jewell and J. M. Underwood, the latter, after more than forty years, is president of the corporation formed in 1884 and active in the management of the 1,500 acres of nursery. E. A. Smith is vice-president, A. B. Underwood treasurer and R. D. Underwood secretary.

Almost an acre of cellars are used for the storage of stock, and a large packing house has just been completed. Some of the facts in regard to its capacity and construction will be of interest. The ground floor is approximately 200x200 feet. It is forty feet high. The roof, including lantern, measures 45,700 square feet and is covered with asbestos. The foundation and walls are of stone and cement blocks. The blocks were made by nursery employees on their own grounds, the stone being taken from their quarries. Over three tons of nails were used to put up the roof and 5,000 cement blocks were used in the walls. Two hundred and ten windows give ample light, with an auxiliary electric equipment for night work. The cost somewhat exceeded $10,000. This building is one of the latest built by the nursery trade and is especially well arranged. It has stalls and bins for over 1,500 varieties and sizes of nursery stock, and from this is filled their large retail business in the northern states. No stock whatever is stored in this building, as they have almost an acre of underground cellars for that purpose.

WIDOW GETS FRUITLANDS.

Word comes from Augusta, Ga., that a deed has been recorded in the office of the county clerk conveying the property known as the Fruitlands Nursery to the widow of the late P. J. Berckmans, who was his second wife. The sons are the children of a former marriage. Several years ago Mr. Berckmans retired from active business and the sons took over the control through a holding company, in which the father retained a large interest. The real estate was leased to the company until 1918. No will has been filed, but the deed recently recorded conveys the property to the widow, subject to the lease.

VALUES OF BOXWOODS.

The U. S. customs authorities have their own ideas as to the values of azaleas and boxwoods this year and have recently announced a number of reappraisements in which the invoice values were sharply advanced, and others in which only packing charges were added. Reappraisements announced December 7 were:

PROPAGATING BOXWOOD.

Will you please tell us the season and method of propagating boxwood?

O. W. D.

The tree box, Buxus sempervirens, is best propagated from cuttings of well ripened wood in the fall. These can be planted quite closely in a coldframe in sandy loam, or carried over in flats in a cold greenhouse. They are slow in callousing and rooting, but if kept fairly moist the greater portion will root. The dwarf boxwood, used so much for hedges for flower borders, is easily increased by simply tearing the plants to pieces and planting them quite deeply and firmly, soaking well with water at the same time. While a fragment of root on each portion insures a growing plant more quickly, those without roots will soon make them if they can be kept watered in dry weather. While the cuttings will root in the open, it is safer to place them under lath shadings, where they can be reached with the hose and watered. Cuttings anywhere from three to six inches long are suitable. C. W.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

We had real winter weather last week, with a heavy snow storm Tuesday, December 6, with about twelve inches of snow and the thermometer hovering around zero, and on Saturday we were treated to about three inches more. There is every prospect of a scarcity of carnations and roses for Christmas. The severe cold has given tone to the market, while traffic has not been seriously impeded by the heavy snow.

Quality has improved and prices have advanced on all varieties of flowers. Carnations are showing encouraging activity, in marked contrast to the two weeks preceding Christmas one year ago. The flowers that reached the city during the current week realized figures gratifyingly close to the high water mark. Violets are not so abundant, as is usually the case in this cold, cloudy weather.

Poinsettias are bringing good prices, largely due to the moderate offering. The few callas coming in are eagerly sought. The chrysanthemums' rear guard, Nonin, Jones and Helen Frick, are generally going as substitutes for something else. The call for holly, wild smilax and all kinds of wreathing is abnormally insistent.

Various Notes.

Chas. L. Seybold, who was connected with the public park system of Baltimore for over twenty-five years, was notified December 1 that his services would not be needed after that date. Mr. Seybold was recognized as an expert on landscape work, and his removal is not well taken by the general public, and a number of protests have been filed with the park board upon their drastic action.

Halliday Bros. have a fine house of poinsettias which will be just right for Christmas, both for cut and pans.

Chas. Cook, of Catonsville, is planning two new houses, to be erected early next spring, for bedding stock.

G. A. Lotze, of Glenburnie, Md., is cutting some extra fine carnations and violets. Q.

White Wonder—Gloriosa

Two New Carnations for 1911

We consider these the best varieties in their colors we have yet introduced. Both are up to the high standard of quality and strictly commercial in production of bloom.

White Wonder

The largest and most productive white variety we have yet produced. A white carnation for all growers.

A 1906 seedling of White Perfection, having all its good qualities so greatly improved that it is far superior to that variety. The flower is some larger, the stem is stronger and the growth is all that White Perfection lacks, making nearly double the size plant and thereby increasing its productiveness nearly one-third.

Like White Perfection, it is easy to root, makes a quick upright growth, transplants readily, flowers early and without a break produces a full continuous crop the entire season.

Another of its strong points is its calyx—the per cent of bursted ones is so small that it cannot be classed as a defect.

Gloriosa

An attractive and pleasing shade of pure light pink. It is darker than Pink Delight, without the salmon cast, and the color is distinct from any variety in commerce.

Its stem, clean healthy foliage, habit of growth and its exceptionally good calyx is an advance on the varieties now in cultivation. It is another that has that early, free and continuous flowering habit. The size is large, with a full center—the form is perfect and keeping qualities are of the best.

The cuttings root easily and make a quick, shapely growth. It lifts and transplants readily, is very active—quick to produce new breaks that run to flower stems in a very short time.

The A. C. S. Judges gave Gloriosa first honors in competition with Pink Delight and Enchantress.

Like White Perfection, Winona and Pink Delight, these two varieties are true commercial types, having all the good points to make them valuable to every grower.

Our very large stock will give us quantities of good select cuttings early and throughout the season. Notwithstanding our large sales of over 200,000 rooted cuttings, we are prepared to take good care of your order if placed now. Large or small, we will make every effort to make your order satisfactory.

Price of rooted cuttings: $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000; 2500 for $237.50; 5000 for $450.00; 25 at 100 and 250 at 1000 rate. For larger quantities, prices on application.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade continues excellent, although there is the natural lull before the holiday rush. The weather has been poor for growing, the sun only being seen for a short time, and often not at all. On this account, stock has been a little scarce, but, on account of the lull, there has been plenty to go around. Funeral work has been quite plentiful and decorations for receptions and afternoon teas have kept the demand up.

Various Notes.

At the recent meeting of the Toronto Horticultural Society, medals were presented by Ald. McCausland to the prize winners in the various competitions that were held through the year. This society held monthly exhibitions of cut flowers and plants and every one was a success. This year it set apart blocks in various parts of the city and told the residents on these streets that they would be awarded prizes for the best kept lawn, best flower bed, best climbing rose, best window-box, etc. This created keen competition among the different householders and as a result the streets were much improved. Each winner received a medal. It is proposed to go into this scheme more extensively next year.

J. H. Dunlop has a fine stock of roses and carnations coming on for the Christmas trade. He reports good business at his retail store and is looking forward to making a new record during the holidays.

Harry Dillemuth is having a good trade in funeral work and cut flowers and reports a number of big advance orders for decorations.

Mrs. Walker, formerly of Hamilton, Ont., has opened a store on Avenue road, opposite Dupont street.

J. J. Higgins, who recently opened a store at 382 Yonge street, anticipates a big rush for his first Christmas in the new stand.

William Fendley, of Brampton, is shipping some fine violets to this city.

S. A. Frost, of College street, visited Berlin this week and called on H. L. Janzen, of that town. He states that Mr. Janzen has some magnificent poinsettias for the Christmas trade. They are in a solid bed and some of the heads measure almost a foot across. Roses and carnations, however, are not as good as they might be because of absence of sun. E. A. F.

THE EARLIEST AND LATEST

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Our collection of Commercial novelties includes Smith's Advance, the earliest large white known. Cut July 25th, C. S. A. Certificate.
The latest arrival is December Gem, also white, cut Dec. 1st and C. S. A. Certificate Dec. 3rd, scoring 89 points, at Chicago.
The others of this collection are: Unaka, bright pink, Oct. 1st; Chrysolora, yellow, Oct. 15th; Dick Witterstaetter, bright crimson, Oct. 25th; Roman Gold, intense yellow, Nov. 1st, and Thanksgiving Queen, white, Nov. 20th.
Truly a wonderful collection to be offered in a single season. Six months of Chrysanthemums in this collection.
Our fine Exhibition varieties, Poughkeepsie, Glen Cove, Lenox, Morristown and Tarrytown, are of the same high order.
Don't be persuaded that there are others just as good.
Our complete catalogue ready in January. Complete descriptions and prices mailed at once to those desiring to place early orders.

outclasses everything heretofore grown in the dark pink section. Won first honors in the 100 class for best dark pink at the A. C. S. meeting, Pittsburg, January, 1910, also at the Chicago Flower Show, November, 1909.

It is a pure, bright, dark pink of even shade, size 3½ inches, an early and continuous bloomer, brings fully 25 per cent more flowers to the plant than Lawson at its best; flowers well shaped on long, wiry stems; calyx does not split. It is a good shipper, and the cuttings root easy.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

The last two weeks have been marked by an exceptional activity in our retail trade. Thanksgiving day was far better than in former years and the increase in flower decorations, and especially the sending of gift boxes of choice cut flowers, was more noticeable than heretofore. It seems that our southern people are more and more adopting this really pretty northern custom, although the gardens are, as a rule, still resplendent with chrysanthemums and roses at that time of the year.

The funerals of two of our prominent citizens, held recently on the same day, kept the florists busy to such an extent that their entire stock was used up. Including the different bunches, over a hundred pieces, mostly of an exceptionally rich and beautiful character, were sent to each funeral.

Although the prices of high grade flowers are pretty steep, the large shipments received, as well as those grown here, find ready sale, and an all-around satisfaction in regard to this season's business finds ready expression.

At the time of writing, although two weeks from Christmas, the flower stores were putting on their holiday attire. Poinsettias in pans, Begonia Lorraine, cyclamen, ericas, orchids, etc., as well as fine specimens of various ferns and foliage plants and made-up jardinieres, are displayed in fine quality and great profusion in the show windows and stores. The prospects for an especially good holiday trade are bright and the stock on the hands of our growers and retailers is up to any demand.

The most varied weather conditions imaginable prevailed during the last two weeks. The thermometer ranged during that time from 50 degrees to 84 degrees during the day and from 30 degrees to 74 degrees at night, which keeps the growers constantly on the alert. During the last few days we have been enjoying balmy spring weather. Some of the outside flowers are gone and, sorry to say, all the exposed flowers of poinsettias, which are nearly every Christmas to be seen by hundreds all over the city in all their gorgeousness, were greatly damaged by the killing frost a week ago. The early planted Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths will soon be in bloom outdoors and help, to a certain extent, to make good for the loss sustained.

TOLEDO, O.

Club Exhibition.

The Toledo Florists' Club held its exhibition December 7. Prizes were offered for the best cyclamens, primroses, Lorraine begonias, and for the best cineraria in a Toledo-made pot.

Among the exhibitors were Christ Winterich, of Defiance, who received the first and second prizes for his cyclamens; the Wonsetler Greenhouses, of Bryan, O.; John Barrow, who received the first prize for his Chinese primroses, and S. N. Peck, the second prize. J. L. Schiller exhibited cyclamens and primroses, and Krueger Bros. showed cyclamens. Mr. Winterich also showed some fine Whitmani, and received the first prize for his begonias. Mr. Peck took the prize for his cineraria in a Toledo-made pot.

All the plants exhibited showed careful growing and were well worth seeing. After the prizes were awarded, the prize-winning plants were auctioned off and the receipts amounted to $10, which was added to the sum in the club's treasury. The exhibition was again held in the store of S. N. Peck, who kindly treated his numerous guests to a feast of apples.

Various Notes.

Last week was society week. The play given for the benefit of the north settlement of Toledo, by the society young people, brought the florists a good number of orders. I think the business was pretty evenly divided, and all of the florists had a share in the stock of flowers handed over the footlights of the Valentine theater.

Miss Helen Patten has been having quite a little trouble. Last week she fell and broke her wrist. She is, however, getting along nicely, although it is in a cast. In addition to this, an automobile, passing her store, ran over a brick, which gave it such great sidelong impetus that it went right through her window.

One of the best ranges of greenhouses in the city today is that of Harry Heinl. He now has twenty-six houses, all in good shape and modern in every detail. There are seven houses of roses—Killarney and White Killarney, Richmond, My Maryland and Kaiserin. He has six houses of carnations, and in his other houses he has bedding plants, etc. For the Christmas trade he has 2,500 poinsettia plants. He also has some fine azaleas, stevias, rubrum lilies, smilax, etc. B. B. S.

We want your order. You need our stock. If it's "Craig Quality" it is all right.

are known all over the country and are in greater demand each year. Having increased our glass area over 50,000 square feet, we are in a position to meet our fast increasing business. Our stock for the Holidays is superior in quality to any we have ever grown, notwithstanding the high standard we have maintained for years. You are cordially invited to call and inspect our stock, which includes the following, in the sizes herein listed:

PRICE LIST, CHRISTMAS, 1910

BEGONIA GLOIRE DE LORRAINE

The largest and finest stock of this beautiful Christmas plant in the country. The plants have been grown cool and are sure to give satisfaction.

3-inch pots (for basket work).....$20 per 100
4-inch pots .....$35 per 100
5-inch pots, heavy .....$6 and $9 per doz.
6-inch pots .....$9 and $12 per doz.
7-inch pots .....$15 and $18 per doz.
8-inch pots .....$24 and $30 per doz.

We give the same careful attention to all orders, both great and small.

BEGONIA LONSDALE

We have a large stock of this light sport at the same prices as quoted above for Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This variety is considered far superior to the original type, making a finer shaped plant, and holding the flowers much better. The color is a little lighter than the original Lorraine.

BEGONIA LONSDALE—Dark Sport

This variety holds its flowers better than any other, and owing to its great "keeping qualities," it will become a universal favorite.

4-inch pots .....$35 per 100
5-inch pots .....$50 and $75 per 100
6-inch pots .....$1 each
7-inch pots .....$1.50 each

BEGONIA GLORY OF CINCINNATI

This variety is endorsed by all the leading retail florists and will in time displace Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. Do not overlook this grand plant when placing your order for Christmas.

5-inch pots .....$1 each
6-inch pots .....$1.50 each
7-inch pots .....$2 and $2.50 each

AZALEAS

Our Azaleas were never in finer condition for Christmas and include one full house of that sterling variety "Madame Petrick," also a large quantity of "Hexe" and "Vervaeneana."

5½-inch pots, 6-inch pots, 7-inch pots ...$9, $12, $15 and $18 per doz.

Larger plants at $2, $2.50 and $3 each.

BOUGAINVILLEA SANDERIANA

We have an exceptionally fine lot of shapely specimens at $2.50, $3 and $3.50 each.

These plants will command big prices when in bloom next Winter and at Easter time.

GARDENIA VEITCHII

These are very strong plants and will make grand stock for Winter blooming.

2¼-in. pots, heavy....$8 per 100; $75 per 1000
4 -in. pots, heavy..$20 per 100; $180 per 1000
6 -in. pots, heavy.....$50 per 100
7 -in. pots, heavy....$9 per doz.; $70 per 100

FINE FERNS

Ready For Immediate Retail Sale

We have an exceptionally fine and large stock of Ferns in the following varieties—first-class plants of exceedingly good value—plants that will please the most critical buyers, both in regard to quality and value.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima (improved). The finest of this type—never showing a Boston frond; has not reverted in the last four years. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.; 8-in., $12.00 per doz.; large specimens in 12-in. pans, $3.00 to $5.00 each.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima Compacta. This bears the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii does to Bostoniensis. It is a dwarf, compact plant, especially fine in the small sizes. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scholzeli. Fine plants, 3½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in pans, $6.00 per doz.; 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis. Extra strong plants, 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scottii. 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Small Ferns for Fern Pans. Best and hardiest varieties, assorted: Pteris Mayii, Wimsetti, Adiantoides, Aspidium Tsussimense, Crytomium Falcatum, etc. Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, $3.50 per 100.

CROTONS. Nice assortment, well colored, 5-in., $9.00 per dozen.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

From present indications it looks like a merry Christmas for the florists of the Flower City. Someone has figured that close to $50,000 is spent here at holiday time for greens, flowers and plants.

There is a strong demand for mistletoe, holly, laurel, southern smilax, ground pine and ferns. There seems to be no increase in price of greens over last year, and no shortages, unless it be in pine.

American Beauties and carnations are at the top of the market, and before Christmas bid fair to reach a high record mark; one dealer expressed the opinion that Beauties would reach $24 a dozen. Violets are worth from 75 cents to $1 a bunch.

Various Notes.

The department stores use large quantities of southern smilax and laurel for decorations at this season; the five stores in this city spend close to $2,500 for these two items, while the smaller stores will, in the aggregate, use considerably more than the big stores.

E. C. Campbell, of 555 Lyell avenue, suffered a small loss by fire on Saturday afternoon, December 10. The damage was confined to a barn and contents located near the greenhouses.

E. F. R.

Shelburne Falls, Mass.—L. R. Fuller ships considerable quantities of cut flowers to A. M. Cheney, at Orange, Mass.

Forest City, Ia.—Willard Secor, proprietor of the Hill City Greenhouses, has found pure peat to be a most excellent medium for ferns and begonias. Last fall he filled his fern benches with this material and says the stock never did better. The peat is clean and absolutely free from bugs or worms, and it also holds the moisture longer than the ordinary compost.

Holyoke, Mass.—G. H. Sinclair has worked up quite a collection of cypripediums. His cattleyas are fine, but affected with the fly. His Lælia anceps will be in early, possibly for Christmas. He has a seedling white carnation which looks promising. Quite a little excitement was caused when a deer jumped through the roof of the house of seedling carnations. Only slight damage was done and someone had a venison supper.

NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

Trade last week was good. Flowers are rather scarce, especially carnations. These retail at 60 cents and 75 cents per dozen. Roses are of good quality and retail at $1.50 and $2 per dozen. Violets sell fairly well at $1.50 per hundred blooms, snapdragons at 75 cents per dozen. Not many mums are to be seen; a couple of weeks more will see their finish. It has been a satisfactory season for these noble flowers. Stevia and candytuft help out a good deal. We had our first real snow storm last week, also a taste of cold weather, which made the greenhouse men shovel coal.

William P. Peirce is showing some nice flowers in his window on Union street. E. H. Chamberlain was in Boston recently, stocking up for Christmas, with flowering plants, etc.

E. Y. Peirce is cutting some fine Killarney roses, both pink and white.

R. H. Woodhouse is cutting some elegant Fair Maid carnations. His roses will be in good crop for Christmas.

W. L.

Fire destroyed the two greenhouses of W. E. Mosher December 3. The loss was about $2,000 and the insurance had run out only a few days before. The fire caught in the boiler shed.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Trade for the last two weeks has been fair only. The dark weather has shortened the cut flower supply and from the present outlook flowers will not be overabundant at Christmas. The carnation outlook is none too bright, as they have been off crop considerably for some time. There are some callas and Harrisii lilies to be had, the same being cleaned up daily at $12.50 to $15 per hundred.

The supply of cattleyas is short. Some Percivaliana can be had, but not in large quantities. Sweet peas and home grown violets are not more than enough to go around. Paper Whites and Romans find a ready market. Some few mums are to be had, but not in quantity. Poinsettias are plentiful this year.

The outlook for potted plants is good, as there are plenty of fine azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamen and Lorraines to be had. Holly, laurel and mistletoe are

Look over our list of Christmas plants in Dec. 8th issue of the Review, and write us if you need anything. We can assure you of plenty of fine Jerusalem Cherries, Celestial Peppers and Azaleas. In Whitmani ferns we have an especially fine lot of 4, 5, 6, 7 and 8-inch plants. You can double your money on them without any trouble. We also have a large stock of 2½ and 3-inch, and the same with Plumosus; best stock we have ever had. Get your Christmas orders in quick.

Note:—In our Dec. 8th adv. the 4-inch Poinsettias listed at 15 cents should have read 25 cents, as it was an error that was overlooked.

Pat. Applied for

You can Kill the Bugs by using the

Bate Evaporator

It consists of a bottomless pan fastened to the upper side of the heating pipe, so the heating pipe is left exposed and forms the bottom of the pan. The pan is held in place by a yoke, or clamp, that goes around the under side of the heating pipe, the clamp being provided with a setscrew which pulls the pan down firmly on to the pipe.

Any of the popular brands of nicotine liquid insecticides can be used. It will take three pans to one house 25x100, or one pan to 6000 to 8000 cubic feet of air space. One ounce of the insecticide to a pan.

Easy to install. Easy to use. Saves its cost in economy of nicotine. Try one house and be convinced.

NOW THEN,

BE WIDE-AWAKE AND PREPARE FOR THE HOLIDAYS. It won't pay you to let others get ahead of you. Don't look at what is behind, but go right straight forward. Make a break for GODFREY ASCHMANN'S greenhouses, to the old reliable firm who always looked after your interests and who protect you in your trade. We have no department store customers. We sell strictly to the trade only. If you have room, now is the time to purchase your supply, while the weather is mild and shipments can be made safely. It is of no use to look elsewhere for cheaper prices.

☛NOTICE.—The House of Godfrey Aschmann has no connection with any other house.

Leader in Ferns

Scottii, Scholzeli, Whitmani and Boston

6 houses stocked with them, 10,000 in all sizes and varieties now ready, never before better than this year, 5, 6 and 7-in., 40c, 50c, 75c. Same varieties, as big as a bushel basket, $1.00 to $1.25.

Leader in Azalea Indica

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine

Palms, etc.

Lead you into wealth

A house full of Godfrey Aschmann's Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in bloom and bud for Christmas, ready for shipment.
We have Begonia Gloire de Lorraine to beat the band.

Begonia Gloire de Lorraine. This is another of our specialties. We have a secret in growing them to perfection, only known to us, giving them a rich, deep color; stand shipping well, traveling 2000 to 3000 miles without the least bit of injury if properly handled. We have a big house full in No. 1 condition, 6 to 7-in. sizes, in bud and partly in bloom, ready for immediate sale or for the holidays. Everybody knows that last Christmas we had the best Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in the market. They were cracker-jacks, indeed! We have the deep pink and the light pink (Lonsdale) varieties, 6-in. pots, 50c, 75c, $1.00; 7-in. pots, $1.25 to $1.50. 3-in. pots, if transplanted soon, will make good 4-in. pots for Xmas. If you have room order now, because they are always scarce at Xmas.

Orders for 6-in. Begonia Gloire de Lorraine will not be filled unless other sizes are called for, too.

Begonia Erfordii, newest improved strain. This variety is always in bloom during the whole winter, Xmas and Easter, 4-in. pots, in bud or bloom. 20c.

Begonia Rex, 4-in., 20c.

AZALEA INDICA.

Already forced for Christmas, in bloom, stored away in cold houses ready for shipment. Mme. Petrick, pink, 50c, 75c, $1.00 to $1.25. Deutsche Perle (pure double white), Simon Mardner (large double pink), Vervaeneana (double rose variegated), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50 each.

☛Remember, only the best healthy plants must be selected for Xmas forcing; poor, weak Azaleas won't force successfully for Xmas. Don't order many 75-cent ones, because we won't have them. Larger sizes and also white ones must accompany the order.

Easter Varieties. For Easter forcing we have only the well known standard American varieties, such as Mme. Van der Cruyssen, pink (very scarce this fall in Belgium), 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each. Niobe, double white. We have a large stock of this, but mostly in large sizes, $1.00, $1.50, $1.75 to $2.00; some, but a limited quantity, at 50c, 60c to 75c. Deutsche Perle, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Helene Theleman, light pink, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. President Oswald de Kerchove, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Schryveriana and Empress of India, large, double, variegated, 50c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00. Professeur Wolters, 70c, $1.00 to $1.50. Simon Mardner, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50. Vervaeneana and Apollo, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00; dozen or 100 at same prices.

Remember! Small azaleas are scarce this year in Belgium, therefore I had to buy mostly large sizes.

We reached the climax in quantity, quality and price. ☛Just think, we sell you an Araucaria Excelsa, 4-year-old, as big as an elephant, 6-in.pot, 4, 5 to 6 tiers, 20 to 25 inches high, for only 60 cents to 75 cents. A Jumbo for $1.00 and a Holy Terror, as wide as a bushel basket, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, 5, 6 to 7 tiers, for only $1.25 to $1.50

Araucarias Our Specialty

No Arguments Needed

Our importation of Araucarias is a Record Breaker this year. We reached the pole and there we are, can't go any higher. We are in the control of the American market. Not only Araucaria Excelsa, but we have Araucaria Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca to beat the band, all good enough to decorate the White House, kings' and emperors' cozy spots, bankers', preachers', merchants' and the poor man's Christmas dinner table.

Where will you go to see another such show? Where will you go to get cheaper prices? I tell you it is of no use for you to hunt up cheaper prices because there is no such thing. Stay right at home and write an order to Godfrey Aschmann.

Araucaria Excelsa, raised from top cuttings only (no seedlings), 2, 3, 4 to 5-year-old, 5, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, 15, 18, 20, 25 to 30 inches high, 50c, 60c, 75c, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. Robusta Compacta and Excelsa Glauca, 6-in. pots, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each.

Dracaena Bruanti, 25 to 30 inches high, perfect green foliage from bottom up, 6-in. pots, 40c to 50c; well suited for store and house decorations because they stand cold, dust and heat.

Latania Borbonica, 30 to 35 inches high, 6 to 7-in. pots, 50c, 75c to $1.00.

Kentia Forsteriana, in fine shape, 5½ to 6-in. pots, 4, 5 and 6-year-old, 30, 35, 40 and 45 inches high, 75c, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50, $2.00 to $2.50.

Kentia Belmoreana, 5, 6 to 7-year-old, 5½, 6 to 7-in. pots, $1.00, $1.25, $1.50 to $2.00 each; 4-in., 20 to 25 inches high, 20c to 25c.

Kentia Belmoreana, combination plants, 3 plants in 6 and 7-in. pots, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, $1.00, $1.25 to $1.50 each. This is a special bargain, seldom offered.

Cocos Weddelliana, 3-in. pots, 15c, 18c and 20c.

Areca Lutescens, made up, 3 plants in a pot, 6 to 7-in. pots, 40 inches high, $1.50 to $2.00.

Ficus Elastica, rubber plant, 5-in. pots, 25c; 6-in., nicely staked up, 25, 30 to 35 inches high, 40c, 50c to 75c.

Pteris Wilsoni, 6-in. pans, nice and bushy, 25c, 30c and 35c.

Ferns for dishes, big assortment, 2½-in. pots, $4.00 per 100.

Nephrolepis Todeaoides (London fern), 2½-in., 5c; 3-in., 7c.

Nephrolepis Giatrasii, this is a new fern, an improvement on the Scottii and much shorter and bushier, 5¼-in. pots, 50c; 3-in., 25c.

Asparagus Plumosus, 2½-in., very strong, 4c, $4.00 per 100: small, 3c; 3-in., 7c.

Asparagus Sprengeri, 2½-in., 3c; 4-in., 10c.

Hydrangea Otaksa, pot-grown, 6-in., 25c, 35c to 40c; 7-in., 50c. Only pot-grown, will force successfully for Easter.

Solanum or Jerusalem Cherries, our well-known prize strain, the multiflorum, full of ripe berries, 6-in., 25c, 35c, 40c to 50c.

Cineraria Hybrida, Aschmann's well-known strain, 2-in. pots, $3.00 per 100.

Primula obconica, our best strain, 5½ to 6-in. pots, in bloom and bud, 25c to 35c.

Primula Chinensis, best strain, 5¼-in., in bloom for Christmas, or now, John F. Rupp's well known strain, $2.50 per doz.

Cyclamen, 4 best colors, 3-in., ready for 4-in., 15c; 4-in. pots, ready for 5 in., in bud, 25c; 5¼ in., 35c.

Poinsettias, 4-in., 25c.

All plants 25 at 100 rate. Cash with order, please. All plants must travel at risk of purchaser only.
When ordering state if plants are to be shipped in or out of pots.

Various Notes.

The Smith & Young Co. has been sending in some good Beauties. Their Brides and Maids are also good.

Hartje & Elder are contemplating adding to their range next spring.

Geo. Gause, of Richmond, spent several days in the city last week. He was one of the candidates taking the work of the Scottish Rite.

Walter Coles was in the city last week attending the Shriners' ceremonial. He never lets one of these get by.

Walter Bertermann has been having considerable sport of late hunting rabbits at night in an auto. With the aid of a searchlight, which blinds the rabbits, he could shoot at them three or four times, if necessary, before they would run away. He says he got sixteen one night recently.

John Grande experienced an accident last week which luckily was not more serious. His small boy went down to the pasture to bring the cow home. He was riding a horse, driving the cow down a railroad track, when a train came along and knocked all three clear of the track, killing both the horse and cow. The boy gathered himself together and ran home. In the meantime the train had stopped and the crew searched some little time before they located him at home. He was not seriously injured.

A. Wiegand & Sons' Christmas stock is looking good. This firm has a fine lot of poinsettias, azaleas and Lorraines coming on.

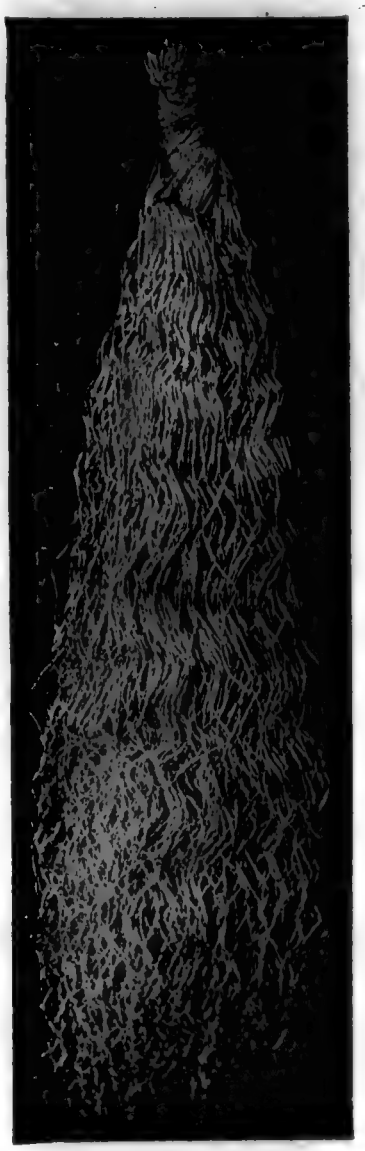
PANDANUS TOO COLD AND WET.

Will you kindly tell us what is the trouble with our Pandanus utilis? They did nicely all summer, but now are dying. We keep them in a temperature of 50 degrees and in a shady place, and we water them three times a week. A customer, to whom we sold a nice one, reports to us that she kept hers in a light, sunny place, in a temperature of 70 to 76 degrees in the daytime and 60 degrees at night, and kept it quite wet. Hers, too, is nearly all dead. Should they be run on the dry side? Any information on the culture of pandanus will be greatly appreciated.

L. M. S. & C.

The pandanus in question have evidently been kept too cold and wet. A night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees is the best for these plants, and full sunshine should be given them through the greater part of the year. If unable to maintain such a temperature at night, then keep the plants on the dry side. The combination of low temperature and excessive moisture is injurious to pandanus in general. W. H. T.



PROPAGATING ECHEVERIAS.

I have thirty-four Echeveria metallica which are growing nicely, but they have all gone to seed. They are grown from cuttings started in September. I know they are of no account as they are, but they have a good base of roots and I am hoping they may send forth more shoots or main stalks later. I am anxious to get a start, as they are scarce. W. H. S.

Echeveria metallica can be increased by cuttings taken at this season. One plan is to cut off the top of the plants, dress the bottom part and stand them on the top of empty 3-inch or 4-inch pots until they are well dried out and roots have started to form. Give no water at all. Then pot off singly in quite sandy soil. Do not water for some days and always in small quantities. Old stems, cut off and placed closely in flats of sandy soil, will make small growths along the stems if kept warm and dry. These can be pricked off in flats or potted singly.

When there are no cuttings and stock is scarce, leaf propagation is the best. Pull off the leaves by hand. Lay these on flats of dry sand in a warm propagating house. Do not water at all. In time small plants will form at the ends of the leaves and these can be dibbled in flats of sandy soil or potted off. Always use great care in watering; anything like a soaking must never be given, or the little plants will assuredly rot. These succulents need a light water supply and it is better to err on the dry, rather than the wet side, with them, especially during winter. C. W.

Connellsville, Pa.—George Schomer has completed the erection of an addition to his greenhouses on East Fairview avenue. The new buildings cover an area of 7,000 square feet. He will also open a downtown store in the Wyman hotel.

Greenhouse Heating.

November was a month of unusually heavy coal consumption in greenhouses, and December has started out the same way. Better have the bins full when the big storms come to tie up the railroads.

DEFECTIVE INSTALLATION.

I should like to get a little information in regard to my greenhouse, as the piping does not heat as it should. The house runs north and south. It is 13x45, eight feet high at the center and three feet at the sides, with twelve inches of glass in the east wall.

There are five lengths of 1¼-inch hot water pipe on each side, as returns, and two lengths of 2-inch pipe as flows. My heater is not as low as I should like, as the flow has only two feet of rise at the heater and it rises about six inches in the forty-five feet. The returns drop about six inches in the length of the house and about eighteen inches more at the heater. The flow pipes are connected to the bottom of the coils. I am located in Massachusetts. I have a Spence heater, No. 50. Can you tell me what is the reason for my trouble? E. O. P.

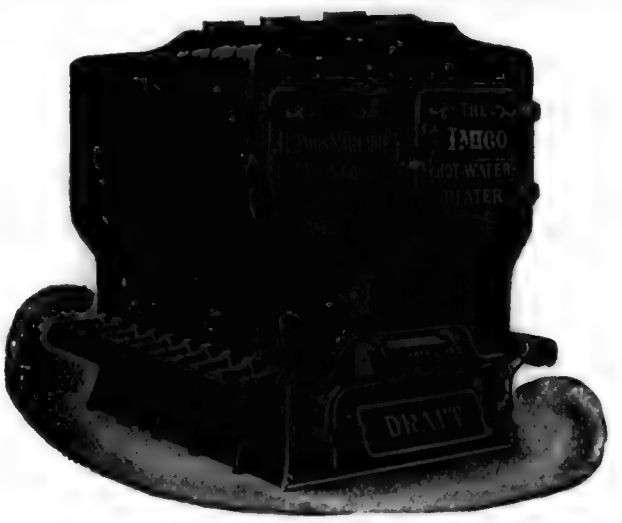
In addition to the difficulty mentioned—that is, the relative heights of the heater and the coils—there are probably three things which affect the circulation, and two of these can be readily corrected. The third defect, which would require a complete change in the returns, is that 1¼-inch pipe is used for hot water. This should only be used when the coils are well above the top of the heater and when the houses are quite short, unless a closed system is installed.

The temperature desired is not stated, but the amount of radiation in the house is sufficient for 60 degrees.

The two things that may be done to improve the circulation are: To run the flow pipe at a slight fall, after raising it as high as possible, and to connect the flow pipes to the top of the coils instead of to the bottom.

PIPING A CUCUMBER HOUSE.

I wish to pipe a house for cucumbers. Please tell me how much piping to use for hot water, in this Massachusetts climate, making perhaps three-quarters of the pipes 2-inch and the rest 1¼-inch. The house is 20x50, with 12-foot rafters. There are 1,200 square feet of glass in the roof, 300 in the sides and 250 in the ends, making a total of 1,750 square feet of glass. There is no other exposed surface. A. F. J.



While 1¼-inch hot water pipe may be used with fair results in houses fifty feet in length, especially if the piping can be carried well above the top of the heater, the amount of radiation required in a cucumber house is so great that it will be better to use 2-inch pipe for the returns, and thus lessen the number required.

It is suggested that three 2½-inch flows be used, one under the ridge and the others on the plates, starting from the heater either with one 3½-inch pipe or three 2½-inch, according to the openings. Carry the flows to a height one foot below the bottom of the ridge, and connect with the expansion tank. Then run the flows through the house,

Save Your Stock From Destruction

By a sudden cold snap or a rapid thaw

HOW? Because it is an accurate, fully tested thermometer, showing the correct temperature at all times, and combines a device which will ring a bell at your bedside when the greenhouse gets either too hot or too cold. Just the protection you have wanted all these years.

We guarantee that results will be obtained at all times. This device has been subjected to the severest tests in our laboratory for over two years, and at the same time has given entire satisfaction, under all conditions, to many users in the trade.

All you have to do is to set the pointers at the highest and lowest temperatures you want and the thermometer will do the rest. It will ring a good, loud bell when either point is reached, and saves all worry over trouble from sudden temperature changes.

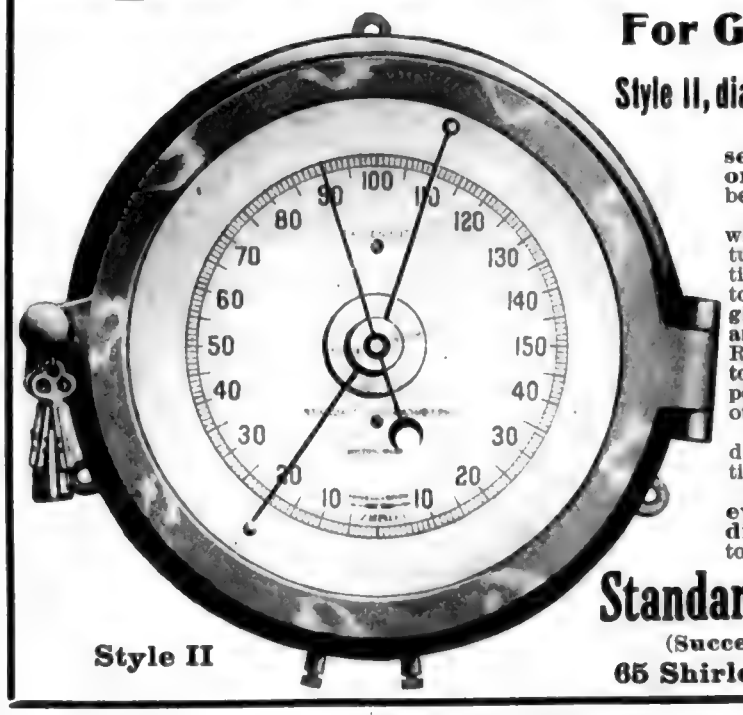
giving them a slight fall. At the farther end drop the middle flow pipe down to a point just below the level of the plate, and with it feed six 2-inch returns, three of which should run either way, across the end of the house and along the sides back to the heater. Use each of the other flow pipes to feed a coil of six 2-inch returns to run on the side walls back to the heater.

Keep all of the returns as high as possible. Connect the return pipes to the boiler either with one 3½-inch, two 3-inch or three 2½-inch pipes. There should be gate valves on one-third of the returns, at the higher end, so that a part of the circulation can be cut off in mild weather.

If 1¼-inch pipe must be used for a part of the returns, substitute nine for six of the 2-inch returns.



TWO VEGETABLE HOUSES.

I am building two houses, each 20x 100, with twenty inches of glass in the sides. They run north and south. There are raised benches in one house, but not in the other. The houses are designed primarily for growing vegetable plants in the spring, but I should like to have sufficient heating capacity to use them for winter vegetables, if required. Please suggest a plan for hot water heating, in this Michigan climate. W. H. B.

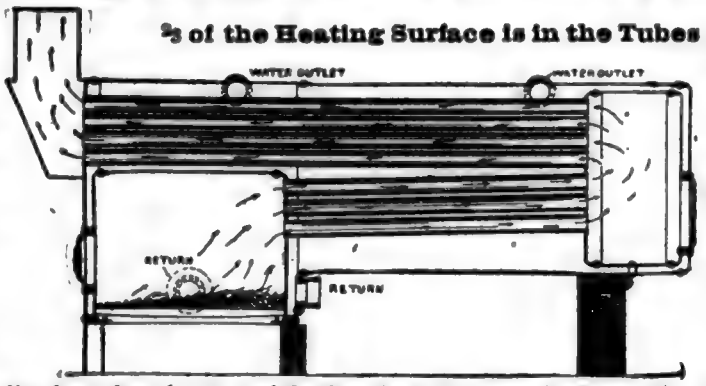
For the house in which beds are used, run one 2½-inch flow under the ridge and one 2-inch flow on each plate. Use the 2½-inch flow to feed four 2-inch returns, two of which should be carried each way on the end and side walls, back to the heater. With each of the 2-inch flow pipes, feed two 2-inch returns to run on the side walls.

In the house with raised benches, use the same method of piping, with this exception: Instead of carrying four returns from the 2½-inch flow on the side walls, connect it with five 2-inch returns under the benches. This should give a temperature of 55 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero.

FERN INDUSTRY AT BENNINGTON.

More than $20,000 was paid out during the months of September, October, and the first half of November to gatherers of wild ferns in the four towns, Woodford, Stamford, Searsburg and Readsboro, in Bennington county, Vermont. In this sum is not included the outlay for packing and hauling, but it comprises the actual wages of the pickers. It involves a mathematical problem that is easily solved, as the pickers were paid by the piece, 4 cents a hundred, and as there have been over 50,000,000 ferns shipped out of the mountains this season, the sum total is easily reached. All of 25,000,000 were sent out from the freight house of the Rutland railroad, in Bennington, and the shipments from the other side of the mountain, by the way of North Adams, Mass., have been even larger.



After the slopes of the Taconic mountains, which run through the southeastern half of Bennington county, were stripped of their evergreen timber, the original growth was followed by a forest of hardwood and with it came the ferns, which in many sections completely cover the ground. Only two varieties are used by the greenhouses,

The installation consists of 2 No. 5 Morehead Return Steam Traps, one working on a battery of Tubular Boilers, developing, in cold weather, 600 H. P.

The Morehead Traps are feeding these boilers entirely with the exception of just what water is wasted by leaks through valve stems, etc.

The plant is furnishing steam to 12 houses having 300,000 square feet of glass area and containing 184,000 feet of steam pipe to keep dry.

the hardy rock and the serrated fern, for the reason that they are tough and capable of withstanding the rough handling to which they are subjected during picking and shipping.

On the Bennington side of the mountain the firm of L. B. Brague & Son, of Hinsdale, Mass., has this season secured the larger portion of the crop. This firm, which has a cold storage plant at Pittsfield and also one at Springfield, went into the field early in September with the purpose of securing 20,000,000 ferns, and managed to secure 13,000,000. Two Greek firms that brought gangs of pickers from New York, shipped to that city nearly as many. There was but little rain during the early fall and the picking was continued until the first snow covered the ground.

The pickers are paid 4 cents a hundred for the ferns, tied in bundles of twenty-five each. Some of the experts during the present season have at that rate earned between $7 and $8 in a single day. The ferns were shipped from the station either in crates or baskets, the latter method being used by the Greek firms in New York. Brague & Son shipped one carload as far west as Denver.

During the last two years the industry has grown to such an extent that the lumber companies that control the mountain land on which the ferns are gathered now lease the picking privileges, instead of permitting free access to the property, as was formerly the case.

The business is rather precarious. Some years the ferns keep well in cold storage and good profits are made. Not infrequently, however, there are heavy losses. The ferns, for some reason that has not yet been discovered, turn black or yellow and become worthless.

COMPOSTS.

Take advantage of spells of pleasant weather to cut and stack a good pile of sod for another season. A generous loam pile is always a cheering sight. If for potting or for use in benches, layers of cow manure at intervals will make a compost which, when chopped down and turned over in spring, will be good for almost any plants, whether in pots or benches.

Before severe cold and snows arrive, see that a good supply of loam, leafmold, sand, moss, decayed cow manure and any other accessories for potting are gotten under cover. It is no joke digging for these through ice and snow and it saves time and patience to secure an adequate stock now.

STORING AZALEAS AND ROSES.

Can imported azaleas and roses be stored without injury in a dark cellar or pit after receiving and potting them? I want to force these for Easter and spring trade. W. C. K.

Both azaleas and roses can be safely stored in a cellar or pit until wanted for forcing. It would be better, however, if the plants had some light, especially the azaleas. Any temperature just above the freezing point will answer well. C. W.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration of the chrysanthemums, Smith's Advance, Unaka, Chrysolora, Paper White, Minta, Morristown, Oceanic, Glen Cove, Lenox, Tarrytown, Poughkeepsie, Madison and Dick Witterstaetter, by Elmer D. Smith & Co., Adrian, Mich., becomes complete.

Registration of Geraniums.

Public notice is hereby given that F. H. De Witt, of Wooster, O., offers for registration the geraniums described below. Any person objecting to the registrations, or to the use of the proposed names, is requested to communicate with the secretary at once. Failing to receive objection to the registrations, the same will be made three weeks from this date.

RAISER'S DESCRIPTIONS.

Panama, originated in 1909, by F. H. De Witt, being a cross between Dryden and Pamela; it is a strong grower and much brighter in color than Dryden; the trusses of bloom are very large and have long, stiff stems; very free in bloom; single flowers.

White Cloud, originated in 1909, by F. H. De Witt; it is a cross between Mlle. Anastasie Lecadre and Pamela; growth of medium height; clusters of large foliage of medium size; color, pure white; single flowers.

Ruby, originated in 1909, by F. H. De Witt; it is a seedling of S. A. Nutt, crossed with Pamela; growth similar to S. A. Nutt; large clusters on long stems; color, dark currant red, suffused with violet; semi-double flowers.

General Wooster, originated in 1909, by F. H. De Witt; a seedling of S. A. Nutt, crossed with Jean Viaud; plant of dwarf habit, thick foliage, large trusses borne on heavy, rigid stems; color, rose pink; semi-double flowers.

Barnaby Rudge, originated in 1909, by F. H. De Witt; it is a cross between S. A. Nutt and Red Wing; very strong grower; free in bloom; compact trusses; color, rich carmine; double flowers.

Bright Eyes, originated in 1909, by F. H. De Witt; a cross between Jules Lametre and Jean Viaud; of the Cyclops type; growth dwarf and compact; the florets are very large, the trusses of medium size and freely produced; color, bright red, shading to violet, with an unusually large white eye; single flowers.

H. B. Dorner, Sec'y.

BURLINGTON, VT.

John Wilson is the oldest in the trade here and has made an enviable record. He reports excellent business.

August Gebiecke is another prosperous member of the craft. It is interesting to hear him relate his experiences of six years as botanist with Klunder, in New York. He is a capable grower; a bench of his Bouvardia was especially fine. He finds a good sale on rosemary among his sentimental German patrons. Grown from cuttings, it makes an excellent pot plant.

W. E. Peters is much pleased with the increase of business since his new store was opened. It is a gem, with everything in keeping. M.

It's Like Receiving Interest on an Investment to be running a pumping engine that will not cause you to pay out large sums for repairs continually. to waste your time and lose your crops while the machine is being fixed up, and finally to have to replace the entire outfit.

Read these extracts from two letters sent us by a Pennsylvania florist:

The Standard Pump & Engine Co., Cleveland, O. Aug. 14, 1909.
Dear Sirs:—Last fall I put in a pump and engine, and your man was here and told me that I wouldn't be satisfied with it. I wish I had taken his advice, as it is all worn out now and I have always had trouble with it. Now I wish to put in one of yours.

The Standard Pump & Engine Co., Cleveland, O. Feb. 23, 1910.
Dear Sirs:—I think that you have the best machine on the market. It has never given us a minute's trouble since we have had it, and never refused to run.

THE DEWDROP.

A Tale of Today.

Johannes was a great grower, for had he not accomplished that which no one else could do? He could grow dewdrops! All the other growers tried and all failed. Some said it was the soil, some that it was the stock, some that the good people would not pay enough for dewdrops, but all save Johannes and one other have ceased to try.

Johannes had the best dewdrops; he knew it. He went straightway to Wilhelm, a merchant of the city of sisterly friendship; he said: "Wilhelm, take all my dewdrops and do thou secure me as many ducats as thou canst therefrom." So Wilhelm went to Horatius and they made a bargain that Horatius was to have the little dewdrops when he was minded to have them, the price to be dependent on the abilities of buyer and seller.

So they strove together, Wilhelm and Horatius, throughout that entire season over the price. When it was clear, Horatius said: "See, the sun shines; dewdrops will be plentiful." When it was cold, cloudy and dark, Wilhelm said: "See the bitter weather; little dewdrops will not open today." And the price went down and up like the mercury in the thermometer throughout that entire season, and sometimes Wilhelm got the upper hand and sometimes Horatius, but in the end Horatius prevailed, and the little dewdrops were of scarcely more value than any other crop that groweth under glass when all is told.

So Johannes was wrathful and he turned his back to the city of sisterly friendship and sought the city of strife, and there he found a great merchant, Francesca by name, and said unto him: "Francesca, take my dewdrops." And Francesca took the dewdrops and did even better than Wilhelm had done. And when Horatius heard that the merchant Francesca, in the city of strife, had possession of the little dewdrops, he straightway sent other merchants from the city of sisterly friendship, three in number, to Johannes, charged with the mission of securing the little dewdrops, and one by one the merchants came to Johannes and they spoke fairly to him, but he would not listen to them. Phil.

SPANISH IRIS.

I have read the several articles published recently in The Review, regarding Spanish iris, but I am still a little undecided on one or two points. I have several thousand in flats outdoors, open to the weather, with no covering. Can they stand this until time to bring them in? We have weather here in Ohio as low as 8 to 15 degrees below zero. When is the time to bring them in? We have some houses with roses planted in them, lying dormant all winter, but on bright days the temperature runs well up. Would it do to put the flats in these houses later in the season, or will the bulbs stand hard freezing? I have also been advised to plant some bulbs in beds in our lettuce houses and cover with straw. Would this do?

L. R. C.

While Spanish irises in the open ground are perfectly hardy, even when the temperature runs down as low as 10 to 15 degrees below zero, it would be inadvisable to expose them to any such cold while in flats. The better plan would be to stand them on a bed of cinders in a coldframe, or on a cellar floor, where there is a fairly good light. These irises start to grow soon after being placed in the soil. About Christmas is a suitable time to house the first batch, in a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees—no higher than the latter figure under any consideration. It will take two months for the earliest batch to flower, but later batches will take less time—five to six weeks, on an average.

The rose houses referred to would answer well for storing the plants, if they had a good coating of perfectly dry leaves or hay, to keep out frost. The temperature of a lettuce house will answer well for irises. If you run these houses during winter, there will be need to cover the beds containing them with straw. Unlike hyacinths, tulips or narcissi, which need to be sprouted an inch or two in the dark before starting, Spanish iris should be kept in the light all the time. C. W.

GREENHOUSE GLASS

It is the ambition of every grower to be successful, and while considerable thought is given to the style of greenhouse to be built,

WHAT OF THE GLASS?

There are a number of important things to be considered in purchasing material of this kind, and as we are the largest jobbers of greenhouse glass in the world, particular care is taken to have the very best BRANDS of glass manufactured shipped on each order. We have made a careful study of this one point, having supplied some of the largest and most successful growers in the country.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

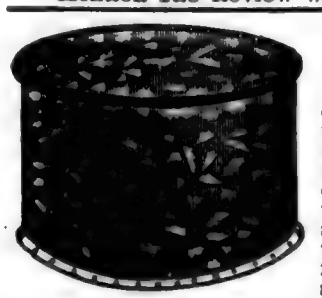
ALBANY, N. Y.

At the last meeting of the Albany Florists' Club the following officers were elected for 1911: President, Frederick A. Danker; vice-president, Edward P. Tracey; treasurer, Patrick Hyde; secretary, Robert Davidson; trustees, William Newport, J. H. Snyder, Charles Sanders, William C. Gloeckner, John J. Berberick and Louis Menand, Sr. These officers will be formally installed at the first meeting of the new year, January 5.

Arthur Zirkman, of Philadelphia, was elected a member. Frederick Goldring, who has served as president for three years, declined a reëlection and will retire from office with the best wishes of the members. Following the business meeting a social time, with refreshments, was enjoyed.

STOCKS FOR EASTER, ETC.

Please advise me whether stocks can be had in bloom for Easter or Memorial day. When should I sow the seeds and what variety? The color I desire is white. C. A. C.



Stocks may be had in flower at both Easter and Memorial day. They are always finer in quality at the later holiday and are at that time much more salable. For Easter flowering sow the seeds the first week in January; for Memorial day allow twelve weeks for the crop from the time of sowing. The plants succeed best in a moderately cool house, kept at 45 to 48 degrees at night; 50 degrees should be the absolute maximum. The earliest white variety is White Column. This throws one strong spike. The giant ten weeks' stocks are of a branching habit and for Memorial day trade are preferable to the White Column. Beauty of Nice is a fine forcing variety and quite popular. The color is delicate peach pink. C. W.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

ADVERTISING FOR RETAILERS.

William Henry Evans, of the Pikes Peak Floral Co., Colorado Springs, Colo., is a believer in the use of printers' ink, and since he has taken over a retail business in his town he has done some original advertising. Thoroughly convinced that the best advertisement is the one which makes a specific offer of something the people are buying at the moment, he nevertheless finds it good business to occasionally drop the straight business talks and use in his space something on the cartoon order, of which the advertisement reproduced herewith is an excellent example.

HOW TO BANK A MANTEL.

Without Defacing Marble or Woodwork.

It is undoubtedly true that wet flower pots should not be placed on a mantel, hard wood or any other kind. Yet, strange to say, this is about the last thing that many florists think about, rather than the first consideration. I have seen sad ruin of walls and woodwork in place after place, which was caused by unthinking and careless people who posed as decorators. Neither wet pots nor dry pots should ever touch wood, brick, marble or other finishing material. When beginning work in a new customer's house I have been met with cautions to be careful of linen, polished wood and expensive walls, which mentally I resented as an insult to my training and principles, and yet, for which I could scarcely censure her, considering her former experiences with shoddy workmanship.

The tin or, still better, galvanized box is the most substantial protection, and while it will increase the expense of the first mantel decoration, it will repay the expense a hundred fold in convenience and safety for almost any mantel decoration. Realize twenty or twenty-five per cent of the cost of these accessories on the occasion of the first decoration in which they are used, if possible. Add a little each succeeding time until they are paid for, then a small amount for wear and tear and finally for profit, in the lump estimate of the decorations.

An Outfit of Mantel Pans.

In order to make this plan adaptable to any size of mantel, make two pans for a mantel, instead of one, say one pan four feet long and one two feet long. The one four feet long will be sufficient for a small mantel and the two together will do for a larger mantel. If thus equipped for several mantels, you could scheme for any size of mantel whatever, for window seats, above window boxes, for porch railing decorations, for sideboards, buffets, or any such thing outside the store or greenhouse, and for window, balcony or counter use in the store. In fact, the mantel pan is one of the most useful articles about the whole establishment.

Four inches of depth and eight to ten inches of width would be the other dimensions for a convenient size of pan. If several mantels are to be decorated at once, which you find will tax your supply of pans, piece out here and there with a jardiniere, covered with moss or ferns. Paint the outside and inside, too, with black or dark foliage green.

General Usefulness of the Pans.

These pans can be used for potted plants, plants out of pots, cut flowers or cut greens. You will not often find it practical, considering the best appearance of the decoration, to use the plants in the pots, and while it is true that the roots will be more or less disturbed by being shifted out of the pots and back again, it is better to do this than to have the decoration suffer. Then, again, they will recover in time in the greenhouse. Withal, the plants do not suffer, on the whole, any more than they would if handled separately and exposed to all kinds of breakage in foliage, stems and flowers.

Cover the bottom of the pan with a layer of dry moss, to absorb any slight amount of moisture that may escape. Have the plants damp, but well drained, before shifting from their pots into the pan, to avoid having water standing in the pan, which, even if it does not leak through, will make its presence felt on the woodwork beneath in a white scum.

Grouping the Plants.

Unless the plants have unusually abundant foliage or wide-spread branches, the root balls should be packed snugly together, and the small vacancies between should be filled with sphagnum or other light moss. Cover the top of the soil, the edge and outside of the pan with fern leaves or green or gray moss. Tip at least a part of the plants over the ends and front of the mantel pan. Relieve the monotony here and there with cut fern leaves. Culls from the specimen plants will often serve this purpose.

Do not fill the back of the pan densely; the foliage and flowers are not graceful when against a solid surface. If there is a mirror behind the mantel, flowers or foliage will reflect to much better advantage if several inches away than they would if exposed to a close view in the mirror.

Do not have the top surface of the mantel group of plants too even. Break it in several places. Pierce the space above with a bold, striking group of lines at or toward one end, and have a contrasting group of lines, by means of a plant that takes a decided droop, either at the base of the tall plant or at the opposite end of the mantel, or both. In other words, climb, fall and average with your lines and groups of lines. Take advantage of pillars, posts and other projections, as a spider stretches his filmy lines from a dandelion stem to a blade of grass.

Avoid the Stiff and Unnatural.

For the sake of maintaining the beauty and natural dignity of the flowers, let us discourage the stiff, formal, choky style of decorations. By way of contrast, suggest to the prospective customer a wild, woodsy touch to her decorations, like an all fern mantel with the possible addition of one tall, graceful vase of chrysanthemums, or a simple group of Begonia Gloire de Lorraine with a plant of long-fronded Adiantum Farleyense. If you earn from your customer or guests the simple commendation that "they look like a corner of the garden," or, "just as if they grew there," you have gained a style of arrangement which closely approaches the ideal. As a necessary condition to this attainment, do not allow any portion of the mantel pan to betray its existence or any of the other purely mechanical contrivances to be seen from any side.

It is wise to have the pans filled at the greenhouse or workroom and all ready to place on the mantel. In this way you have more liberty of action and time for study. A clean work bench and wagon must be provided. Tie the leaves and projecting branches around securely before attempting to handle the pans. When placed on the mantel, readjust the plants and add what few finishing touches may be necessary. Even with clean, smooth pans, take the extra precaution to provide a heavy mat of tin foil or felt paper to place under the mantel pans. This, with the other precautions, will be absolute protection against dampness or scratching.

A Cheaper Method.

A cheaper, but scarcely so safe method for mantel protection, is to cut a ½-inch or ¾-inch board the correct length. Keep the bottom perfectly clean. Cover the top edge with a thin layer of dry moss. Set on the pots—or the plants removed from the pots, with the ball of soil wrapped in tin foil—close together, and pack them securely in place with moss. Wrap them closely in place, around the bottom of the board and over soil and moss, as you fill. By dint of much patience, moss and string, you will have a substantial, transportable decoration, which, when the soil and sides are covered with a green background, will make just as good an appearance as the decoration in the pans, but hardly as protecting to the roots of the plants as the pan. Protect underneath, as was described with the use of the pans.

This board arrangement is quite convenient for cut flower or cut green mantel decorations. Wire and stem long, as for centerpieces or large designs. Arrange loosely or in irregular groups, in a variety of positions, drooping, upright or half erect, and relieve with a generous amount of green of whatever tint and style are most suitable for the size and style of the flowers.

Selecting Suitable Plants.

Do not place plants on the board in such a way that they will be crowded at the back, or will be bent against the hard wall. Some plants of spreading habit will not bear an upright position on a mantel, nor look well tipped toward the front, as, for example, any variety of pandanus, or a Dracæna indivisa. Choose, rather, the slender, towering habit of plant. Any kind of nephrolepis will bear tilting well. Any thick growing, formally trained plants should never be selected for this purpose; keep dwarf conifers or boxwoods away from the mantel shelf. Place these on the hearth, if there is no fire, or at either side on the floor.

If you happen to have a good stock of twig hampers or willow fern baskets of convenient size and color, they might be employed in place of mantel pans, and if the color is neutral they will not require covering over the outside.

Some mantels will be met with that are built with more than one shelf. The upper one may be treated less fully than the lower, but with overhanging lines of foliage or flowers, and with distinct connection with the lower group.

Not much should be attempted with an empty hearth, unless it is unsightly. If so, make a screen of moss to cut it off from view, or set in a good sized bunch of autumn leaves or other hardy foliage, or a good sized plant.

New Delivery Car of A. Wiegand & Sons, Indianapolis.

WIEGAND'S AUTO.

It is in a busy holiday week like the present that an automobile demonstrates its real worth to the retail florist. The accompanying illustration shows the new Overland car recently put into service by A. Wiegand & Sons, Indianapolis. The body of the car was specially designed for the flower firm by the Overland Automobile Co., of Indianapolis. It is five feet high, which readily admits of the carrying of 6-foot palms, and is also equipped with two removable decks, which greatly increase its carrying capacity when only small packages are to be delivered. Messrs. Wiegand state that the delivery proposition has given them no worry since putting this machine into service, as it does the work of two wagons and two boys with bicycles. They are running it a mileage of from sixty to eighty miles a day.

A NUGENT WREATH.

A unique wreath recently was constructed by Young & Nugent, New York, for the unveiling of the monument of Gen. Von Steuben, at Washington, D. C. It was a striking combination of magnolia leaves, acorns and pine cones, the cones and acorns being gilded. The ribbon used was in the national colors of the general. The illustration gives an inadequate idea of the piece, because the combination of green and gold cannot be shown in colors.

WILL INVESTIGATE EXPRESS.

An investigation of all the express companies in this country with a view to determining whether there is an express trust that mulcts the public will be undertaken by the Interstate Commerce Commission early next year. The investigation will consist of the gathering of facts in the field by the experts of the commission and of a series of hearings, at which the express company officials and express shippers will testify. Upon the basis of the findings the commission will be asked to fix maximum rates and rule on the propriety of existing classifications and agreements.

The principal charges which the commission will investigate are the following:

That the rates charged by the express companies are so colossally extortionate that after paying half their revenue to the railroad companies they have been able to cut numerous juicy stock melons, the profits running as high as 300 per cent a year in some cases.

That the express companies generally are controlled by the railroads through the ownership of express stock by the carriers and that the compensation paid the roads by express companies is excessive for the service performed.

That shippers suffer from countless unjust classifications, regulations and arbitrary practices enforced by the express monopoly.

The investigation, according to the shippers, is bound to reveal a combine the existence of which the people have not suspected. They believe it will result not only in a drastic regulation of the express companies, but in a stronger demand for the creation of a comprehensive parcels post system by the government in connection with the mail service.

IRISES.

Please tell me what treatment Japanese and English irises ought to have.
S. G.

The Japanese iris, I. Kæmpferi, is not adapted for forcing. Its place is in the herbaceous garden or in any position where it can have an abundant water supply until it has stopped flowering. In winter the roots must not stand in water, although there is a popular misconception that it is almost aquatic in its requirements.

English iris can be planted outdoors in any well drained soil, in which they will be found quite hardy. They can also be grown in flats or planted in the bench in a cool greenhouse. A night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees should not be exceeded. They will bloom a little later than the Spanish iris, I. Hispanica.

Spanish irises are the best of the bulbous section for forcing. The bulbs arrive early and start to grow at once. At present the earliest batch is about six inches high. A temperature of 45 to 50 degrees at night will be found all right for these. Some growers plant in benches, but flats are just as good and more convenient for small growers. They should have four inches of soil to grow in, and a flat 12x24 inches will hold fifty to seventy-five bulbs. Spanish irises can also be successfully grown outdoors, where they will come up year after year, if not cut down too severely at flowering time.

VARIOUS KINDS OF LEAKS.

[An extract from a paper by Burt C. Blake, of Springfield, O., read at a meeting of the Springfield Florists' Club, December 12, 1910.]

Among the leaks, or apparently small but fast accumulating losses, that are common in the greenhouse, is the waste of time in hunting for tools or equipments because these are mislaid or the supply of them is inadequate. For example, in the busy season there may be a shortage of flats or trays. I have seen several instances within the last year, where the help was running around and hunting for a flat—"Where can I get a flat?"

There are in a day of ten hours only 600 minutes, and they slip away with a quickness that is surprising to the diligent worker; but, on the other hand, they also slip away from the one who is hunting something to do something with. Flats are not the only thing I have seen hunted. I have seen a man hunt for a shovel for an hour; also other tools I have seen hunted by the half hours and quarter hours—enough loss of time to have bought several such tools in the course of a year. To be sure, there are things that will be mislaid at times, but a great deal of time can be saved by having a place for everything and everything in its place; and time is money.

In trying to prevent a waste of time, do not be so "close" with the men as to get their ill will, for they will then go about their work in a grumbling sort of way and you will not get the best results at all times. When you are particularly in a hurry for something to be done, you will undoubtedly get left, for they will not do their work with their whole heart in it.

Your leaks, however, are not labor leaks alone, as you will find on going around on a cold day. There are drafts here and there, and you wonder where they come from. The openings are not noticed in the summer, but as soon as the cold season arrives you discover cracks which you can run a fair-sized cardboard through. Now, don't keep on neglecting this, when one-fourth of a minute will locate the crack. Investigate, locate, and mark it with a piece of "blue lumber" or crayon, and have your repair man watch for the blue marks. Then, when the cracks are stopped or fixed, the repair man can rub the marks off.

An immense amount of cold air sifts in through those cracks, small as they look, but the amount would not be hard to approximate. Say there is an opening one-eighth inch wide at the base of the glass; with seventy-two of those cracks you have found one square foot of cold air sifting in; that is based on glass sixteen inches wide. You can cut down the coal bill just that much, and I venture to say that in a month, in a plant as large as some of you have, you will have no trouble in finding twice seventy-two such cracks as I speak of, for not long ago I visited a place where a half pane, 16x24, was out, and it was below freezing then and snowing at the time.

Speaking of coal leaks, how many times do your boiler flues get cleaned per week? You may remember a time when it was thought that if locomotive boiler flues were cleaned every ten days, that was enough, but I am told that now the flues in fast train engines are cleaned every trip, and in freight engines every round trip. Does it strike you why they need every unit of heat that is in the coal? This is why: To make the time the card calls for.

Going back to labor once more—look out for the practical joker. He will not kill much time himself, but he will have all the help on the place watching him in less than a week, both for the fun he creates and to keep him from playing some prank on the individual himself.

Wreath of Laurel, Pine Cones and Acorns.

CANTERBURY BELLS.

When should I bring in Canterbury bells to have them in bloom for Easter? Also, when should I bring in a batch to bloom for Memorial day, in a temperature of 60 degrees by day and 50 degrees by night? Will a temperature like that suit them?
A. D.

Start the plants for Easter, which will fall on April 16 next year, right after Christmas. Those for Memorial day need not be started until the early part of February. An average night temperature of 50 degrees will be about right. Easter grown Canterbury bells are never of the quality of those flowered later in the season.

Investigate, locate, and mark it with a piece of "blue lumber" or crayon, and have your repair man watch for the blue marks. Then, when the cracks are stopped or fixed, the repair man can rub the marks off.

An immense amount of cold air sifts in through those cracks, small as they look, but the amount would not be hard to approximate. Say there is an opening one eighth inch wide at the base of the glass; with seventy-two of those cracks you have found one square foot of cold air sifting in; that is based on glass sixteen inches wide. You can cut down the coal bill just that much, and I venture to say that in a month, in a plant as large as some of you have, you will have no trouble in finding twice seventy-two such cracks as I speak of, for not long ago I visited a place where a half pane, 16x24, was out, and it was below freezing then and snowing at the time.

Speaking of coal leaks, how many times do your boiler flues get cleaned per week? You may remember a time when it was thought that if locomotive boiler flues were cleaned every ten days, that was enough, but I am told that now the flues in fast train engines are cleaned every trip, and in freight engines every round trip. Does it strike you why they need every unit of heat that is in the coal? This is why: To make the time the card calls for.

Going back to labor once more—look out for the practical joker. He will not kill much time himself, but he will have all the help on the place watching him in less than a week, both for the fun he creates and to keep him from playing some prank on the individual himself.

CANTERBURY BELLS.

When should I bring in Canterbury bells to have them in bloom for Easter? Also, when should I bring in a batch to bloom for Memorial day, in a temperature of 60 degrees by day and 50 degrees by night? Will a temperature like that suit them? A. D.

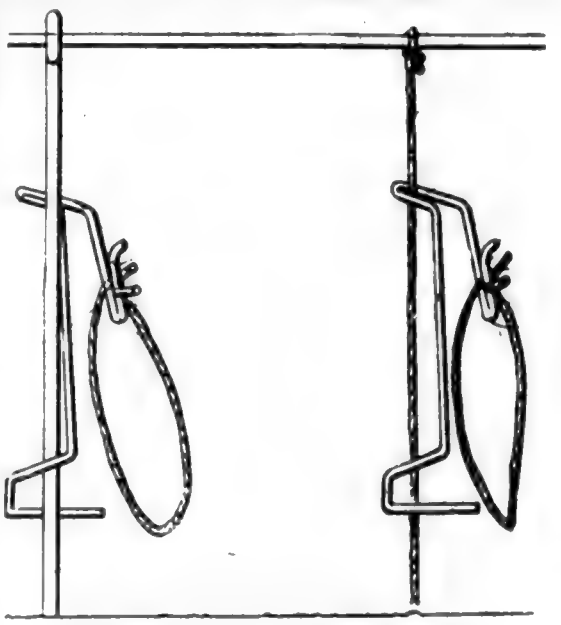
Start the plants for Easter, which will fall on April 16 next year, right after Christmas. Those for Memorial day need not be started until the early part of February. An average night temperature of 50 degrees will be about right. Easter grown Canterbury bells are never of the quality of those flowered later in the season. C. W.

NEW TYING DEVICE.

G. S. Ramsburg, who is a grower at Somersville, N. H., recently has secured a patent on a new plant tying device made of spring wire, the simplicity of which is shown in the accompanying illustration. It really is not a tie but a loop, no knots being made. It is a combination device and readily clamps to a stake or holds to a cord, as desired. The tying or looping is simple and rapid and any number of plants or branches can be held independently, which alone is a great advantage in saving of time and flowers, as not all of the blossoms on a plant are ready to cut at the same time, and thus there is not a tangle when one is taken, as is sometimes the case with the old and tedious method, when a number of plants are tied together in order to save time. There are no bits of cord left on the stems, as the string remains in the device.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Amaryllis.



The bulbs of amaryllis, having had a few weeks of rest, will now be hard and nicely ripened. Some will probably be already pushing their flower spikes. It is neither necessary nor advisable to overhaul and start all the bulbs at once. Better bring some into heat each week, in order to provide a steady succession, unless a large number are needed for some special occasion. All the bulbs may not require repotting, but see that the drainage is efficient, and where the roots are sound and active and the pots of sufficient size, a liberal top-dressing may suffice for another season, supplemented, of course, during the growing season by frequent applications of liquid manure. A good compost for amaryllis consists of two-thirds fibrous loam, with the finer particles discarded; one-third dried and moderately lumpy cow manure, a dash of bone meal and soot, and plenty of sharp sand. Such a compost will be porous. In a pasty soil the roots will rot rather than revel. After repotting or top-dressing, place the plants in a night temperature of 60 degrees, and if they can stand on a bench where they can get some bottom heat, they will succeed all the better for it.

It is cheaper to raise amaryllis from seed, rather than buy bulbs. If the latter are good hybrids, they will cost high. Purchase a few packets of a first-class strain from some specialist; sow at once in pans or flats of light and sandy soil, and in a night temperature of 70 degrees they will not be long in germinating. Prick off in flats when big enough to handle and later pot off singly. Keep them growing without rest until they flower. It is a common error to rest seedlings the first fall after sowing. This only weakens them and greatly delays the flowering season. Seedlings have been flowered in fifteen to eighteen months, but they usually take two to three years to do so. Their flowers are so large and magnificent that they amply repay anyone for all the trouble they may have entailed.

Bouvardia Humboldtii.

While the small flowering bouvardias seem to be less grown each year, the variety Humboldtii is once more growing in popular favor. This is not, as some suppose, a comparatively new variety, but has been in continuous cultivation for thirty-six years. It is far the finest of the family. Its large, pure white racemes of flowers have a delicious odor, which is especially pronounced at night. Flowers of this bouvardia are now procurable almost the year around in some of the big markets, and bunches carrying stems two to three feet long are grown by some specialists.

B. Humboldtii is an easy variety to propagate. While the bulk of bouvardias are most readily increased from root cuttings, it roots as easily as a chrysanthemum from soft-wood cuttings, and any plants which have finished blooming, if placed in a warm, moist house, will soon throw a heavy crop of cuttings. If planted outdoors after danger of frost has gone and pinched once or twice to induce bushiness, quite large plants will be produced by September, and these, when potted or benched and grown in a temperature of 60 degrees, will yield a fine crop of delightfully fragrant flowers. Any florist who has not yet tried this bouvardia should plan to do so.

Primulas.

Quite a number of plants of both Primula Sinensis and P. obconica will probably have been disposed of for Christmas. There are always, however, many plants which are hardly in a salable condition so early. Primulas are at their best in January and February and it should be possible to dispose of a good number during the first months of the year. All of the primulas named make excellent house plants and, if given a suitable location and proper treatment, will flower quite a long time. Primulas, to be shapely and salable, must have room. Let each plant stand clear of its neighbor. Grown thus and kept close to the glass, the plants will be shapely, stocky and floriferous. Do not feed heavily. Soot water will help to keep the leaves a deep, lustrous green, and weak cow manure water once a week is also good. The two fertilizers are often combined by being mixed in the same barrel or tank, and this is really the best way to apply them.

In order to get strong, early flowering primulas for Christmas, 1911, seed should be secured now and sown as early as possible. The soil should be light, mainly leaf-mold, with some sand added. A warm, moist house is necessary for early and successful germination. In P. Sinensis, such varieties as Crimson King, Chiswick Red and Covent Garden Red will sell on sight at Christmas. In P. obconica, the variety Kermesina, rich crimson in color, is what is needed. Of course, other colors than these will sell, but for Christmas bright colors always have the first call.

Calceolarias.

The lower the temperature outdoors, the better calceolarias indoors appear to grow. They are impatient of strong heat and never grow so well as during the cold winter months. An arid atmosphere, wild extremes in temperature and careless watering are all injurious; so, also, is green aphis, which will soon ruin the plants if unchecked. Calceolarias that are flowering should be broken from the sun's rays. Plants needing a final shift should have fibrous yellow loam, with a little leaf-mold and some soot, sand and cow manure added. Grow where there is as little fire heat as possible and give the plants a good spraying each bright afternoon.

Allamandas.

Keep allamandas, both of the climbing and dwarf varieties, dry at the root, so that the leaves may gradually disappear and the wood become hard and well ripened. These allamandas are useful in the summer months, when choice flowering plants are quite scarce, and their value for table decorations, to say nothing of house adornment, is not half appreciated. Those who want something really nice during July and August should try a few allamandas. They succeed well under ordinary greenhouse culture, except when needed in bloom early, in which case tropical heat is necessary, but finer, stockier plants are obtained if they are grown cooler. It is still somewhat early to start up plants, but such as are in tubs or planted out will merely need some of the surface soil removed and a rich top-dressing added. If in pots, it is best to shake away the soil fairly well and place them in small sized receptacles at first. Also be careful to water sparingly until the roots become active and the plants start away into growth.

Gloxinias.

To have flowering gloxinia plants in May, a batch of bulbs must be started forthwith. Place them in flats of leaf-mold, to which has been added a good dash of sand. Water sufficiently to soak the soil; then keep pretty dry until the plants have made considerable growth and are ready for potting. A light, moderately rich soil suits gloxinias. One-half fibrous loam, one-fourth each flaky leaf-mold and old, well-pulverized cow manure, with a little fine charcoal, sand and soot added, will be found all right. The present is also a suitable time to make a sowing of seeds to produce good flowering plants in July and August next.

Hydrangeas.

After Christmas move a batch of well ripened hydrangea plants into a temperature of 45 to 50 degrees, to come along for Easter. There will remain rather less than four months until they are wanted in flower, which is none too long a period. When well started, 10 degrees more heat can be given, with frequent sprayings to keep aphis in check. Keep plants intended for Memorial day or later as cool as possible, without actually freezing them. It will be some time before they are to be started.

Coreopsis Grandiflora.

Coreopsis grandiflora is a most useful biennial, both outdoors and indoors. Under glass its culture is still limited. Plants lifted and potted in September or October can now be brought into gentle heat and will provide a lot of useful cuttings in April and May. For Memorial day trade this is a particularly pleasing plant. It can be cut with long stems, and the rich yellow flowers are just what is wanted for bouquets.

Dimorphotheca Aurantiaca.

If there are any narrow beds or benches requiring a temporary catch crop, try a sowing of Dimorphotheca aurantiaca. It can be sown directly in the benches and the plants can be thinned a little if they germinate too freely. Flowers can be picked in seven to eight weeks from the time of sowing. The daisy-like flowers are two and one-half inches across, carried on good stems and of a rich orange gold color, with a dark disk. The color appeals to everyone, and those needing something in the way of a novelty should try this dimorphotheca. It is quite a persistent bloomer, lasting for many weeks.

COLD STORAGE LILIES.

I should like to get some information about how to handle cold storage lilies, how to start them when received and what kind of treatment to give them; also what time to have them delivered, so as to have them out of the way by September 1. F. M.

Pot the lilies as soon as received. Stand them on a cellar floor, in a coldframe where they can have a coating of ashes or moss to exclude the light and prevent the drying out of the soil, or under a bench in a cold greenhouse. Let them stay in whichever of these places you chance to have until the pots are nicely filled with roots and the flower stems two to three inches long. Then place them in a greenhouse where the night temperature is 55 to 60 degrees as a minimum. Avoid giving much water until the plants are in active growth, with plenty of roots. An oversupply in the early stages of growth is a fertile cause of the roots decaying and the plants becoming sickly and diseased looking, a fault for which we always complacently blame the Japanese or bulb merchants.

You do not say at what particular time you want these cold storage lilies, but as it is easily possible to hold back the giganteum form of longiflorum until Memorial day, you would naturally only need them in June, July and August. If wanted in June, pot the bulbs four months before. Those for July and August can be potted at a correspondingly later date. Remember that it takes four to five weeks from the time buds show, even in summer, for flowers to be open, unless the weather is extremely forcing, and it is always better to pot a week or two earlier than the reverse. C. W.

VERONICA BUXIFOLIA.

I received from England some plants marked Veronica buxifolia. Will you tell me the best way to propagate and grow the plants and are they hardy? How are they useful? C. E. S.

This veronica is a native of New Zealand and would not prove hardy in Maryland. It is a low, bushy shrub, attaining a height of two to three feet. It is useful where hardy in rockeries and also makes a nice pot plant. The dense heads of white flowers are quite pretty. In the United States it succeeds well on the California coast and would winter where the winter minimum did not fall below 20 degrees. It can be propagated from pieces of new growth early in July, by which time the wood is fairly well ripened. Pans or flats of sandy soil in a frame, which can be kept well shaded, close and moist, will be found suitable for the cuttings. C. W.

A Quartet of Well Known San Franciscans.

THE QUARTET.

At San Francisco this fall there was held the most successful flower show in the history of floriculture in the west. While the craft in general coöperated to make the show what it was, the major share of the work of staging and management was in the hands of the four gentlemen shown in the accompanying illustration, which is from a photograph made during the show. Seated is V. Matraia, who was manager of the exhibition. Standing, from left to right, first is H. Plath, well known as a grower at San Francisco, who was assistant manager and treasurer of the show. In the center stands Daniel MacRorie, of the MacRorie-McLaren Co., who needs no introduction to the trade, either on the Coast or in the east, though the progress of his firm in the few years of its existence may be cited as an example of the rapidity with which horticultural affairs are progressing in the west. At the right stands Frank Pelicano, who has been identified with the development of the retail store branch of floriculture in San Francisco for many years.

Pawtucket, R. I.—William Hoffman has had a phenomenal sale for his seedling carnation, Challenge, which has pleased all who have seen and tried it. It is a taking, solid color.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Trade has been rather quiet for the last ten days. Supplies have been light, however, and there has been no decline in prices, except for a few days in the case of some roses. With the near advent of Christmas more activity is to be seen and cut flowers are selling at higher figures. Roses, which have sold only moderately during the last week, are now stiffening in price. Richmond promises to be scarce and will make high prices, also Rhea Reid, which is seen of grand quality, quite outclassing Richmond. American Beauties are rather scarce. Killarney and White Killarney are the roses par excellence, the pink variety now having the better call. Some Kaiserin are still seen, but the quality is poor. Mrs. Aaron Ward is of good quality and as popular as ever. Maryland, where seen, is somewhat deeper in color than Killarney, but is not popular with the growers here. Chatenay from a few growers is exceptionally fine, while the old Bon Silene and Safrano are to be had with splendid stems.

Carnations are likely to be in short supply. The severe weather causes them to open slowly. This, added to the fact that they are blooming less freely than usual with many, is keeping prices strong. Beacon, Fenn, Scarlet Glow and Victory are in special demand. All the pink shades will also make excellent prices. Violets have appeared in limited numbers of late, but probabilities are that they will appear in quantity later in the week. Prices have held up well. Chrysanthemums are still seen, but many buyers fight shy of them and few regret that they are passing. Poinsettia bracts are making all the way from $2 to $5 per dozen, a few extras $6, and are in good demand. Bouvardia Humboldtii retains its popularity. Some of the pink and scarlet varieties are seen, but they do not sell like Humboldtii.

Paper White narcissi and Roman hyacinths are now abundant. A few more Trumpet Majors are arriving, also small lots of white tulips. Freesias also made their appearance last week. Callas are now of fine quality. Lilies are not overabundant and sell well. Valley has not been selling well. The quality is not what it should be. Marguerites, pansies and calendulas are seen in fair numbers and nice lots of mignonette, snapdragons and stocks are also seen. Among miscellaneous flowers noted are myosotis, white azaleas, wallflowers and Euphorbia jacquiniæflora. The latter sells well at Christmas.

Sweet peas are coming with stronger stems and in larger numbers. They sell well. Gardenias are reduced in quantity and selling at high prices. Cattleyas are rather more plentiful. C. Trianæ is arriving from several growers. There is a good supply of cypripediums, but not many other orchids.

Plant trade has been quite active and continues to grow each year. The severe weather has entailed a lot of additional wrapping to prevent freezing. In spite of all precautions, some plants have arrived frozen. The three leaders in flowering plants are: Poinsettias, azaleas and Lorraine begonias. There is also a good sale for Otaheite oranges, ardisias and other berried subjects. Fern pans are selling well, also nephrolepis and palms of moderate size.

Trade in Christmas greens keeps the wholesalers busy, and in spite of higher prices the sales of these will be larger than ever. The early and heavy snows have made it difficult, and in some cases impossible, to obtain a normal quantity of greenery. Holly, the imported article, is extra well berried. Mistletoe is also meeting with a first-class sale.

Club Meeting.

In spite of the near approach of Christmas and the fact that commercial members are all busy, there was a fine attendance at the club meeting December 20, 120 being present. Principal interest centered in the annual election, which was by Australian ballot. The only contest was for members of the executive committee, there being eleven candidates for the four vacancies. The result of the ballot was as follows: President, Peter M. Miller; vice-president, Thomas Pegler; secretary, W. N. Craig; treasurer, Peter Fisher; executive committee, J. P. A. Guerineau, Robert Cameron, Wm. Downs, W. J. Kennedy. Ten new members were elected.

The committee on S. A. F. entertainment, which has met several times since the last session of the club, made a progressive report. While the ballots were being counted, William Downs gave an entertaining talk on his recent trip to England, which was followed by a discussion by Messrs. Palmer, Finlayson and Cameron. Announcement was made of the floricultural course to be held at Amherst college, commencing in January, under the direction of E. A. White, professor of horticulture. It was stated that at the January meeting, when officers will be installed, ladies also will be present. There was as usual some interesting exhibits, including a collection of carnations from A. A. Pembroke, fine White Perfection from James Wheeler, dark pink sport of Killarney from A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn., both cut blooms and growing plants, and a seedling cattleya from Duncan Finlayson. All the exhibitors were given votes of thanks.

Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

At a meeting of the board of trustees December 10 the following standing committees for 1911 were appointed:

Finance—Walter Hunnewell, chairman; A. F. Estabrook, S. M. Weld.

Prizes and exhibitions—J. A. Pettigrew, chairman; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Robert Cameron, W. N. Craig, M. A. Patten, J. W. Hill.

Plants and flowers—T. D. Hatfield, chairman; A. H. Fewkes, Peter Fisher, Joseph Clark, Thomas Roland, William C. Rust.

Fruits—E. B. Wilder, chairman; Wilfrid Wheeler, William Downs.

Vegetables—Duncan Finlayson, chairman; Edward Parker, Vincent Buitta, Herbert W. Rawson, W. N. Craig.

Gardens—C. W. Parker, chairman; A. F. Barney, A. H. Fewkes, T. D. Hatfield, William Nicholson, W. P. Rich, J. B. Shurtleff, Jr., J. A. Pettigrew, Wilfrid Wheeler, Charles Sander.

Library—C. S. Sargent, chairman; E. B. Dane, George B. Dorr, C. S. Minot.

Lectures and publications—C. W. Hoitt, chairman; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, W. P. Rich, E. B. Wilder.

Children's gardens—Mrs. R. G. Shaw, chairman; Mrs. E. M. Gill, Mrs. D. M. Pickman, Mrs. W. R. Peabody, Miss Margaret Rand, Mrs. John E. Thayer.

The following new corresponding members were elected: W. J. Bean, Kew, England; W. P. Hedrick, Geneva, N. Y.; John Dunbar, Rochester, N. Y.; E. H. Wilson, now plant collecting in China; A. A. Hixon, Worcester, Mass.; John Craig, Ithaca, N. Y.; J. Irving Mears, Philadelphia, Pa., and Wilhelm Miller.

The schedule for 1911 will be ready in a few days. There will be eleven prize exhibitions. The spring show is omitted on account of the S. A. F. national show coming about the same date. There will be a special vegetable show September 22 to 24, with prizes approximating $2,500, ranging from $100 downwards. This will be the most ambitious show of the kind the society has yet attempted.

The following list of lectures is issued for the coming winter course. The hour of meeting for lectures has been changed from noon to 2 p. m.

January 7—Inaugural meeting. Annual reports of committees.

January 14—"Gardening For and By Amateurs," by J. Otto Thilow, Philadelphia, Pa.

January 21—"The Local Plant Doctor," by Prof. H. H. Whetzel, Ithaca, N. Y.

January 28—"New England Market Gardeners and Their Competitors," by Prof. L. C. Corbett, Washington, D. C.

February 4—"Summer Blooming Bulbs," by Isaac S. Hendrickson, Floral Park, N. Y.

February 18—"The Horticultural Awakening in New England," by J. H. Hale, South Glastonbury, Conn.

February 25—Midwinter Flower Exhibition.

March 4—"The Outdoor Window Garden," by John D. Twombley, Winchester, Mass.

March 11—"The Outlook Countryward," by Prof. L. H. Bailey, Ithaca, N. Y.

March 18—"Story of an Old Orchard Reclaimed," by Dr. George M. Twitchell, Auburn, Me.

Various Notes.

Herman H. Bartsch, who has been with the W. W. Edgar Co. since March, 1894, first as an assistant, later as salesman and, since Mr. Edgar's death, as manager, has become a member of the firm. His many friends will be glad to know that he has associated himself with this well known Boston establishment, which has always had a reputation for turning out first-class stock. He is known to every prominent retailer in Boston and many outside as an ideal salesman, his word always being accepted. As a grower he will take second place to none. He has ambition to please, geniality, and the energy necessary for a successful commercial grower. Mr. Bartsch is an active member of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, and is active in Waverley Council, Royal Arcanum, in which he has held the highest offices.

William C. Stickel, of Lexington, grows nearly 20,000 carnations, and his plants are looking unusually well and carrying a first-class holiday crop. His leading varieties are Harry Fenn, Enchantress, Winsor, Pink Delight and White Perfection.

H. R. Comley, on Park street, had in his window display, December 17, among other flowers, pink stocks, Trumpet narcissi, tulips, freesias, fine pink antirrhinums and a grand lot of roses, Mrs. Aaron Ward and Safrano.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, had bunches of Tulip candidissima December 17. This is a pure white variety, French grown. They will cut two other varieties during the present week.

Albert Batley, of Maynard, has a fine new house of sweet peas, chiefly Mont Blanc and Earliest of All. The first named he is picking in quantity. In carnations, which are his leading specialty, he likes Pink Delight. Other favorites are: White Perfection, Winsor, Beacon and Queen. The latter is liked for funeral work. Winona will be discarded.

Henry Penn, the Bromfield street florist, is having a big sale on Copenhagen ware for the holidays. Of this ware he carries a large variety. He has some fine pot lilacs, ericas, Otaheite oranges and azaleas. Trade here is brisk.

There were two cases of Primula obconica poisoning at the Boston

Rose-growing in the Field in California.

Flower Exchange last week, Charles Oberlander, salesman for Leonard Cousins, being one, and W. J. Thurston, the manager, the other. Each season there are a number of cases of poisoning from this plant, but its culture does not show any appreciable decrease. As the majority of the growers can handle the plant with impunity, they hate to discard it. If all were poisoned alike, it would be quickly dropped.

A. F. Coolidge, of Cambridge, at the Boston Coöperative Market, is bringing in fine batches of cyclamen, which sell on sight, also quantities of well grown nephrolepis.

An express telephone service has been installed at the Boston Flower Exchange and is found a great convenience.

William H. Elliott continues to cut Rhea Reid roses which make Richmond look like the proverbial two cents. He has a heavy cut of Killarney, White Killarney, Mrs. Aaron Ward and his other specialties for the holidays. He is getting quite a few of his new variegated Killarney, which reminds one of the old York and Lancaster rose.

William A. Riggs, of Auburndale, has a fine new delivery wagon. He is kept busy just now delivering well grown plants of both pink and white Lorraine begonias at the Boston Flower Exchange. His plants are handled by Thomas Pegler.

S. J. Reuter is done with chrysanthemums for the season, but is sending in a grand lot of Richmond, Killarney and White Killarney to Maurice Hambro, at the Boston Flower Exchange.

Welch Bros. are this week too busy to discuss business. They are simply overwhelmed with orders and will have the greatest Christmas trade on record. They are doing a tremendous business in greens. Beauties are specially fine.

J. A. Pettigrew has been quite sick for the last fortnight, but is able to be around again.

The E. Sutermeister estate, of Readville, was first in the market with freesia once more, having several bunches December 17.

W. H. Howard, of Milford, is having excellent success with carnations again this season. His specialties are White Enchantress, Fair Maid, Beacon and Winsor. They are handled at the Boston Flower Exchange by George H. Noyes.

A call on N. M. Silverman, the progressive Winter street florist, found that gentleman up to the ears in business. Plant trade has been better than ever, while in cut flowers, valley, violets, cattleyas, Beauties and everything good and choice are selling well.

R. & J. Farquhar & Co., at their South Market street store, have been doing a considerable plant trade, including Lorraines, azaleas, cyclamens, primulas and a variety of foliage plants, grown at their Roslindale greenhouses. Their catalogue for 1911 will list many of the new Wilson introductions from China for the first time.

ROSES IN CALIFORNIA.

The accompanying illustration gives something of an idea as to the extent to which roses are grown in the field by some of the commercial establishments of California. The photograph was made November 15 and represents one of the fields of half a million plants grown by the California Rose Co., at Pomona. The stock is planted six inches apart in rows three feet asunder and was in full bloom at the date the photograph was made. C. E. Howland, president and manager of the company, says he expects that every one of these plants will be dug and shipped before February 1 and that the record book shows the season's propagation, which closed December 1, to have totaled 722,000.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Last week was a quiet one, as it always is just before Christmas. At times the temperature hugged zero. This was bad for the plantsmen, who were shipping out of the city or delivering at the stores. Everything was wrapped as carefully as in midwinter. Business with the retailers was dull; apart from the funeral trade and a few dinners there was nothing unusual. The great stars of the theaters, like Bernhardt, absorbed a share of the Beauty offerings. Society used its quota of orchids and gardenias at the Metropolitan, but the masses were buying Christmas presents and neglected flowers. After Wednesday of this week the retailer has his turn, and if one may judge by the grand supply of flowering plants and the unique baskets and boxes already being made up into attractive combinations, a wonderfully prosperous Christmas awaits them all. The weather has also changed to their advantage and gives promise of the expected reaction from the severe cold to the mildness and sunshine of autumn.

Prices at the opening of this week were unchanged from last week's quotations. One can only surmise as to the Christmas values. For violets, $1.25 seems to be the established top and thousands have been booked at that figure. The best American Beauties are slated for $1 each. Some wholesalers predict a lower average than usual, the shipments having been light and the surplus of rose growers being about due. Accuracy in Christmas forecasts is now impossible. Next week we can state definitely the average of values. The tendency is to reasonable figures and no unnatural increase. The abundance of handsome plants makes this impossible.

The seedsmen's windows everywhere are gay with holly, wreaths, and Christmas bells. Few bother with Christmas trees, the grocer and the butcher having absorbed this trade. The green goods men are working night and day with extra forces to meet the demand for wreathing. Pine is scarce and laurel is forced to take its place. Holly wreaths of good size sell rapidly to the retail florists, and the making of them is largely left now to the supply houses.

All the retail windows are attractively decorated. The Christmas spirit is dominant. Red, of course, is the prevailing color. Ribbons are utilized more than ever before. After the quietest season in years, surely grower, wholesaler and retailer all deserve, and let us hope will have, the merriest and most remunerative holiday business they have ever experienced.

Various Notes.

Alex. McConnell has tubbed many handsome blue spruces and retinosporas from his New Rochelle nurseries and produced a fine winter effect at his big store entrance and conservatory. This is his final Christmas in this location.

David Clarke's Sons have drawn heavily upon their greenhouses in the Bronx for their fern and plant display and make an elaborate window exhibit, appropriate for the festive season.

The A. T. Bunyard Co., on Madison avenue, with its handsome store and new auto, is doing a fine Christmas business.

C. W. Scott and wife, of the Yokohama Nursery Co., sailed December 21 on a delayed honeymoon trip to Bermuda, and will combine business and pleasure for a week where the lilies bloom.

Walter Mott, of the Yuess Gardens Co., of Newburgh, was in the city last week, after a successful New England trip, on his way to spend the Christmas holidays with his family.

B. Rosens has been laid up with grip for several days, just when the unusual rush most demanded his presence. He reports a larger Christmas business than last season.

Wm. J. Elliott looks forward hopefully to a better auction year than the last one. He says it was the poorest in his many years' experience.

Carl Gloeckner, of the Buds Seed Store, has an attractive Japanese window. His importation of the dwarf plants was an extensive and varied one, and popular for Christmas gifts.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. has the handsome store and office now complete, with special cases for their ribbon display.

The new cut flower house of Siebrecht & Siebrecht fitted snugly into the wholesale niche, as if it had always existed. The young men are delighted with the encouragement given them and are handling a lot of good stock from Astoria and New Rochelle.

J. J. Coan, of the Growers' Co., says he will have a lot of fine mums for Christmas and even later, Jeanne Nonin and Chadwick among them.

The English mistletoe imported by Moore, Hentz & Nash was of exceptional quality this year and sold "like hot cakes."

W. P. Ford has demonstrated that well-flowered geraniums of the brighter colors are an excellent Christmas specialty. His sale for these has been large.

The entire trade sympathizes with Edward Horan and his family in the sudden death of Mrs. Horan, after only a few days' illness.

J. D. Antoupolous leases a space under Brooklyn bridge stairway, City Hall park, and has handled so many flowers, etc., there that he has been spreading out. The city officials demolished a part of what they called his "encroachments," December 17, and attracted a big crowd and much newspaper comment.

J. William Colflesh.

Bowling.

At the bowling meet December 16 Chadwick won the Rickards prize. The scores were as follows:

Player—	1st	2d	3d	4th
Chadwick	202	194	212	174
Irwin	190	158	189	175

Friday night, December 30, there will be a turkey contest, open to all members of the New York Florists' Club.

J. Austin Shaw.

Knight & Struck, who are sales agents for H. D. Darlington, say they could not fill all the orders offered them for heaths. Over seventy-five large orders went out December 16, cleaning up all the stock that could be spared. Mr. Darlington intends to largely increase his output for next Christmas.

OBITUARY.

J. William Colflesh.

In the passing away, December 15, of J. William Colflesh the craft in Philadelphia lost another of its veteran members and a man than whom there were none more highly esteemed in the community. He was not a man of self-assertiveness, but his personal acquaintance included practically every man in the trade in Philadelphia and the clearness of his judgment and purity of his character had endeared him to everyone who knew him either in business, in community affairs, or socially. Mr. Colflesh was one of the charter members of the Florists' Club of Philadelphia and was for some years its treasurer. He also was for many years a member of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and chairman of its plant committee. He was an ardent worker in all the affairs of horticulture and ever willing to do his share to advance the general interest. His illness had been of considerable duration and he last week underwent a surgical operation in the Presbyterian hospital, from which he failed to rally.

A meeting of the Florists' Club was held December 16, the day following his death, at which resolutions of respect were drafted by Robert Craig, John Westcott and F. Hahman for adoption by the club and to be transmitted to the family.

In his private business Mr. Colflesh had achieved an enviable reputation as a grower. His range of glass at Fifty-third street and Woodland avenue, where his son, J. W. Colflesh, was associated with him in the management, has for years been one of the centers of floricultural interest in West Philadelphia.

There was a large attendance of those in the trade and others at the funeral and the floral emblems were both numerous and beautiful.

Anthony Wiegand.

Anthony Wiegand, pioneer florist of Indianapolis, died December 19 at his home, at Sixteenth and Illinois streets, of paralysis. Early in October he suffered a slight stroke, from which he seemed to be partly recovering and until a few days before his death he seemed in good spirits and apparently on the mend. Early last week, however, he suffered another shock and grew steadily worse until the time of his death.

Mr. Wiegand was born in Saxony, Germany, April 25, 1832. At the age of 27 years he came to this country, locating at Indianapolis, where he engaged in the florists' business on Kentucky avenue, which is now right in the heart of the city. A few years later, seeing the need of purer air and more room, he bought property in what was at that time far out in the country, but is now the best residence district of the city. Here he conducted his business individually until 1900, at which time he took into partnership his two sons, George B. and Homer L. Wiegand, who have had the active management of the business since that time.

Mr. Wiegand was an indefatigable traveler, having been in Europe a number of times and in the Hawaiian Islands only a few years ago, besides having visited in nearly every state in this country. A trip to the West Indies and Panama was under contemplation for this winter, when he suffered the first stroke of paralysis.

Having been an active business man in his prime, Mr. Wiegand remained until his death a staunch and active supporter of every progressive movement in the trade. His purse was always handy when funds were needed to carry on flower shows, florists' picnics, etc. He was a member of the S. A. F., the American Carnation Society and the State Florists' Association of Indiana, and was usually to be found among those present at the conventions and meetings. During his fifty-one years in the florists' business he built up a retail trade of large proportions on the basis of highest quality in everything he handled. Born of good German stock, with strict honesty bred into his veins, he could always be depended on to give his fellowman his just dues. His word was good with everyone who knew him.

Interment will be in beautiful Crown Hill cemetery, where he has himself planted many thousands of flowering plants.

He leaves, besides the two sons, a wife and two daughters, Misses Benie and Anna Wiegand.

Anthony Wiegand.

Mrs. Peter Mergen.

Mary E. Mergen, wife of Peter Mergen, of Maryville, Mo., died December 15 after an illness of several months, at the age of 56 years. She was born Mary E. Hogan, a native of Illinois, naturally fond of flowers and plants, which made her a pioneer in the florists' business in northwestern Missouri, starting in a small way in 1884. She was successful from the first and about five years later Mr. Mergen gave up his other business interests to devote all his time to the florists' business established by Mrs. Mergen under the firm name Peter Mergen & Co. She is survived by her husband, who December 17 sold the stock and good will of the business and leased the greenhouses, store and grounds for a long term to Alfred Engelmann and F. A. Engelmann, who have been conducting the Engelmann Greenhouses. The move is for expansion on the part of the purchasers, giving them a good uptown location where plants can be properly cared for and displayed, as the greenhouses adjoining the store cover about 3,000 square feet of glass. The Engelmanns also have been doing quite a good wholesale business, in addition to retail trade, and this move will also enlarge the wholesale end of the business.

Robert Buist.

Robert Buist, the veteran Philadelphia seedsman whose death was reported in this column last week, executed a will December 6, only a week before the fatal termination of his illness. The estate is valued at $500,000. After giving $5,000 to Mrs. George Bedford, his sister, and making several other small bequests, the will provides that the residue of the estate be held in trust for Miss Roberta B. De Janon, the decedent's only grandchild, and that she be given the net income for life. In the event that Miss De Janon shall die without issue the estate is to be turned over to the Robert Buist Co. "My purpose," the will states, "being to benefit and reward thereby H. C. Stahle, Edward J. Flood and Albert C. Kockerberger, who have been my faithful employes for many years and other than whom there is no one I would prefer to benefit in the event of my granddaughter dying without lawful issue."

Mr. Buist was 73 years of age. He had been actively engaged in the seed trade for fifty-five years, having been started in the business by his father, then a noted Philadelphia plantsman, when he was 18 years of age. He built up a large catalogue trade and became wealthy through the buying and selling of seeds. A man of keen intellect, widely traveled and a cosmopolitan in the best sense of the word, his last years were much alone, as his wife died about four years ago and his only surviving relatives were his sister and granddaughter. He had for some time made his home in the Bellevue-Stratford hotel, where he died.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

As to business last week we can only say that it was fair, although some of the retailers complained that it was really dull. Social work was scarce, and when there was any business it was funeral work or advance orders for Christmas. The wholesalers felt it also, as stock did not move so well, and there was more coming in; consequently prices dropped some on the fancy grades. The weather was fine all the week and if it keeps up this week we may look for plenty of stock in all lines and at reasonable prices, but advance prices indicate that high prices will be asked for stock in all grades.

Last week saw more roses and carnations in the market than for the previous six weeks. American Beauties, long, medium and short, were plentiful. The market Monday morning, December 19, was not overstocked with flowers, and it looks as though some of the growers are holding back for later in the week, so as to obtain the highest possible price. It looks as though there will be plenty of California violets and that the price will not be extremely high. Bulbous stock is scarce. There are hardly any Romans as yet in the market, and only a limited stock in Paper Whites.

There will also be plenty of lilies and valley. There are still a few mums coming in, but none are expected next week. In greens the market will be well supplied with everything.

Various Notes.

Charles Holzborn, on Oak Hill avenue, who recently sustained quite a loss by fire, reports the amount as nearly $1,000. He expects to rebuild early in the spring. All his Christmas stock in blooming plants was lost.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., and E. W. Guy, of Belleville, Ill., spent a day with us last week, buying holiday supplies.

G. M. Reburn, of the new firm of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago, spent last week here, calling on the local florists.

The Ellison Floral Co. reports that they have been quite busy of late with all kinds of social work. Their pretty show house is well filled with fine blooming plants.

C. A. Kuehn says stock has been more plentiful during the last week in both carnations and roses, and his consignors have promised him a big cut for Christmas and New Year's. The supply and wire departments have been busy all week with shipping and local orders.

C. Young & Sons Co. has both its big show windows handsomely decorated and is showing some extra fine quality of blooming plants all dressed up in holiday attire. Charles Young says they have been busy all the week with a good outside demand.

Ostertag Bros. have a number of big church decorations for Christmas. Their show room on the second floor is finely decorated with a Christmas dinner table. A large amount of funeral work was turned out by them last week.

Otto Sander says that his new location in the Century building has been a good move for him and that his trade has improved greatly. His interior Christmas decorations are attractive.

All our wholesalers say they expect to be well supplied with cut flowers all this week. Should the fine weather keep up, prices will not be so high.

President Sanders, of the Retail Florists' Association, says that their New Year's meeting, which takes place January 2, will be an important one and he looks forward to a large attendance. The meeting will be held, as usual, in the Knights of Columbus hall.

The florists on South Grand avenue have their Christmas decorations out. Among the stores that are handsomely decorated are those of R. J. Windler, C. Bergsterman, Eggeling Floral Co. and Charles Beyer. They report good orders ahead for Christmas.

The Ladies' Home Circle at its last meeting elected all of its old officers, to serve another year. Mrs. John Steidle is president and Miss M. Meinhardt, secretary and treasurer. A committee was appointed to arrange an entertainment of some kind after New Year's, at which the men folks can be present.

Among the many fancy Christmas plants to be seen in the big show houses of the west end stores are: Azaleas, cyclamens, poinsettias, Begonia Gloire de Lorraine, Ficus pandurata and Pandanus Veitchii. These, with all necessary accessories, attract a great deal of attention and all seem to have plenty.

Fred H. Weber has stocked up with a big line of Christmas novelties and reports trade excellent in cut flowers and plants.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There was the usual let-up before the holidays, which was felt more in the higher-priced flowers, such as Beauties and special grades of roses, but the wholesale houses which handle a general line of supplies have been kept unusually busy. Violets have been much more plentiful than for some time and the stock is unusually fine, although the extremely cold weather has not helped the sale.

The Christmas tree market seems to be a little overstocked, but all other lines of green are rather on the short side. Holly, especially, is poor.

There is a good deal of activity seen in the retail shops and the slight slump in business is considered a blessing by the help, who are trying to take care of trade and get their Christmas novelties made up at the same time.

Various Notes.

There is not as much talk as usual about cutting out cut flowers and pushing plants. Possibly the near zero weather we are having is causing some of them to think of the expense of delivering a lot of cheap plants. It takes about all the Christianity the average florist has to answer the telephone and receive a message that his delivery automobile is tied up some miles away with a big load on, but such things are happening these busy days. The poor old horse comes to the rescue, however, and the auto man will have a hard time persuading these men that there is no more use for the horse. It is all right to own an auto, but do not sell all your horses.

TRIMBLE'S PROGRESS.

The accompanying illustration is from the W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co., of Princeton, Ill., showing their exhibit at the forty-fourth annual convention of the Horticultural Society of Northern Illinois, held in their town December 8 and 9. The meeting was well attended and Mr. Trimble's rose and carnation display was an interesting feature. The W. E. Trimble Greenhouse Co. is making headway, as much as the weather will permit, on an addition of three greenhouses, each 30x200 feet, connected, to be planted to roses, all grafted stock. The new houses are to be completed by February 1. A wholesale and retail business is carried on here, roses, carnations, chrysanthemums and a general line of rooted cuttings and pot plants being grown. The latter part of the business is being pushed forward. Thousands of different kinds of cuttings are being rooted to fill the orders already booked. The firm also has a store in the central part of the city. F. W. Herleman, formerly of Marion, Ind., is foreman and is handling the work in a first-class manner.

READERS ARE INVITED TO CONTRIBUTE ITEMS FOR THIS DEPARTMENT.

Shenandoah, Pa.—The contract has been awarded for the building of a greenhouse at the city park, at a cost of $960.

Batavia, Ill.—The Batavia Greenhouse Co. expects soon to be provided with the city light service at its new plant on Garfield avenue.

New Canaan, Conn.—Stephen Hoyt's Sons Co. recently held a successful chrysanthemum exhibition at its greenhouses.

Lexington, Ill.—A. L. Ambrose, of the Lexington Greenhouses, visited Chicago recently, to purchase plants and supplies.

Palestine, Ill.—Miss Elsie May Wesley, of Flat Rock, Ill., and Ernest T. Oldham, the florist of this town, were married December 21 at Duncanville, Ill.

Fond du Lac, Wis.—Leon E. Sawicke, manager of the Fourth Street Greenhouse Co., went to Philadelphia, Pa., to enjoy his Christmas vacation and to spend a week in visiting relatives and friends there.

Bath, Me.—Paul M. Olm has a fine stock for the holidays. A specialty is scarlet geraniums and poinsettias panned up with maidenhair ferns. His carnations are in heavy crop, with large blooms but a tendency toward weak stems, owing to lack of sunshine.

Pontiac, Ill.—W. J. Miller & Son held a formal opening of their new greenhouses, at 412 East Payson street, on Saturday, December 10. The fine display of stock, under the 12,000 square feet of glass, was much admired by the many visitors, including a party of teachers who had come to town to attend an institute.

Marietta, O.—Under date of December 17, F. E. Thompson, superintendent of the Marietta Greenhouses, reported large orders booked ahead for Christmas. Poinsettias were high, but selling readily; ferns and small palms were going well and azaleas were fine. Carnations were scarce, roses about as usual and all stock cleaned up regularly, with nothing left over.

Red Bank, N. J.—When Charles H. Smith, with his son, Lester, and his fireman, Frank Overton, went to his greenhouses at Port Monmouth December 12, 8,000 carnation plants which had begun to bloom were found frozen stiff. The recently installed heating plant was found out of order and the thermometer registered 10 degrees above zero. Mr. Smith, who is a civil war veteran, is one of the best known farmers in Monmouth county, doing a carnation business in the winter and growing tomatoes and eggplants for the farmers in the summer.

Oriskany, N. Y.—Gifford's greenhouses were slightly damaged by fire December 9.

Lawrence, Mass.—A recent fire at the greenhouses of Thornton Bros., 384 Broadway, caused a loss of about $300.

Geneseo, Ill.—The Hill Floral Co. is erecting a 6-room residence near the firm's greenhouses, just west of the city.

Hammonton, N. J.—J. Murray Bassett, the grower of dahlias and hardy stock, has opened a general flower store in the Ballard building, on Bellevue avenue.

Haddonfield, N. J.—Mrs. Martha Turnley, widow of the late Charles W. Turnley, died December 12, after a lingering illness. She was in her seventy-second year.

Covington, Ky.—Fire at the establishment of Thomas Jackson, December 13, destroyed one of his greenhouses and an adjoining cottage, which also belonged to Mr. Jackson. The loss was about $1,000.

Yankton, S. D.—George H. Whiting, the nurseryman of this city, left for Kansas City December 12, to attend the meeting of the Western Nurserymen's Association. He had also been requested by the program committee to prepare one of the papers for the occasion.

Somerville, Mass.—Bastian C. M. Boot, who recently opened a flower store in the new block at 680 Broadway, was married December 4 to Miss Henny Ter Avest. Mr. Boot had managed greenhouses in Holland before coming to America five years ago. After his arrival in America he had charge of different large estates.

Portland, Conn.—Otto Keser finished his colonial dwelling house in good season and will give a house warming to a large circle of friends, to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of Keser and partner, just as soon as the holiday rush is over. He says they will not wait to see how much business has been done, as there is a steady increase.

Hartford, Conn.—John Coombs says he feels younger than ever, though rounding out the forty-second year in the business at the same old stand. Of late years he has seen land immediately around him advance in value by leaps and bounds, so that there is not a plot that can be used for planting out stock within quite a distance. He has in mind a big farm located in the Connecticut valley, not far from A. N. Pierson's immense place, where they would be neighbors and could swap stories. He is now busy with boxwood and pine wreaths, of which they sell annually nearly 2,000. Holly is well berried; growing pine is scarce.

Butler, Tenn.—The Mountain Fern Co. has gone out of the evergreen business.

Moline, Ill.—A carload of shrubs for use in the new Riverside park was received recently from Klehm's Nurseries, of Arlington Heights, Ill.

Sandwich, Ill.—Mrs. Frances Spickerman, proprietor of the Sandwich Greenhouses, is exhibiting a banana tree which is bearing fruit and which attracts considerable attention.

Binghamton, N. Y.—A. E. Fancher, of the Riverside Gardens, uses several of his houses for the growing of chrysanthemums. His stock, which includes a good proportion of the newest and best varieties, shows evidence of excellent culture.

St. John, N. B.—H. E. Goold, the nurseryman and florist, who has a store here and also in several other towns, was present at the recent meeting in the Board of Trade rooms, for the organization of the Germain Street Improvement Association, and gave some valuable information regarding the planting of trees.

Northampton, Mass.—H. W. Field says the report recently published, that he had donated a newly purchased plot of land to the city, is incorrect—has any grower too much land? He expects to make quite an addition to his range of glass and is tempted to take advantage of the low price of glass and make an early start.

Leavenworth, Kan.—The Sunnyside Floral Co., though organized only three years ago, now has 25,000 square feet of glass at Twelfth and Vilas streets and a large, attractive store at Fifth and Shawnee streets. Great credit for the success of the business is due to R. O. Hinz, who superintends the work of growing the flowers, and also to Miss Eva Goodman, who is an expert decorator.

Beverly, Mass.—George W. Glines, a former councilman, is said to be the pioneer vegetable forcer of this city. He built his first greenhouse twenty-one years ago. Now he owns and operates eleven houses, varying in length from 175 to 250 feet, on the east side of Dodge street, near Conant street. He also owns two houses—one of them 340 feet long—on the opposite side of the street, but he has leased these to Thomas Pembroke, who grows cut flowers in them and ships his output to Boston. Among the other vegetable houses in Mr. Glines' ward, eleven houses are conducted by Charles E. Caldwell, five by Wildred E. Caldwell, three by Arthur H. Kidder, three by James F. Potter and two by Frank A. Woodbury.

Yankton, S. D. George H. Whiting, the nurseryman of this city, left for Kansas City December 12, to attend the meeting of the Western Nurserymen's Association. He had also been requested by the program committee to prepare one of the papers for the occasion.

Somerville, Mass.—Bastian C. M. Boot, who recently opened a flower store in the new block at 680 Broadway, was married December 4 to Miss Henny Ter Avest. Mr. Boot had managed greenhouses in Holland before coming to America five years ago. After his arrival in America he had charge of different large estates.

Portland, Conn. Otto Keser finished his colonial dwelling house in good season and will give a house warming to a large circle of friends, to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of Keser and partner, just as soon as the holiday rush is over. He says they will not wait to see how much business has been done, as there is a steady increase.

Hartford, Conn. John Coombs says he feels younger than ever, though rounding out the forty-second year in the business at the same old stand. Of late years he has seen land immediately around him advance in value by leaps and bounds, so that there is not a plot that can be used for planting out stock within quite a distance. He has in mind a big farm located in the Connecticut valley, not far from A. N. Pierson's immense place, where they would be neighbors and could swap stories. He is now busy with boxwood and pine wreaths, of which they sell annually nearly 2,000. Holly is well berried; growing pine is scarce.

Butler, Tenn.—The Mountain Fern Co. has gone out of the evergreen business.

Moline, Ill. A carload of shrubs for use in the new Riverside park was received recently from Klehm's Nurseries, of Arlington Heights, Ill.

Sandwich, Ill.—Mrs. Frances Spickerman, proprietor of the Sandwich Greenhouses, is exhibiting a banana tree which is bearing fruit and which attracts considerable attention.

Binghamton, N. Y.—A. E. Fancher, of the Riverside Gardens, uses several of his houses for the growing of chrysanthemums. His stock, which includes a good proportion of the newest and best varieties, shows evidence of excellent culture.

St. John, N. B. H. E. Gould, the nurseryman and florist, who has a store here and also in several other towns, was present at the recent meeting in the Board of Trade rooms, for the organization of the Germain Street Improvement Association, and gave some valuable information regarding the planting of trees.

Northampton, Mass. H. W. Field says the report recently published, that he had donated a newly purchased plot of land to the city, is incorrect—has any grower too much land? He expects to make quite an addition to his range of glass and is tempted to take advantage of the low price of glass and make an early start.

Leavenworth, Kan. The Sunnyside Floral Co., though organized only three years ago, now has 25,000 square feet of glass at Twelfth and Vilas streets and a large, attractive store at Fifth and Shawnee streets. Great credit for the success of the business is due to R. O. Hinz, who superintends the work of growing the flowers, and also to Miss Eva Goodman, who is an expert decorator.

Beverly, Mass. George W. Glines, a former councilman, is said to be the pioneer vegetable forcer of this city. He built his first greenhouse twenty-one years ago. Now he owns and operates eleven houses, varying in length from 175 to 250 feet, on the east side of Dodge street, near Conant street. He also owns two houses one of them 340 feet long on the opposite side of the street, but he has leased these to Thomas Pembroke, who grows cut flowers in them and ships his output to Boston. Among the other vegetable houses in Mr. Glines' ward, eleven houses are conducted by Charles E. Caldwell, five by Wildred E. Caldwell, three by Arthur H. Kidder, three by James F. Potter and two by Frank A. Woodbury.

Lockland, O.—The Bloomhurst Floral Co., organized here early last spring, proceeded at once to put its establishment, on North Ruffner street, in good condition for business and is now growing stock of high quality for the local trade.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by act of Congress, March 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Special convention and National Flower Show, Boston, Mass., March 26 to April 1, 1911.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

RESULTS.
We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

Put The Review on your mailing list to receive copies of your catalogues, price-lists and special offers.

Growers blame the excessively dry summer for the fact that the carnation plants are not blooming as freely as usual this season.

Yesterday was the shortest day of the year, but it will be December 26 before the twenty-four hours are long enough for all the work the retail florist must crowd into them.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending the Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

L. Merton Gage, secretary, Orange, Mass., is distributing Bulletin No. 1 of the American Gladiolus Society, containing a report of the organization of the society, at Boston, and its initial exhibition, at Rochester.

Now that there is a real prospect of making a beginning on a parcels post system powerful opposition develops, backed by the big jobbing houses that pose as the champions of the country merchants.

The weather has been extremely unfavorable in the districts whence come the southern greens, particularly boxwood sprays and bronze galax. Such early snows seldom have been known in the Virginias and in North Carolina.

AGENCY COMMISSIONS.

Every now and then some advertiser in the allied trades section of The Review is solicited to turn over his account to one of the innumerable small advertising agencies on the ground that the agency's services will cost the advertiser nothing—that "the commissions paid by publishers support the agency." Perhaps they do, in certain cases, but it is well to bear in mind that the stronger trade papers refuse to pay commissions to agencies, and they refuse to pay because their experience is that the agency creates no new business for them, but rather gives them new business only when forced to do so by the advertiser. The impulse back of this force when it is exerted by the advertiser is usually the culmination of a long, patient, expensive siege laid by the publisher of the trade paper, personally or through his solicitors.

He created the demand and feels that he is entitled to the business direct, rather than to share it with an organization whose whole influence has been against rather than with him.

But back of this, the real reason is that trade papers have small circulations individually, compared with the great national magazines, and rates so low that even if they did offer to pay the agency fifteen per cent, the commission would not begin to pay the cost of writing the copy and handling the business. So the agencies really are not to blame if they turn their influence toward the great magazines, that charge a small fortune for a page, and against the trade paper, which asks for a page not so large a sum as the commission the big magazine can well afford to pay to get a new order. But the leading advertising agencies no longer accept accounts from advertisers who are not ready to pay the cost of the service; in that case they give the advertiser the benefit of any commissions they can secure, and, being experienced and unprejudiced, render the advertiser a really valuable service.

WHAT MAKES ADVERTISING.

Every little while someone asks The Review how in the world we get together the great volume of advertising that is published in each issue. Fact is, we don't get it together—it just comes to us, as you can see this man's advertisement coming:

Please discontinue my ad of gladioli, as my stock is nearly all sold, and I will tell you I will not be so shy in using your columns again, thank you.—E. S. Foster, Fulton, N. Y., December 8, 1910.

NEARLY EVERY WEEK.

Some of the readers of The Review have, it appears, not only noted the growth of the paper, but predicted it:

Enclosed find renewal of my subscription. A couple of years ago I prophesied you would some day publish 100 pages a week. That time seems to be just about here.—John Beimford, Wilton Junction, Ia., December 15, 1910.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

Business continued excellent through last week, but Sunday's storm caused retailers to carry over considerable stock to the beginning of the present week, and the natural lull which precedes the holiday activity also had an effect, so that Monday and Tuesday were quiet days in the market. On Wednesday the Christmas shipping assumed considerable volume and the rest of the week promises to be the busiest the Chicago market ever has known.

Supplies of stock have proved larger than anticipated. The weather scarcely could have been more favorable for cut flower crops and, as most of the growers of roses were just coming into crop, the supply in this department is greater than ever before at Christmas. This fact, and the erroneous deductions drawn from the operations of some of the retailers, resulted in putting the wholesalers under much pressure at the opening of the week. There were considerable quantities of open, blue and crippled Beauties that were seeking an immediate buyer at low prices, and these sales reported as being the prices of good stock were naturally disturbing. At the same time, several of the leading retailers were advertising long

FANCY STOCK FOR NEW YEAR'S

We never handled finer flowers than now.

Your trade for the social affairs of the Holidays calls for the best—use anything but the best and you lose your reputation with the best flower buyers in your city. Beauties, Killarneys, Violets, Cattleyas. These are our leaders, the flowers most used for Holiday parties and at New Year's.

Beauties

WERE NEVER FINER THAN OURS

We never have seen a finer crop of Beauties than we now have—splendid color, large, perfect buds, fine foliage and all lengths of stem, but specially strong on long to medium. When you have tried these Beauties you will agree with us that nothing finer could be asked.

KILLARNEY

The Largest Heads on All Lengths.

Length for length of stem, our Killarneys carry the largest flowers we ever have seen on these roses. It is not alone on Killarney and White Killarney that we are strong– we can supply all other roses of excellent quality and in quantity. Splendid crops of Richmond and Maryland.

CARNATIONS

We are cutting a good quantity of Carnations and our stock is widely known as always the most uniformly high quality large lot in this market.

DOUBLE VIOLETS SINGLE

We handle the cream of the crops of the Hudson river doubles, and they are fine. Also fragrant, home-grown singles that are the best the market affords.

We always have the Novelties, such as fancy Cattleyas, Bouvardia, Sweet Peas, Daisies, and every other flower that's in season.

A Large Cut of Fine Smilax Now on.

Fancy Valley and Easter Lilies

Beauties for Christmas at prices lower than heretofore have prevailed. Fleischman started it by offering Christmas Beauties at $15 per dozen, and others, not to be outdone, quoted even lower prices. A good many smaller dealers, figuring on the 100 per cent basis, jumped to the conclusion that these big retail stores must be buying their Beauties at from $6 to $7.50 per dozen, and the supposition, after passing through a few hands, came to be stated as an actual fact. It was natural that buyers should put the wholesalers under much pressure in the effort to secure their own supplies on what they thought to be the basis others procured them. The fact appears to be that a good many people have overlooked the circumstance that when a retail business reaches a certain volume the 100 per cent basis for prices no longer is necessary, and that Fleischman and several others appear to think that they have reached the point where they can afford to handle their leading items on a fifty per cent basis. Early in the week wholesalers refused to book orders for first-class Beauties at less than $10 per dozen in large lots, and $12 in smaller quantities. At the middle of the week it seemed as likely that higher prices will be reached before Christmas noon as that lower rates will be necessary to clean up.

The quality of roses never has been better for Christmas; in fact, nothing better could be asked. Killarney is specially good. There is an abundance of roses for all apparent requirements, except possibly of Richmond, which is in special request. The medium grades of all varieties will be the ones that run short. The call for funeral work has let up at the same time that Bride has come into heavy crop with many growers, and the opening of the week saw the market overstocked with white roses.

Carnations have profited with the days of bright sun, but the supply will not exceed the Christmas demand. At the opening of the week there were more white than could be placed at regular prices and this condition may prevail through the holiday rush, though shipping orders are likely to take everything of good quality that is on hand at the right time.

Cattleyas are more abundant. There are plenty of violets for immediate needs and the prospect of enough for the holiday demand. Poinsettias are not as plentiful as in some other years, but they are not selling specially well. Paper Whites are everywhere and Romans are more abundant. A few Trumpet narcissi have arrived. There are not many Harrisii or callas, but the demand for these is light. Bouvardia is less plentiful. There are more sweet peas than at any previous Christmas. Stevia is abundant. A bunch or two goes with nearly every order.

The green goods market is not appreciably affected by the Christmas demand, though there has been a big increase in the call for boxwood and galax because of the scarcity of bouquet green. A number of large shipments of boxwood have arrived this week and others are on the way.

There is some excellent holly. Good Christmas trees are scarce.

Aphine

The Insecticide that kills plant Lice of every species

Messrs. Scott Brothers, Elmsford, N.Y., say: "Aphine is an effective and easily applied spraying remedy for insects of all kinds, in which we have absolute confidence. We dipped all our cuttings in this insecticide last year before putting them in the cutting bench and again before potting into first pots, and we were never freer from insects of all kinds, particularly those troublesome little thrips on chrysanthemums. It is an effective remedy for scale on palms, crotons, etc."

The first seventeen days of December, and especially the latter half of that period, scarcely could have been more favorable for cut flower production—and it is this part of the month that makes the Christmas crop. Amling to Move.

The E. C. Amling Co. has secured a lease on the store at 19 and 21 Randolph street and has ordered new fixtures, which are promised to be in place so that removal will occur about January 6. The store is 40x165, running back to an alley, which will give exceptional convenience for the receiving and shipping departments. A new icebox 10x30 and eight feet high is being built by Orr & Lockett, in addition to the old ones which will be moved. The offices will be at the Randolph street front.

This will be not only the largest floor space occupied by any strictly cut flower house, but it will be the only ground floor wholesale store in Chicago. Mr. Amling states that the move has been made necessary by rapidly increasing business.

The four upper floors of the building at 19 and 21 Randolph street are occupied by the A. L. Randall Co.

Various Notes.

There is much illness. N. J. Wietor was confined to his home at the opening of the week. G. H. Pieser, president of the Kennicott Bros. Co., is still confined to his home, with no immediate prospect of his being able to resume business. Mrs. E. E. Pieser, wife of the treasurer of the company, is quite ill and the mother of the Pieser brothers, who is well advanced in years, also in confined to her bed. H. W. Rogers, of Weiland & Risch, has been absent for several days, fighting off pneumonia.

W. H. Hilton, at 1320 East Sixty-third street, is having much of his busiest season, for he now has a big bon bon business in addition to his blossoms.

August Poehlmann and Adolph Poehlmann, with a force of packers from the greenhouses, are helping out in the store this week.

C. A. Samuelson has his new Packard delivery car in service. It is one of the handsomest in town.

Emil Buettner was among the growers who hit Christmas just right with a crop of Killarney. He says the quality is the best he ever marketed.

Mrs. F. Mullman, mother of Mrs. Leonard Kill, and her two children, accompanied by Mrs. C. Kronenberger and Miss Mary Kill, sisters of Mr. Kill, have gone to Los Angeles to spend three months with Mr. and Mrs. Kill.

E. H. Hunt's travelers came in to help get out the rush of late orders in the supply department. W. E. Lynch says the orders booked December 20 indicate the cut flower department would have the biggest Christmas business in the history of the firm.

Red berries are a scarce article. Vaughan & Sperry procured a ton by express from California and had sold them practically all before arrival.

Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Kyle, of Kyle & Foerster, were at Elizabeth, Ill., December 18, to attend the funeral of a relative of Mrs. Kyle, and when they returned received word of the death of the son of Mr. Kyle's brother.

W. J. Smyth's new delivery automobile is a great help in his holiday work. He also keeps his touring car busily occupied in the service of the store.

John Kruchten paid a visit to some of the growers the last few days to size up prospects and says there will be no scarcity for a few weeks, but that he looks to see all the rose growers then go off crop at one time.

Winterson's Seed Store says the baby Christmas trees are the best retail seller of the season's stock.

J. A. Budlong received a big shipment of valley pips from New York December 19.

Tim Matchen says Peter Reinberg's advance orders, especially for Richmond, were the heaviest ever known at Christmas.

The Chicago Carnation Co. has been exhibiting at its store sample blooms of Princess Charming, the new light pink carnation, of which it is growing 1,000 plants. The stem is exceptionally strong and the calyx apparently is all that could be desired, while the flower is large and full. Mr. Pyfer says the plants give every indication that as many flowers can be cut in the season as with Enchantress.

C. W. McKellar says there seldom has been a time when so great a variety of orchids has been available. The time has gone by when cattleyas were the only variety used by the retail stores.

Fred Hoerber, who lives at Des Plaines and is constantly on the job in the greenhouses, visited the store of Hoerber Bros. one day this week and says they appear to have got past all their troubles when they secured a sufficient supply of water in their artesian well. They had to go down nearly 1,200 feet, but now have a continuous flow from a 3-inch pipe.

Bassett & Washburn say they have refused more orders for O. P. Bassett carnations at 15 cents each for Christmas delivery than they were able to accept, which was quite a few.

The incorporation of the N. C. Moore Co. is recorded. The capital stock is $2,500, and the incorporators are Mary

NEW ORLEANS.

Club Meeting.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society held, December 15, at Kolb's German Tavern on St. Charles street, one of the most interesting and best attended of the monthly meetings of the year. On account of the approaching holidays, it was decided to have a display of seasonable plants and flowers and many of the prominent local growers had the best of both on hand.

When the president, Richard Eichling, called the meeting to order, many of the members were present and more came in during the progress of the meeting. Paul Abele acted as secretary, in the absence of C. R. Panter. The large meeting room looked like a beautiful miniature flower show, and the absent ones surely missed a rare treat for the eye as well as the mind. The regular routine business over, the display of flowers was discussed.

J. A. Newsham had one of the finest and best grown collections of flowering plants and ferns ever shown at the society's meetings at this time of the year. Most noteworthy were his cattleyas and a collection of hybrid cypripediums in bloom. Among the latter was a fine plant of C. Fairieanum, known as the lost orchid, which is still rare and valuable among collectors. His Lorraine begonias, poinsettias, azaleas, Adiantum Farleyense and A. hybridum all made a fine showing.

Richard Eichling, foreman of U. J. Virgin's nursery, exhibited the following: A large pan of poinsettias, azaleas, Phoenix Roebelenii, Nephrolepis Bostoniensis, Selaginella Emmeliana and Davallia Fijiensis plumosa. The plants were in robust, clean growth and the specimen davallia was especially admired.

Abele Bros. brought a Begonia Lorraine and a Dracæna Mandaiana, both grown to perfection.

C. W. Eichling showed a well grown Lilium giganteum, two bulbs in a 7-inch pot, with seven perfect open flowers. He makes quite a specialty of these showy plants and has them in bloom nearly all the year around.

J. St. Mard's poinsettias were fine in foliage and flowers.

The only exhibit of cut flowers was made by the Metairie Ridge Nursery Co., of which Harry Papworth is president. It comprised the following varieties of roses, in vases of fifty blooms each: American Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney, My Maryland, Kaiserin, Chateau de Clos de Vougeot, Richmond, Mrs. Jardine, Bride, Bridesmaid, W. R. Smith and Rhea Reid. The flowers, stems and foliage of these roses were perfect and this beautiful exhibit won the highest praise from all present. Harry Dressel, who had charge of it, accepted the honors bestowed upon him in his usual modest way. During the time he has had charge of the rose department of the Metairie Ridge Nursery he has proved that with skill and proper observation of our soil and subtropical climate great results in rose growing for cut flowers can be obtained.

After the discussion of the exhibits, C. W. Eichling deplored that they could not be seen by the people of the city and thereby be of great material benefit to the different growers. He made a motion to give an exhibition on similar lines as the one at the meeting during the latter part of January, and invite the public to view it free of charge. His idea was approved by all and the following committee was appointed to secure a suitable place in which to hold it: C. W. Eichling, P. A. Chopin, J. A. Newsham and C. R. Panter.

The secretary, C. R. Panter, was in-

The Rising Eastern Market.

The usual market report had failed to arrive when press hour came to hand for this week's Review.

The New Dreer Place.

Great interest is felt among florists generally about the new plant, now nearly completed, that is being built by Henry A. Dreer on the 123-acre farm that was purchased last summer. This farm is only a few minutes' drive from Riverton. It is situated on the opposite side of the Pennsylvania railroad tracks, with a frontage of something like 2,300 feet along the railroad. The plant now under construction lies about 300 feet back from the tracks, giving ample display room for summer planting. It covers a surface 203x483 feet, exclusive of the boiler shed. This area is divided into two ranges, each consisting of ten houses 21x203, divided by a service shed. The houses run parallel to the service shed and are divided in the middle by a corridor house running at right angles from end to end. This rough outline will give an idea of the way the place is laid out. The plan is to secure the best results from labor, the chief item of running expenses, as well as to secure the most convenient arrangement of the houses.

The corridor house, dividing the entire place in halves and centering in the service house, where packing, potting, etc., will be done, is the chief feature in this plan. Ten of the houses are complete, piped, benched and ready for the plants; these houses are separated one from the other by side walls. The remaining ten houses are nearly ready; they are laid out in three sets —four houses open between in the first set, and three houses, each open into the others, in the second and third sets. The final glazing and painting, the concrete walls and the pipe are being rapidly pushed in this range, where beds will probably be used instead of benches, as in the first range.

The heating plant is located in a magnificent fireproof building nearby. This building contains five seventy-five horse-power horizontal return tubular boilers, harnessed together, with space alongside for an additional five when needed. There are two centrifugal pumps, each with a separate engine to work it, so arranged that should either break down the other can immediately replace it. These pumps are used for the forced circulation of hot water; they draw the water from the 2-inch pipe back to the boilers with such rapidity that the heat is but slightly lower than when it left the boiler.

A blower to give forced draft for burning low grade coal has been installed. The smokestack is a work of art; it is made of tiles of a patent used in the Heine chimney, so arranged as to give great strength. The chimney is circular, seventy feet high and six feet in diameter; it will readily furnish draft for the additional five boilers when required. Water to the capacity of something like 100,000 gallons a day is furnished by a well dug nearby to a moderate depth.

The speed with which this well arranged plan has been carried into execution is wonderful. The farm was purchased in the middle of July last; the plans for the houses and heating plant were accepted in the middle of September, and now, in the middle of December, one-half the plant is in operation and the other half soon will be.

The stock for these two acres of greenhouses is ready at Riverton. In fact, so carefully have the crops been timed that Mr. Eisele assures me emphatically that four weeks after the new place has been stocked from Riverton the stock will not be missed. A quantity of nephrolepis in the leading varieties will be grown in the new range; also some palms and the latest Dreer specialty, variegated pineapples. Exactly what plants will go over will be determined on the spur of the moment, as seems most expedient when each house is ready.

The construction of this handsome plant marks an epoch in greenhouse enterprise. It is the largest area of glass ever put up at one time for pot plants. It is the result of the life experience of a past master in our profession and it is intended to be the beginning of the greatest establishment of its kind in America. Phil.

Mishawaka, Ind.—C. L. Powell is said to be notably successful in the growing of chrysanthemums, producing flowers that are remarkable both for size and beauty. A few of them are shipped out of town, but most of them are needed for his local trade.

DAYTON, O.

The Market.

During the last six weeks we have had but little sunshine, with an occasional siege of snow flurries. Such weather conditions do not have the best effect on crops, especially when one has the Christmas season and its demands to take care of, but when the sun does favor us with a day's sunshine, it certainly does its whole duty, as the buds seem to be just waiting for a little sunshine to coax them to open. However, when it comes to quality, the majority of stock on exhibition in our stores is good, and in quantity it is also good, especially roses.

Carnations are coming along well. Enchantress and white are exceptionally good, with long, stiff stems and large flowers. These varieties are in good crop, and although red and cerise are coming on well, the supply on these shades is not quite so plentiful. Roses, when it comes to quantity, far exceed the carnation supply. They seem to have stood the dull weather remarkably well. There appear to be but few coming in the short stem grade, however, but, much to the growers' delight, there are plenty of the long-stemmed variety in first-class stock. Bride and Bridesmaid are in the lead, while crops on Rhea Reid, Richmond and Beauties are also good; still there is no doubt but what the demand for these will far exceed the supply. Other varieties coming on for Christmas are Killarney, White Killarney, Maryland, Smith and Perles.

There will not be an overabundance of Easter lilies in the market, for although the local demand seems to run more on other stock for Christmas, lilies are preferred in funeral designing. The calla supply will also be limited. Narcissi, in white and yellow, are plentiful, likewise Roman hyacinths and lily of the valley. Poinsettias are coming along in fine shape for Christmas and evidently there will be a good supply.

Violets are coming in fine, but they will not be overabundant. The supply of smilax is heavy and the quality good. Plumosus and Sprengeri are a little scarce just now, especially the latter, for which there has been a good demand right along. Last week was a busy one with the store men in making up their holly wreaths. Most of the holly received in the market this season was good, but it was not quite so full of berries as last year. Cut flowers of all kinds will predominate in the Christmas trade, while the supply of pot plants will be limited to a few varieties.

Business last week was good and funeral work largely increased the demand. Present indications point to a most successful trade for Christmas this year. Orders are coming in rapidly, and even though stock is in good supply, it keeps both growers and retailers jumping to fill all requirements. The heaviest strain will be on the carnation crop.

Various Notes.

At a meeting of the directors of the Miami Floral Co. last week, new officers were elected, as follows: President, Harry C. Kiefaber; vice-president, Edward G. Pease; secretary, Roy G. Fitzgerald; treasurer, William Kiefaber. This company is at present cutting some extra fine roses and carnations, and is also well supplied with narcissi, both yellow and white. A. F. Longren, who called last week, says that the carnations at the Miami Floral Co.'s place are the best he has seen in his travels this fall.

Ora Carpenter, of Piqua, O., shook hands with Dayton florists this week. Mr. Carpenter has recently gone into business in Piqua under the firm name, Gerlach & Carpenter, having bought out the business of Wm. Frisch.

John Guenther, of Piqua, O., called on Dayton friends last week. In the spring Mr. Guenther expects to go into business for himself.

M. Anderson is handling lots of holly and mistletoe for Christmas.

The Heiss Co. says that its crops have been greatly checked by the dull weather, but prospects for a good Christmas trade are encouraging.

Louis Schellhaas, our neighbor florist of Miamisburg, reports that he had some big funeral orders last week.

Business in Xenia, O., according to George Engel's report, was good last week.

H. H. Ritter is trying his luck at selling Christmas trees, table size, in pots. Merely as an experiment, he got in a small order of them. Sales came so quickly, and orders, too, that he has put in a rush order for a good many more. He also has some fine poinsettias in his greenhouse, just right for the holiday trade, besides some fine violets and orchids.

Mrs. B. Hendrichs tells us that business over her way has been most satisfactory of late.

The Dayton Floral Co. is offering to the trade some tip-top azaleas and poinsettias, and is much encouraged with the way Christmas orders are coming in.

"My primroses, cyclamens and forget-me-nots are coming in fine, and I shall also be well supplied with narcissi and Romans," is what Mrs. B. Haschke tells us.

The Advance Floral Co. has its stand in the Arcade appropriately decorated for the holidays. Aside from holly wreaths, this company is making up some pretty wreaths of boxwood and red immortelles.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Last week was a slow one so far as business was concerned, but everybody has been on the jump preparing for Christmas, getting in potted stock and greens. The outlook for the holiday trade in this vicinity is better than in years past. The wholesalers and retailers report plenty of green goods and the usual holiday stock. The excessively cold weather and cloudy, snowy days have set back roses, violets and carnations so that some scarcity is reported and prices have perceptibly stiffened. However, the dealers expect to make the supply of lilies of the valley, Easter lilies, gardenias, orchids, narcissi and Roman hyacinths help out.

Windows throughout the city have all taken on a holiday appearance, red and green predominating in the color schemes. The boxwood balls and wreaths, the holly and laurel wreaths, with begonias and poinsettias, Jerusalem cherries and ardisias, make up the supply everywhere.

Various Notes.

Some malicious person broke a large number of panes of glass in the greenhouses of Conrad Schultz, at Westerly, Thursday night, December 15. It would appear that whoever did it intended to cause serious damage, as the night was bitterly cold, in fact the coldest of the winter, when the thermometer in that vicinity registered as low as 10 degrees below zero, and a large number of his tender plants suffered. Just the amount of damage has not yet been determined, but it is thought that it will be quite heavy, as Mr. Schultz had a large number of potted plants ready for the Christmas holidays.

The Rhode Island Horticultural Society held a meeting in the lecture room of the Providence public library, Wednesday evening, December 21.

The following officers were elected by the Newport Horticultural Society at its annual meeting Tuesday evening, December 13: President, Andrew S. Meikle; first vice-president, William MacKay; second vice-president, Andrew L. Dorward; recording secretary, Daniel J. Coughlin; financial secretary,

As Christmas draws near, judging from indications, there will be none too much stock. A few more or less bright days last week helped matters considerably, but the cut will hardly be as large as other years.

Roses are coming in more strongly. Beauties, Killarney, Richmond and Bride are of fine quality. The supply of choice long stock in the first named is large and the buds have a good color and are free from blemishes. Carnations promise to be in about one-half of their normal Christmas supply, and the prices will be high. The supply of other stock has been sufficient and will come close to being so the latter part of this week. The early part of last week found valley a trifle scarce, but toward the middle of the week the supply increased and there was enough for all. New York double violets are in sufficient supply. Some of the local growers state that by Christmas they will have a full crop of single violets. Easter lilies are still arriving regularly, but not in so large quantities as they were. The supply of Paper Whites is assuming large proportions. Poinsettias are now a regular factor in the market. There is a strong demand for all kinds of green goods, especially plumosus and Sprengeri. Holly is selling rapidly. Laurel roping is scarce, and is advancing in price. Some large orders for southern smilax are being filled.

Various Notes.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

THE general catalogue of Arthur T. Boddington quotes practically all varieties of peas by the bushel, at from $12 to $20.

W. W. TRACY, JR., recently purchased a farm near Kendrick, Idaho, for the growing of vegetable and flower seeds for the wholesale trade.

MRS. F. W. BRUGGERHOF, wife of the venerable head of J. M. Thorburn & Co., and president of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League, passed away at her home December 13.

THE death of Robert Buist, at Philadelphia, was reported briefly in last week's issue of The Review. A further note of special interest to seedsmen appears in the obituary column this week.

THE late C. P. Braslan was chairman of the commission which seeks to secure for San Francisco the Panama Exposition of 1915. He had just made a trip to Washington in this interest.

THE Texas Seed and Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., is considering bids for a three stories and basement brick and concrete warehouse 100x175 to cost about $50,000. It is to be so located that it will have a side track connection with four railroads.

SEEDSMEN who once mailed their catalogues year after year to thousands of names that never returned an order, generally have seen the error of their ways. This year few books will go to those who did not order in the season of 1910 or 1909.

SEEDSMEN who have made a December specialty of Christmas greens are finding it increasingly difficult to show a profit in proportion to the work and risk, though it is reported one house cleaned up $12,000 on bouquet green alone in the season of 1909.

A GOOD many seedsmen have economized on catalogues this year—that is, they have resisted more or less successfully the tendency to annual increase in size, cost and circulation. The idea is that seeds will be easier to sell, though at narrower profits, this year than usual.

MOST of the catalogues are ready, or already in the mails, for the southern addresses. The southern trade has grown fully as fast as any branch of the seed trade the last few years.

G. W. WALTERS, Sharon, Pa., has secured a patent on what he calls a horticultural post card. It is a device similar to a coin carrier except that it is made of corrugated board as thick as may be desired to provide pockets for seeds, etc., which are sealed with a flap of transparent paper.

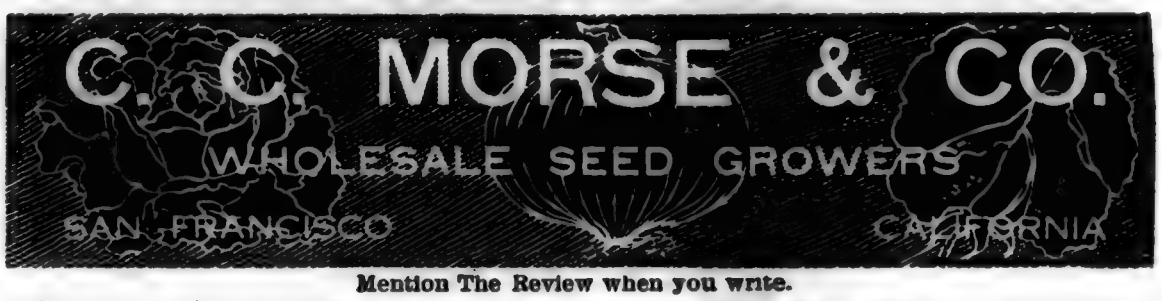
SEED trade visitors to Philadelphia find much of interest in the equipment of the new and strictly modern seed store of H. F. Michell Co., 518 Market street.

BECAUSE the Burton Implement Co., of Ogden, failed to deliver a reaper to James Allen, of Tremonton, Utah, in time to harvest this season's crop of alfalfa seed, suit has been brought for $2,000, alleged to be the value of the seed lost.



THE Rochelle Seed Co., of Rochelle, Ill., has purchased some neighboring property, in order to have space for the necessary enlargement of buildings. The business was founded by Frank D. Evans and James E. Barber, in 1907. At that time they erected a two-story brick building, eighty feet long and well equipped for the care of seeds. They propose to double the size of the present building in 1911.

BRASLAN AT HOME.

"A prophet is not without honor save in his own home," and the San Jose papers of early December, just to hand in the east, are read with much interest, for the obituary of Charles P. Braslan and the account of his funeral are the principal features of several issues. Prominent as was Major Braslan in the affairs of the seed trade, he occupied a still larger place in the activities of his section of California, and it required nearly four columns of the Mercury, December 4, to tell in eulogistic phraseology of his life and works. Three days later as much space was given to the account of his funeral, with illustrations showing the profu-

INSECTICIDE REGULATIONS.

The federal insecticide act of 1910 will become effective January 1. Joint regulations for its enforcement have just been issued by the secretaries of the Treasury, of Agriculture, and of Commerce and Labor. The act forbids the manufacture or sale in federal territory of adulterated or misbranded insecticides and fungicides, especially mentioning Paris green and lead arsenate. It also forbids interstate shipment of such articles, and this is its most important feature.

Under the regulations, samples of insecticides and fungicides are to be collected by purchase by agents of the Paris green is considered adulterated if it does not contain at least fifty per cent of arsenious oxide; on the other hand, it must not contain arsenic in water-soluble forms equivalent to more than three and one-half per cent of arsenious oxide; and no substance may be mixed with it so as to lower its strength.

Lead arsenate is counted adulterated if it contains more than fifty per cent of water, or if its total arsenic is equivalent to less than twelve and one-half per cent of arsenic oxide, or if it contains arsenic in water-soluble forms equivalent to more than three-quarters of one per cent of arsenic oxide, or if any substance is mixed with it so as to lower its strength. If lead arsenate contains more than fifty per cent of water it must be labeled "lead arsenate and water," and the extra percentage of water must be plainly stated.

Any other insecticide or fungicide is considered adulterated if its strength or purity fall below the standard under which it is sold, or if any substance has been wholly or partially substituted for it, or if any valuable ingredient has been even partially removed, or if it is intended to be used on vegetation and is injurious to vegetation. If the designation of an article imports the presence in it of a certain substance, that substance must be present in the customary amount.

Any insecticide or fungicide is misbranded if the label bear any statement, design, or device that is false or misleading in any particular, either as to the character of the article or as to the place of manufacture, and the term "label" is defined so as to include any circulars, etc., that are packed with the article or referred to either on the label or on the circulars accompanying the article. If the contents are stated in terms of weight or measure, they must be correctly stated. If an insecticide or fungicide (other than Paris green or lead arsenate) contains arsenic in any form, the total amount of arsenic and the amount of water-soluble arsenic must each be stated on the label. The amount of inert substances (often called "filler") must also be stated.

If the name of the manufacturer is given on the label, it must be the actual manufacturer; if the name given is not that of the actual manufacturer, the phrase "packed for . . ." "distributed by . . ." or some equivalent phrase, must be used with the name.

The dealer may relieve himself of responsibility by securing from the wholesaler or from the manufacturer a guaranty that the article is not "adulter

The alimentary canal in man is thirty-two feet long and only the first three inches you control. It is a very small proportion, but a very important part. The man who knows how to manage his tongue well, is a valuable man. Get the habit of self-control—smile and let the others talk. He who attends to his own business has no time to attend to the business of others. The man who tears down reputations always gets most of the dirt himself.

The best Horseshoe Brand salesman is Horseshoe Brand Products. They will satisfy the most critical. There are reasons, and good ones, why Horseshoe Brand Bulbs are of superior quality—ask the man who grows them. All varieties ready for immediate or later delivery, at reasonable prices.

LEAF-BURN OF LETTUCE.

What is the cause of the burning, as we call it, and the final rotting of the edges of head lettuce leaves when being forced, and is there any way of preventing this? May King is more exempt than any other variety I have tried, but it, too, is often affected. The retailers tell me that it often comes to them in this condition from the wholesale market. With me the rot gets quite bad before the heads are hard enough for market. J. M.

Leaf-burn of lettuce is not a disease; it is simply a wilting and drying up of the edges of the leaves by bright sunshine. It occurs usually when the plants are nearly full-grown and have a large area of foliage exposed to the sun. It is particularly likely to occur on a bright day, just after several cloudy ones. Under these conditions the sap in the plants is at low ebb, and to start flowing suddenly is impossible. When the sun bursts out upon the plants, causing instant evaporation from the leaves, the roots are unable to send up sufficient supply until they get warmed up and get the sap started faster. The consequence is that the foliage wilts somewhat and may burn dry on the edges.

The remedy is to cut off the heat and ventilate freely on such occasions. For the first day after a cloudy spell, run the houses quite cool. The lettuce is more likely to burn on heavy soil than on sandy soil, because moisture does not flow so quickly through the heavy soil to the roots.

A similar leaf-burn often is caused by too strong tobacco smoke. H. G.

Lenox, Mass.—The greenhouses on the estate of Geo. H. Morgan, where Thomas Page is superintendent, have been undergoing thorough repairs.

Langdon's Tomatoes

¶I have tried all the various strains of Earliana on the market, and yours is the only one I have found that meets my idea of what a good early Tomato should be.
—Prof. W. F. Massey.

"Grower" writes, Nov. 13, 1910: "I think your strain the finest early variety ever produced for outdoor use, and a good heavy cropper. For forcing it is also very good. It seems to do better with two or three stems than with one alone. It can be planted much closer than other forcing varieties, and has not yet shown a fruit with me that had blossom end rot or dry rot, although other varieties around it have shown it more or less. It is remarkably solid and meaty inside, but has one fault like all Earlianas, having a thin skin. If kept too dry they show a softness, but they will stand more water and feed than any other variety I ever grew."

"Grower" runs 100,000 sq. ft. of glass and knows what a good tomato should be.

Send for our circular for further description and see Market Growers' Journal of Nov. 5.

If you want to be first on your market with perfect tomatoes that will bring a premium over top-notch prices, plant Langdon's Northern Adirondack Strain of Earliana Tomatoes. Equally good for field or forcing.

Prices: ½ oz., 40c; 1 oz., 60c; 2 oz., $1.20; 4 oz., $2.00; 8 oz., $3.50; 1 lb., $6.00.

Chrysanthemum

By Arthur Herrington

Formerly president Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The most complete and comprehensive work on the cultivation of the chrysanthemum that has yet been published in America. Its scope and character may be gleaned from the list of contents, which comprises chapters on composts; planting; benches, boxes or pots; general cultural details; crown and terminal buds; feeding, its object and application; care of the buds; exhibition and judging; specimen plants, plants in pots; raising from seed and hybridizing; sports; hardy chrysanthemums; chrysanthemums for south and west; insect pests and diseases; classification and selection of varieties for special purposes; history of the chrysanthemum, etc. The book will be welcomed for the lucid, comprehensive, as well as the practical character of its contents. Handsomely illustrated. 168 pages, 5x7 inches. Price 50c postpaid.

PACIFIC COAST.

H. A. Shiffer, of Perris, Cal., is preparing to establish a nursery in connection with his real estate business.

The Kirkman Nursery Co., of Fresno, Cal., has established sales yards at Madera, Cal., with Harry Fraser in charge.

The Ephrata Nursery Co., of Wenatchee, Wash., has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $5,000, by R. F. Holmes and Effie D. Holmes.

Readers on the Pacific coast will be interested in the illustration of one of the fields of the California Rose Co., of Pomona, which appears on page 15 of this issue.

The United Eucalyptus Nursery Co., of Alameda, Cal., has entered a voluntary petition in bankruptcy, with liabilities amounting to $5,418 and assets valued at $2,325.

The Vineland Nurseries Co., of Clarkston, Wash., has purchased 100 acres of irrigated land from the Pasco Reclamation Co. The nursery firm is planning great improvements on the new tract.

Readers on the Pacific coast will be specially interested in the portraits of the quartet of well known San Franciscans, which appear on page 13 of this issue. The picture was made at the recent exceptionally successful San Francisco flower show.

SAN FRANCISO, CAL.

The Market.

Everything, with the possible exception of business, was assuming a holiday appearance as early as December 15 and the weather continued to be all that one could wish for. We have had no cold nights or days so far this season and as a consequence flowers of all kinds are plentiful. This is quite the opposite of the conditions that usually prevail at this time and whether it results to the benefit of the trade or not is a mooted question. Better prices and a better demand are always the rule when there is a scarcity of stock.

Carnations are plentiful, and, although the same cannot be said about roses, they are nevertheless much more in evidence than they were at this time one year ago. Outside mums are holding out well, thanks to the mild climatic conditions, and the hardy bulbous stock is also coming into town in large lots. Valley is plentiful again, and a few Lilium longiflorum with rather short stems help to fill up. Poinsettias in pots are selling wholesale at from $6 to $9 per dozen, and the cut blooms bring from $10 to $15 per hundred for outside stock and about double that price for inside grown. Other lines of stock have not advanced much as yet and if these good weather conditions continue we may have cheap flowers this Christmas.

Various Notes.

John Tegelaar, the bulb grower of Lisse, Holland, is on a trip to California, and is interviewing the local dealers.

Gill's Floral Depot will remove about January 1 to the corner of Twenty-first street and Telegraph avenue, Oakland.

Wm. H. Hutchins, of Fruitvale, has for sale one of the largest stocks of poinsettias ever grown in this neighborhood.

J. M. Holland, of Berkeley, has leased a large lot on the corner of Haste and Shattuck avenues in that

Fred T. Schmidt is on a two weeks' trip to Portland and vicinity. G.

LOS ANGELES.

The writer recently visited the large Asparagus plumosus houses of E. R. Meserve, located at Long Beach, Cal., in order to look over the houses, inspect the seed crop and investigate the system adopted for the growing of Asparagus plumosus for seed. The entire output of these houses is now being handled by the Los Angeles Flower Market. The crop is conservatively estimated at six millions of select, carefully graded seeds. The average length of strings is twelve to fourteen feet, with an average of 200 strings to each row. These rows are three feet apart and there are forty rows in the large house. There is also a smaller section of eighteen rows, sixty feet in length; in this house there are at least 6,000 strings, hanging full of berries from the ground to the top. The correspondent, with Hubert Morton, formerly of Chicago, counted many of the sprays and found an average of forty berries to each spray and from sixty to 100 sprays to each string, each berry containing from two to three seeds.

This great crop of seed will ripen about one-third in January and two-thirds during March. As there were two distinct times of blooming, first in September and next in November, we found many ripe berries and all the early crop is thoroughly matured, only needing a short time longer for coloring. The location, within two miles of the ocean and on the west slope of the hill, assures the ideal condition for perfect pollenization of the flowers and the maturing of seeds. It is stated that one month's advertising in The Review has brought in orders for over one million seeds, orders coming from Canada, the United States and Denmark. M.

TULIPS FOR BEDDING.

Will you kindly give me the name and color of three tulips that grow to the same height and bloom at the same time? I want them for bedding purposes. R. A. W.

In single early tulips, Joost von Vondel, white; Chrysolora, yellow, and Rose Luisante, deep rose, are of equal height, averaging ten inches. White Pottebakker, Queen of the Netherlands, satiny pink, and Scarlet Pottebakker attain a height of twelve to thirteen inches. Still another good trio would be White Hawk, pure white, Yellow Pottebakker, bright yellow, and Proserpine, carmine rose; the average height of these is fourteen inches. Keizerskroon, red and yellow, is of the same height and a superb bedder. In double tulips, La Candeur, white; Murillo, light rose, and Rex rubrorum, scarlet, grow ten to eleven inches high and bloom together. In late tulips, Gesneriana major, scarlet; Gesneriana lutea, golden yellow, and Gretchen, soft blush, a Darwin variety, averaging eighteen to twenty inches in height, will be found to be fine. C. W.

Nova, Ind.—O. C. Ports, private and commercial gardener for the last thirty years, has purchased a 20-acre tract of land near Clifton Forge, Va., and will remove there about February 1 to start a florist business of his own. Mr. Ports says that Clifton Forge has 7,000 population and the nearest florist is fifty miles distant, so with his wife's assistance he expects considerable success.

THOSE bushel boxes of fancy western apples do not seem to be bringing any less money just because there are more of them this year.

THE planting of apple orchards in the state of Washington is progressing at a rate that causes some nurserymen to wonder what the end will be.

THE eighth annual meeting of the Alabama State Horticultural Society will be held in Birmingham January 19 and 20. Many nurserymen will attend.

THE Knoxville Nursery Co., of Knoxville, is completing at its Bell's Bridge nursery a brick grafting house to take the place of the frame one destroyed by fire last March.

THE Sunnyside Nursery Co., at Sunnyside, Wash., has just completed a new packing and storage house, 100x100 feet. George Emmert, general manager for the firm, reports some heavy fall shipments of stock.

C. P. CLOSE, secretary, College Park, Md., announces that the Society for Horticultural Science will hold its next annual meeting at Tampa, Fla., February 9, 1911, the day preceding the meeting of the American Pomological Society, which convenes there February 10 and 11, 1911.

WESTERLY, R. I.

S. J. Reuter has fully recovered from his recent indisposition and is as active as ever. His several houses of carnations are a treat to see at this season. Sangamo, Afterglow, Mrs. C. W. Ward, Dorothy Gordon and Ruby are doing splendidly and are a great quintet. White Enchantress and White Perfection are the most profitable in their class. Bon Ami, White Wonder and Gloriosa are having a good test. Pink Delight is grown in larger quantity than any other variety; it is in high favor here, doing much better than last year. All are grown in solid beds, with concrete edges, three inches in thickness at the bottom and one and three-quarters inches at the top. Mr. Reuter considers this quite thick enough and it makes a neat border. His roses are looking good and include lots of Killarney and Maryland; a side bed in the propagating house is filled with thrifty cuttings. Manetti are being potted up, arriving in excellent time and condition. Louis Reuter was recently an interested visitor at the New York Florists' Club, to meet E. G. Hill and see his new roses. M.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The regular meeting of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held in Pembroke hall, December 14. There was a large attendance; Westbury boys turned out in full force and the meeting was most enthusiastic. George Augier, superintendent for B. Stern, of Roslyn, and Robert Marshall, Jr., were elected members. Three applications for membership were received.

The judges for the evening were Messrs. Bertanzel, Johnston and McKenzie, and their decision was as follows: Society's prizes—Best 100 violets, S. J. Trepess; twenty-five sweet peas, Paul Reuil, who also received honorable mention for a vase of same; three cut poinsettias, James McDonald.

The Hitchings silver cup, a beautiful piece of art, was presented to A. McKenzie, another proof of his being past master in the art of growing chrysanthemums. The Lord & Burnham gold medal was presented to Robert Marshall, for skill in growing roses. Both these prizes were won at our fall show.

A few sprays of stevia, an improvement over the old forms, were shown by Charles Lenker. It has many good points in its favor and will probably be heard from at future exhibitions.

The nomination and election of officers for the coming year took place, and the following gentlemen were elected: President, S. J. Trepess, Glen Cove; vice-president, Joseph Robinson; treasurer, E. Brown, Glen Cove; secretary, John T. Ingram, Oyster Bay; corresponding secretary, Oscar E. Addor, Roslyn; executive committee, Mr. Barton, James Halloway, Geo. Ashworth, H. Gaut, E. Westlake, J. McDonald and J. McQuinn; trustee, J. Everett.

A hearty vote of thanks was awarded to the officers for last year's work. Progress has been the watchword all through the year, with the result that the society may well look forward to an even more prosperous year.

Rockville, Conn.—Theo. Staudt was compelled to defer building his new house, 30 x 125, until the weather is more favorable. His new store, as decorated for the holiday trade, is unusually attractive.

Double Your Carnation Money With "Dorothy Gordon," the Most Profitable Commercial Variety on the Market Today

YES, you can do it, with your present equipment and without an extra penny of expense; just plant "Dorothy Gordon" this year and take the same care of them that you do of the carnations you're growing now.

Here are two ways: First, you can get one-third more commercial flowers; in other words, when a given number of ordinary plants bear 100 flowers, the same number of plants of "Dorothy Gordon" will yield 133.

Second, you can get 50% more money for "Dorothy Gordon." We used to grow Enchantress, and we sold the flowers at $6.00 per 100; at the same time we sold "Dorothy Gordon" at $9.00. More than that, the extra amount of flowers that "Dorothy Gordon" always produces brings the total up to $12.00—just double what an equal number of Enchantress will yield.

50,000 Rooted Cuttings Already Sold This Fall Without Advertising

This magnificent flower has a lot of other splendid features—size, fragrance, substance, etc.; but the thing we want to "hammer home" to you right now is the fact that "Dorothy Gordon" is a real money-maker. We quote strong rooted cuttings at the reduced price of $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

NEW BEDFORD.

The Market.

Trade last week was good. Flowers remain scarce as yet. Carnations are none too plentiful; they retail at 60 cents and 75 cents per dozen. Roses of good quality retail at $1.50 and $2 per dozen; these are daily becoming scarcer as the holidays approach. Paper White narcissi retail at 50 cents per dozen, but will bring higher prices for the Christmas trade. Violets sell quite well at $1.50 per hundred blooms, but they will probably be $2.50 per hundred for Christmas. Snapdragons bring 75 cents per dozen.

Funeral work has been good of late and this calls for large quantities of flowers. Stevia and candytuft also help out. All the uptown stores are well stocked with fine flowering plants, and by the time this is read they will have disposed of most of them.

There is a good demand reported for Christmas wreaths of princess pine, laurel, hemlock and other evergreens. Christmas trees are selling fairly well. This year, on account of the deep snows in the woods, it has been difficult to obtain the evergreens; princess and ground pine are all covered up and have become exceedingly scarce.

Various Notes.

S. S. Peckham has some fine cyclamens and primroses for the holidays.

Peter Murray has a fine lot of plants for Christmas.

R. H. Woodhouse has some elegant cyclamens and begonias in the ruby and pink sorts. He will have a few mums for the holidays.

Wm. P. Peirce's place is well stocked with flowering plants. Some nice Firefly azaleas were seen there.

Rooted Carnation Cuttings

WHITE WONDER (Dorner). A white carnation for all growers; leads any white; a greatly improved White Perfection; makes twice the size plant, thereby increasing its productiveness one-third. $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

GLORIOSA (Dorner). A magnificent shade of light pink, somewhat darker than Pink Delight. A great improvement over Pink Delight, early and free and easy to root. $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

BRIGHT SPOT (Zweifel). A grand new deep pink carnation. One that is sure to fill the want in the dark shade of pink that we all want. Won high honors wherever shown. Easy to root and handle in every way. $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

LAST SEASON'S VARIETIES

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY. The very best pure yellow. $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

DOROTHY GORDON. One of the grandest carnations ever sent out. $5.00 per 100, $40.00 per 1000.

CANARY BIRD. A large yellow with a slight pink marking. Extra fine. $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

SANGAMO. Brighter than Winona. Very free. One that pays well to grow. $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

SHASTA. The freest white ever sent out, fine form, filling a long felt want. $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

CONQUEST. The best variety of the Prosperity type; free as Lawson, good stem and easy to grow. $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

ADMIRATION. A grand variety, much deeper than Enchantress. Free and a good keeper and shipper. One of the very best of last season's varieties. $5.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

SCARLET GLOW. An exceptionally bright scarlet; very free and good grower. Bound to find a place with the standard reds. $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

Carnation Mrs. C. W. Ward

The most prolific and profitable variety in the market, producing more flowers and bringing a higher price than any other Carnation. The Commercial Value of this variety has been further demonstrated by the highly satisfactory results obtained by last year's purchasers.

MRS. C. W. WARD is a free and perfectly healthy grower, producing perfect flowers on long stems as early as September 1st.
The color is the clear, deep pink so much in demand.

ROSE STOCK FOR 1911

It is an undisputed fact that the quality of the plants which are sent out by us is above question. We grow what we sell, and sell only what we grow. We are planning for 1,250,000 Rose plants for the spring trade and expect to be able to fill all orders, whether large or small. This is all stock for forcing, and not nursery stock. We want your patronage and can give you in return the best plants that can be produced. Our leaders will be

Dark Pink Killarney Double Pink Killarney Prince de Bulgarie
Radiance Mrs. Aaron Ward

The best of the Standard Varieties:

Killarney White Killarney Richmond

DETROIT.

The Market.

The usual calm before the storm has been prevailing all of the last week. Outside of considerable funeral work, business has been quiet. Stock is none too plentiful. Shipments are not as large as a few weeks ago, but when these notes are in print, let us hope there will be enough good, fresh stock to go around at prices not too stiff. Indications are that roses will be of good quality and equal to the demand. So far, sweet peas have been scarce, but will be in fairly good supply for Christmas. Carnations are decidedly off crop in this vicinity and will not be in for Christmas.

Decorative material has been selling well. The extreme scarcity of ground pine has caused a big sale of laurel festooning. Little really good holly has been available, while dogwood berries have been a failure. Boxwood is good and selling in large quantities.

Various Notes.

Among the most effective Christmas windows are those of E. C. Fetters.

Breitmeyer and Schroeter are fortunate in having autos of their own to help in the Christmas deliveries. Many taxicabs are engaged by the florists, and this costs money. H. S.

FINE FERNS

Ready For Immediate Retail Sale

We have an exceptionally fine and large stock of Ferns in the following varieties—first-class plants of exceedingly good value—plants that will please the most critical buyers, both in regard to quality and value.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima (improved). The finest of this type—never showing a Boston frond; has not reverted in the last four years. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.; 8-in., $12.00 per doz.; large specimens in 12-in. pans, $3.00 to $5.00 each.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima Compacta. This bears the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii does to Bostoniensis. It is a dwarf, compact plant, especially fine in the small sizes. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scholzeli. Fine plants, 3½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in. pans, $6.00 per doz.; 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis. Extra strong plants, 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scottii. 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Small Ferns for Fern Pans. Best and hardiest varieties, assorted: Pteris Mayii, Wimsetti, Adiantoides, Aspidium Tsussimense, Crytomium Falcatum, etc. Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, $3.50 per 100.

CROTONS. Nice assortment, well colored, 5-in., $9.00 per dozen.

INSECTICIDE REGULATIONS.

ated or misbranded within the meaning of the Insecticide Act of 1910." This places the responsibility upon the guarantor. The wholesaler or manufacturer may file with the Secretary of Agriculture a general guaranty covering every package of a particular kind of article. The guaranty will receive a serial number; this number is to appear on every package of goods sold under that guaranty, together with the words, "Guaranteed by (name of guarantor) under the Insecticide Act of 1910." If a general guaranty is not filed, an individual guaranty may be attached to each bill of lading.

The law and the regulations apply also to imported goods, imported lead arsenate or Paris green being treated as being intended for use as an insecticide unless the contrary is shown. The Treasury Department and the Department of Agriculture will coöperate in taking samples of imported goods. If upon examination and after a hearing it appears that a consignment may not lawfully be imported, the Secretary of Agriculture will report the findings to the Secretary of the Treasury, and the goods will be refused admission.

Regulation 12 provides that "all matter required by the act to be stated on the label of an article must be plainly and correctly stated on the face of the principal label in type sufficiently clear and in position sufficiently prominent to attract the immediate attention of the purchaser."

PELARGONIUMS.

PANSY GERANIUM, MRS. LAYAL.
This beautiful pelargonium is of the easiest growth, dwarf in habit, and literally covered with flowers all the time; and as it requires little or no attention, it is invaluable as a window plant. The coloring and marking of the flowers are most extraordinary, light pink, white, dark purple, black, etc., almost rivaling the pansy in uniqueness of flower. It is this combination of coloring which obtained for it the popular name of pansy geranium. Strong plants, $5.00 per 100.
J. W. Davis, 225 W. 16th St., Davenport, Iowa.

Greenhouse Heating.

If the winter keeps on as it has begun a large part of the profits will go up the greenhouse chimney. Coal consumption has been exceptionally heavy. It pays to spend money to get a heating system that is economical of fuel.

SIZE OF MAIN FLOW.

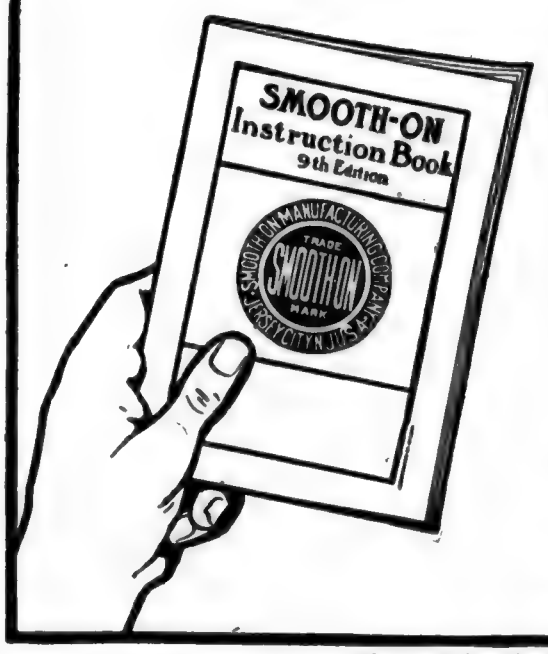
How large a main flow will be required to furnish steam to 100,000 square feet of glass, the steam to be carried 300 feet from the boilers, with a pressure of twenty-five pounds?

H. O.

If the pipe is well insulated it need not be larger than 5-inch, although better results can be secured if a pressure of at least forty pounds is carried in the main flow pipe. F. R.

GENERAL PURPOSE HOUSE.

We have a house we wish to pipe for hot water. It is 16x90 feet, four feet high at the sides and nine feet high at the ridge, with no glass in sides or ends. The flow pipe will have to run uphill from the boiler to the farther end. Where shall we connect the expansion pipe? The boiler pit is eight and one-half feet below the floor of the house. We want to use 2-inch flows and 1¼-inch returns, as we have a lot of those sizes of pipe on hand. How much piping and what size of boiler will be needed? The temperature is seldom below 15 degrees below zero. We want a house for a general line of plants for spring sales. C. L.



For a house of this length it is always best to use 2-inch pipe for the returns and 2½-inch for the flows, but with the deep boiler pit fairly good results should be secured with 1¼-inch pipe in the returns. It will require about 650 square feet of radiation to furnish a temperature of 60 degrees, and for this it will be advisable to use a boiler with a radiation rating of 800 to 900 square feet. For the radiating surface use four 2-inch flows and twelve 1¼-inch returns. Instead of this, three 2½-inch flows and eight 2-inch returns could be used with better results. Connect the expansion tank with the main return near the boiler.

F. R.

FUMES FROM HEATING PIPES.

In The Review of December 8, page 17, I note that C. D. H. has trouble with his pipes because of painting them with chrysolite. This preparation will act just like gas. C. D. H., or others who use it, will note that as soon as he began firing heavily his plants failed, and he will not be able to make any headway until the preparation is removed from the pipes. There is only one way to do this. Some twenty-seven years ago I was engaged as a private gardener at Glen Island. I started there March 13 and just as soon as I put my head inside the greenhouses I noticed a peculiar odor. On inquiry I found the pipes had been painted with a preparation containing this ingredient, so I went to the boss and told him it was no use trying to grow anything in those houses. He begged me to stay with him, so I finished out the year. As soon as the weather got a little warmer the plant stalks showed signs of life, so rather than fire I left them to take their chance, and they quickly recovered. The following fall, just as soon as we began to fire, it was the same thing again. The houses were each eighty-one feet long, with eight lines of pipe, so I decided to cut them all off. We had plenty of men. We took the boilers down and cut all the pipes next to the boiler. Then we strung the pipes along on bricks, taking care that they could not warp. Then we covered them with wood and built a fire, and you should have smelt the fumes just as they got good and hot! After that we put them back, and that ended all our trouble. C. D. H. will have to do this before his trouble ends. We cut out the pipes early in the morning, and as they were only cut off at each end it left only sixteen joints to make, and got them back readily before night. With a force of eight men we finished one house a day.

The Market.

Home-grown roses are not plentiful and the demand is greater than the supply. Killarney and White Killarney are the leaders and bring better prices than other varieties. There is quite a shortage in American Beauties and most of the stores are supplied from Chicago.

Carnations are scarce and the demand is heavy, with wholesale prices up to 5 cents December 15, and none of the local growers can promise any great quantity for Christmas. Violets is a big improvement over all other existing thermostats—

Because—Its sensitiveness and accuracy is produced by our specially constructed Thermo Spring.

Because—This Thermo Spring is not made of steel and brass, which combination produces unsatisfactory results after short usage and becomes more unreliable continually.

Because—This spring is made of the best clock spring steel, combined with an alloy of our own discovery, the sensitiveness of which is not surpassed by hard platinum.

Because—This instrument can be regulated to allow a difference of only two degrees in temperature.

Because—It is not affected by dampness and can be placed anywhere without destroying its accuracy.

Because—Well, we could keep giving its superior points for pages and not run out, but last but not least are not plentiful, but are good and meet with brisk demand. Sweet peas are scarce as yet, but the quality is good. They sell for 75 cents and $1 per hundred. The three largest growers here cannot supply the demand for the holidays. A few white mums are to be seen in some of the stores, but they are shipped in. Home-grown mums are all gone. Azaleas are plentiful, as most of the growers are in time with them this year. Simon Mardner takes the lead in pink. Some handsome Lorraines are to be seen in the windows. Poinsettias are fine this year and it looks as if there will be enough to go around.

Because—It costs only $6.00 f. o. b. St. Louis and it may save you hundreds of dollars' damage from cold or excessive heat, fire, etc.

Green and holly are plentiful and there are enough Christmas trees for everybody.

Various Notes.

J. Austin says he has the finest cyclamens he ever grew and has wholesaled some at $12 to $14 per dozen. He also has a fine stock of Chinese primroses. Business with him is splendid and he looks for a fine Christmas.

W. L. Pattison, located in Merriam, Kan., has seven acres of fertile soil and one greenhouse in lettuce, one in cucumbers, and one house, 50x200, just being completed. He expects to plant the latter to lettuce, all in low benches with cement sides. Two-inch tile will be six inches under the soil, and subwatering is provided in all the houses. He asserts this way of watering is the best for lettuce, but not for cucumbers. He uses natural gas for fuel and lights his lettuce house with gas lamps all night. Merriam is ten miles southwest of this city.

THE DRAPER MFG. CO.
152 Front St., New York

S. B. Ayers' greenhouses in Independence, Mo., which were erected last summer, are now planted mostly in sweet peas. They are looking fine. His soil is black and rich. He plants two rows and runs them up on a network of twine. The plants stand thick and the rows are close and run east and west. His success is immense; in fact, he is one of the best growers of sweet peas around this city. He also grows a great many narcissi. His houses are heated by hot water.

R. S. Brown & Son are cutting a fine batch of poinsettias. Their carnations are in excellent condition but the cut for Christmas will not be heavy. They are now busy dividing their cannas and preparing to start them for spring trade. Nathan Brown is now busy in his city office with their wholesale catalogue, as the southern trade starts soon. Their Texas business is quite large.

D. Freudenthal is doing a fine business. He has contracted for the entire crop of one of the best violet growers in Kansas City. These violets are fine, sweet and large.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. had a pretty window last week, with pink begonias. They are the best this firm ever has grown and I believe if they were put on exhibition at some flower show they surely would take the blue ribbon. They are cutting the best of roses, and lots of them—such as never before have been seen at their greenhouses. Their entire place is now in apple-pie order.

Samuel Murray again comes to the front with his fine display of begonias. He always tries to outdo everybody in growing this plant and his new place is a credit to the city.

Samuel Jones is now harvesting his first lettuce. He takes thirty-five bushels to the city every load. His six houses in tomatoes are looking fine. The plants are from three to four feet tall, full of blooms and fruit. He burns about one carload of coal every week. He also has one house in sweet peas which are now beginning to bloom in fine shape, with excellent stems. The lettuce is planted between the rows. The benches are five feet wide and 144 feet long. With the peas trained on a network of twine, this house is a pretty sight. W. H. H.

LEWISTON, ME.

Ernest Saunders says his delivery auto does the work of three horses. It is especially useful since the acquisition of the new store purchased in the center of the town. This fine building is the latest addition to the establishment and pays right along. Mr. Saunders considers Pink Delight a better keeper than Enchantress, with a wiry stem, though not so free a bloomer. Harlowarden is his favorite crimson, White Enchantress and White Perfection the most profitable in white carnations. Bride and Maid are still popular roses here, and Killarney and Richmond are excellent sellers. A bed of Asparagus plumosus, extra heavy stock, and a table of Whitmani, look good. All stock is grown on solid, shallow beds, with concrete edges. M.

YONKERS, N. Y.

The Yonkers Horticultural Society met December 16, the principal business transacted being the election of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows: President, Lee Whitman; vice-president, T. Mahoney; secretary, H. Nichols; corresponding secretary, H. M. Blanche; treasurer, P. Macdonald; executive committee, J. Houghton, F. Dresler, H. Wells, J. Monney, E. Bunn and E. Bennett.

Considerable responsibility devolves on the dinner committee appointed, as upon their efforts depends the repetition of last year's successful banquet.

Mr. Canning, superintendent for A. Lewisohn, exhibited some fine poinsettias, winning a prize offered by Mrs. Milliot.

A PERFECT GREENHOUSE HOSE

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The Market.

Holiday time is here again in all its red and green and all the stores are decorated with festooning, holly, red immortelles, etc. Trade has been heavy for the last two weeks and indications are fine for heavy business in cut stock and plants for Christmas. There are some fine azaleas, begonias, poinsettias and cyclamen, and along with the palms and ferns they will make a good showing. Greens have been scarce, especially festooning, which was all worked off early in the week.

Roses are coming in good quality, but the cloudy weather has curtailed the cuts considerably. However, with fair weather we will have a good supply for Christmas. Carnations will be scarce with some growers, while others report heavy cuts for this week and they will undoubtedly find a ready sale, as usual. Violets have been scarce here in singles, as they are not blooming heavily so far and stems are rather short, but there have been plenty of doubles, which have been selling well. There will be a good supply of cut poinsettias, Paper Whites, Romans and stevia.

Various Notes.

Gus Ackerman reports a busy time with holly wreaths, etc.

The Fifth Avenue Floral Co. will have a heavy cut of carnations and an extra fine lot of Lorraine begonias and poinsettias.

The Livingston Seed Co. reports heavy business on greens and holiday goods.

E. Metzmaier is keeping a good force busy on Christmas greens, etc.

The Franklin Park Floral Co. reports heavy business in Christmas greens.

J. M.

BUFFALO.

A decided thaw began this week and the weather man gives hope that it will last till Christmas. This will be a blessing to everybody in every way. The sun made a little more of an appearance last week, but not enough to be noticeable on stock. Carnations remain scarce and on some occasions it is impossible to get them on short notice. Roses are more plentiful and the quality is good. It is almost too early (December 19) to predict the holiday business, but, from the way stock is being bought up, business promises to be extremely good. Azaleas are scarce this year and will perhaps be a little higher in price. Poinsettias will be the most in demand, with begonias next.

ROCHESTER.

The Market.

Christmas trade is unusually good this season. Every dealer in cut flowers, plants, holly and mistletoe has been rushed "almost to death" with the business that has come during the last few days. Supplies, as a rule, are about equal to the demand, the greatest shortage being in carnations. These are extremely scarce, and the prices are correspondingly high. Enchantress is quoted at $5 for ordinary and $6 to $7 for No. 1. White and colored flowers are bringing the same prices, while Beacon is quoted at $10, and is scarce at that.

Roses are not especially plentiful, but the supply about equals the demand. Killarney, White Killarney and Maryland range from $8 to $20, while Richmond is bringing $10 to $25. Extra special valley finds ready market at $5. Harrisii lilies are listed at $1.50 per dozen.

Greens are plentiful and prices are about as usual. Asparagus Sprengeri and plumosus in bunches bring from 25 cents to 50 cents. Wild smilax can be had at $3.50 a case.

Club Affairs.

The December meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held December 12. The most important item of business was the nomination of officers for the coming year. Two tickets were presented by the nominating committee, as follows: For president, E. P. Wilson; vice-president, E. R. Fry; secretary, H. B. Stringer; treasurer, W. L. Keller; trustees, F. Schlegel, Charles Suhr, J. O. Pridmore. The second ticket reads: For president, Geo. B. Hart; vice-president, George Keller; secretary, H. B. Stringer; treasurer, R. G. Salter; trustees, John Perie, G. T. Boucher, Etienne Berry.

The annual election will be held January 9, 1911, at the Association rooms, 414 Cutler building.

The wives of the members of the local association are planning to organize an auxiliary society, and the first meeting was held in the Association rooms December 15. It was decided to perfect an organization at once, and, if possible, to meet on the second Wednesday afternoon of each month. Only nominal dues are to be required of the members. The meetings of the club will be purely social in character and there should be a large membership. E. F. R.

Moundsville, W. Va.—H. Broemsen & Son have gone out of the florists' business.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

RETAILERS' CARDS.

The directory of retail florists which has for years been a feature of each issue of The Review has grown to occupy six pages. The exchange of orders between retailers in widely separated cities has grown to be an important part of the business. It largely has been made possible by the department in The Review, for the cards of Leading Retail Florists, and it is a branch of the business that is so easily handled and so great a convenience to the public, that it will keep on growing faster and faster as more and more flower buyers find out how speedily and satisfactorily orders for distant delivery can be handled by the retail florists. Those who are not taking advantage of this department of The Review, either as a means of securing or filling orders, are missing something. See pages 34 to 39.

SOCIETY EMBLEMS IN FLOWERS.

The Unfailing Demand for Them.

Almost every society—perhaps it is safe to say every society or organization, whether of a social, fraternal or business character—shows its sorrow at the death of a member by sending a floral token to the home of the deceased. It is the best way in which the society, as a whole, can convey its sympathy.

Just think what this means. Not every man belongs to a society or club, but nine out of every ten do, and some men belong to half a dozen. Women also have their clubs and societies. Accordingly, nearly every time a man dies, some florist receives an order for a funeral piece, to be presented by the departed one's fellow club members. The average sum allotted is $5, but often $10 or more is spent. Some societies have adopted a certain style of spray, wreath or set piece for such occasions, arrangements not in any way associated with the organization, but more of them send always a reproduction of the society emblem in flowers.

Who Gets the Orders?

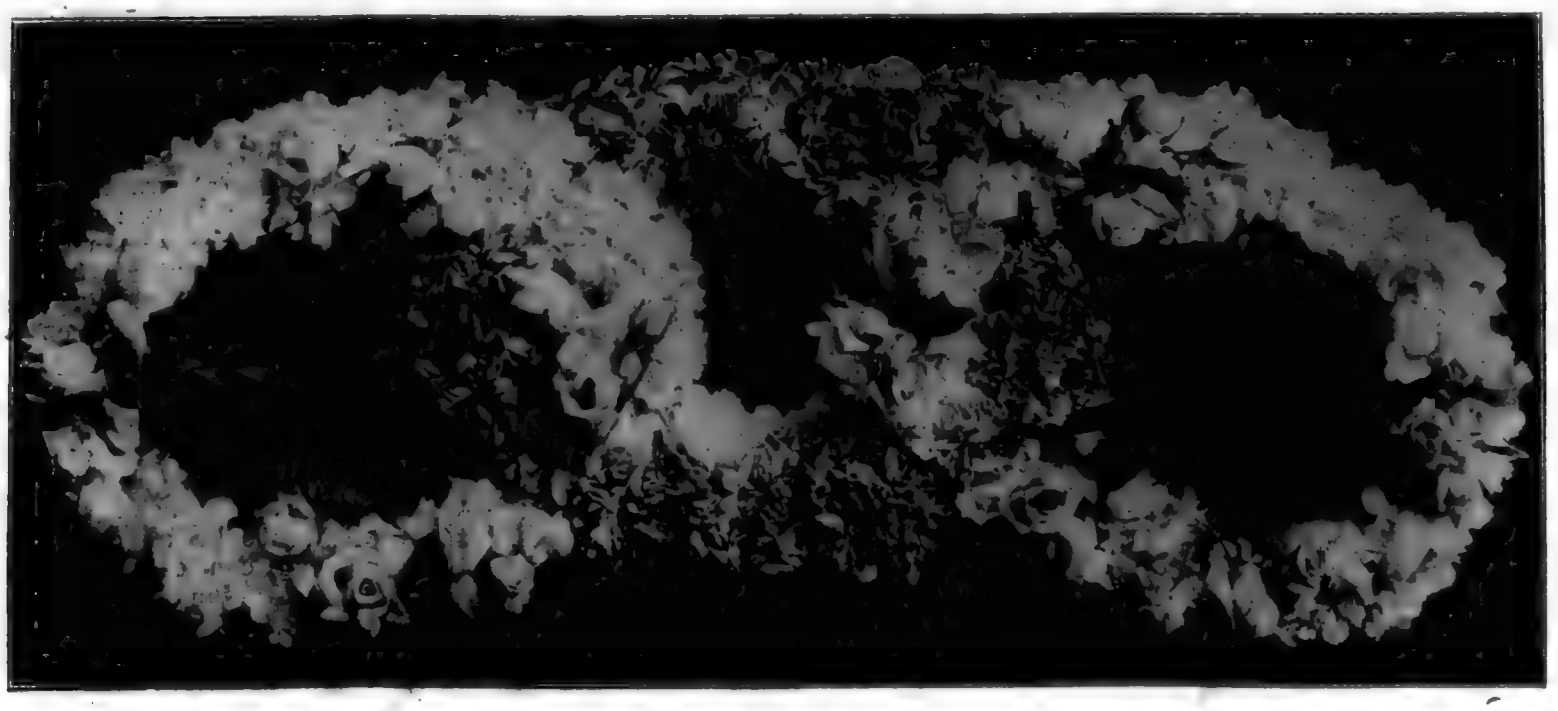
It would not be right to say that the orders for these pieces are invariably given to the florist who does the best work, for this is not always the case. The ordering of funeral flowers is usually left to some committee, or in many cases one individual is asked to order the floral token. If the society be one having a florist on its membership list, the chances are that he will receive the order, but if, for instance, a member of the Machinists' Union dies, most likely the order for flowers will be given to some florist having friends on the flower committee.

Nevertheless, even though the merits of your work will not always get the orders, it is exceedingly poor policy to turn out careless work and depend on the influence of your friends for patronage. Remember that the pieces you turn out are seen by many besides those from whom the order was received. An attractive, well made piece will result in new business, while poor, carelessly made articles will eventually ruin a business. Many florists place too much reliance on their good location and their influential friends, and as a consequence they find their business diminishing, while expenses are going on just the same.

What Constitutes Good Work?

Here the question naturally arises: What constitutes good work? Speaking from an artistic point of view, many would say that society emblems, labor union buttons, etc., when executed in flowers, are not and never can be artistic. To me, personally, this view seems entirely wrong. Have not many of our society emblems been originally designed by some of the country's best jewelers? Why, then, are they not artistic when correctly reproduced in flowers? Ah! There is the point! "Correctly reproduced." There are, of course, many minute details in some emblems which cannot be carried out in a floral design; still, by adhering as closely as possible to the shape, color and style of lettering, some excellent results may be obtained.

The Square and Compass.



Take, for example, the Masonic square and compass. It would be impracticable, if not impossible, to mark off the inches on the square, but why not run the points of the compass to a sharp point and use different colors for the background, so that there will be some distinction between the square and the compass? Why not also show both points of the compass above the square, as in the real emblem? In the ordinary $5 design it would be better to have the wire man make the letter G from a singe piece of wire and then wind it with chenille.

Many florists discourage the making of society emblems. Perhaps they do so because the profits on a $5 galax wreath are (sometimes) larger, or because the wreaths or sprays are more easily and quickly made. Whatever the reason, those florists are injuring their own business.

Desirability of Such Work.

If among a number of sprays, wreaths and various other designs placed about a bier you see three links worked out in flowers, does it not immediately flash through your mind that the departed belonged to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows? When a friend of yours passes away, you send some flowers with your card attached. The emblem of a society, club or other organization is its card, and when in the form of a floral design, placed on a grave, it speaks for itself. So do not discourage these designs. They appeal to the people, are perfectly proper and will always be used, and if one florist turns such work away some competitor will receive the order.

There is also another viewpoint. Many times, when you have on hand a lot of short stemmed stock, an order for a set piece is quite welcome and the profit on it is large when you consider that otherwise the flowers might have gone to waste.

Some Necessary Materials.

Unles you are located in or near a city where there is a firm that handles florists' supplies, it would be well to carry in stock a small quantity of chenille in different colors—red, yellow, blue, lavender, etc. This you will find quite handy, not only for lettering, but in carrying out little details in emblems. A stock of immortelles in various colors will also be found most useful.

With the foregoing hints in mind, suppose we now get down to business.

Designs such as I will endeavor to describe may be divided into three kinds. First come society emblems; then there are the fixed designs which have been adopted by many labor organizations, and, lastly, many firms or minor clubs decide upon some style of design and use it on each occasion. In the latter a florist can often suggest some changes which will do away with tedious work.

The square and compass is, no doubt, oftener called for than any other. This has already been described.

The Keystone.

Outside of the lettering, there is nothing elaborate about the keystone. The frame should be filled perfectly flat. Make a solid background, preferably white, and fasten to it the lettering. If some No. 10 or No. 12 wire is bent around a flower pot and fastened together to form the rings containing the lettering, and then wound with chenille, it will make a better looking job than just a ring of chenille. A few roses or valley in a corner will finish the piece.

The keystone shown in the illustration is excellently made. In the picture of the cross and crown, however, the cross appears to be disproportionately heavy—a fault which should be carefully avoided. In a $5 design the crown can be made of chenille, wrapped over a single wire frame.

The Eastern Star.

Five colors are necessary in making the eastern star; namely, red, blue, yellow, white and green. These colors are used in the order given on a 5-pointed star. When mounting the star, the white point should point down; this will place the red and blue points at the top. Run each color to a point in the center.

The Three Links.

The three links of the Odd Fellows may be made in two ways, either entirely of flowers, as in the illustration, or by making the three links of chenille and using a pillow or panel as a background. In order to correctly portray the three links in flowers, each link must be at least ten inches long. The center link should be made in a different color, to show the interlacing of the links.

The Shriners' Design.

The saber, crescent and star of the Shriners makes a fine design, but it can not well be made of all flowers for $5; $8 to $10 would be better. The saber may be made up in yellow, to take the place of gold. Hanging from the sword are the crescent and star. The crescent should be white with the exception of the tips, which should also be made in yellow. The star should be red. The design will show up best if mounted on an easel. No lettering is called for on this design.

K. O. T. M.

The K. O. T. M. design is a tent. Make a panel of galax leaves, about 20x30 inches. In the center work out a tent in white flowers. Instead of coming to a point at the top, the tent should have a round, overhanging top. The entrance should be open, with the canvas thrown to each side. By using, for instance, pink carnations to represent the canvas flaps, you will be better able to portray the under side of the canvas. Under the tent lay out a strip in white, on which to place the letters K. O. T. M. To finish the piece, trim the panel with a few roses, etc. The number or name of the tent may be placed overhead.

The Christian Endeavor design is quite simple, being merely a letter, C, with the letter E inside. White would be the best color in which to make up this piece. The center bar in the E should extend back to the C.

Knights of Pythias.

The design for the Knights of Pythias is in the form of a shield, divided into three parts. It is divided by a single line halfway down the center, and from this point it is divided by two diverging lines, forming an inverted V. The upper field on the left is in blue, the upper right in yellow and the lower one in red. The letters F. C. B. should be placed in the fields of the shield in the order given. These letters, if made up in white chenille, will show to good advantage.

Knights of Columbus.

The design for the Knights of Columbus can be made particularly well in flowers. The principal part of the piece consists of a Maltese cross, the upper and lower portions of which should be white, and the sides red. A sort of shield-shaped design is placed upon the cross. The main part of this shield is in blue. While the design is really quite simple, it is not easily described.

Modern Woodmen.

The design for the Modern Woodmen consists of a tree stump, ax, sledge hammer and wedge. The stump is hard to portray, except, perhaps, when placed flat against a panel, and even then it might be doubtful whether outsiders would know what it was meant to represent, unless made with unusual care. To my way of thinking, the best way to make the design is by placing a small sized woodmen's ax on a panel nicely trimmed with flowers, and the wording, "Modern Woodmen," on a background of white flowers.

I shall not attempt to describe any more designs. There are so many of them that even a brief reference to them all would be almost an endless task. If you can obtain a catalogue from a jeweler you will find exact reproductions of society emblems, which will be a great help. Many of these designs can scarcely be described, but a picture will explain itself at once.

much into details; still I am aware that most societies will not pay more.

Many times we are called upon to make a design in flowers, which, while not impossible, is not at all practical. This is frequently the case with those designs that are so commonly called for, representing the vocation of either the deceased or those who send the design. A pretty basket or panel, with a real slipper among flowers, is far more significant than a poorly made slipper of flowers. So, also, in the accompanying illustration of the Elks' design, the artist showed his skill even more by using the small elk and the antlers to such good advantage with flowers, than if he had attempted to make the whole piece of flowers.

GIGANTEUM IN A CELLAR.

Please give me a little advice in regard to Lilium giganteum. I have them in 6-inch pots in a dark cellar, with a temperature of 46 degrees. They were planted October 30. How should I water them? I have been giving them water about once a week and have added a little hot water to the cold water, so that it would not be too cold. Have I been doing right in this respect?

F. W. L.

The cellar is a suitable place for the giganteums and the temperature all right. You are, however, giving the plants rather more water than is necessary. Lilies are often spoiled in the early stages of growth by an excess of water. Until the pots are well filled with roots and the tops well above the ground, keep the soil on the dry side. Keeping the pots constantly moist is neither necessary nor desirable. To prove the benefits of keeping the pots drier, try a few each way. Warming the water is not really necessary; in fact, I doubt if there is any benefit from it. It would seem reasonable to suppose that warmed water in cold weather would be an advantage for many plants. Experiments, however, on these lines have not proved that the use of warm water is any advantage.

As soon as the lilies appear above ground, take them at once to the greenhouse and give a night temperature as near 58 to 60 degrees as possible. Easter comes April 16. You want to be able to count the buds on your plants by March 1 and then you are all right.

THE VICTORIA MEDAL.

The president and council of the Royal Horticultural Society of England have decided to confer the Victoria Medal of Honor upon Thomas Coomber, John James Cypher, C. R. Fielder, A. H. Pearson and Henry B. May. Messrs. Cypher, Pearson and May are widely known florists and nurserymen, Messrs. Coomber and Fielder gardeners and writers. The Victoria medal, it will be remembered, was instituted in 1897, on the occasion of Queen Victoria's diamond jubilee, to commemorate that occasion by the award of medals to distinguished horticulturists and others associated with horticulture. The number originally was sixty, but on the death of Queen Victoria the number was increased to sixty-three. The present elections are to fill the places of five Victoria medalists who have passed away during the year 1910.

GREENHOUSE CONSTRUCTION

STYLE OF GREENHOUSE.

A Western Grower's Ideas.

The question of what style house to build, which once was an ever-present theme for discussion, seems to be pretty well settled in the minds of most of the growers. A few years ago we could not pick up a copy of The Review without finding some discussion on the arguments for and against one style or another. Whether the east and west or north and south house was best did not take long to decide, but it took a good many years to argue down the extreme short span to the south or to the north and convince some of the growers that an equal span east and west house, or one with spans nearly the same length, was nearer the right idea. Freak houses are not now common, although some growers still have notions of their own which they choose to put to the actual test.

North and south houses are now popular only with the pot plant growers and a few of the cucumber growers. The advantages claimed for the north and south houses for pot plants are too well known to need much comment now, although these problems are always new to some beginners. A north and south house gives more shade at noon than at any other time, which relief from the midday strong sunlight is welcomed by some plants that can stand full sunlight in earlier and later hours, when the rays are not so burning. Some pot plants, however, like full sunlight in the best part of the day, as well as cut flowers, and do better in the east and west houses.

The vegetable grower's idea of building north and south is particularly for cucumbers, which often are trained parallel to the roofs up to a central point just below the ridge. With houses east and west the vines on the north slope get little or no direct rays of sunshine in the short days of winter, when the sun is low in the south, while north and south houses give direct sun's rays to one side in the forenoon and the other

STYLE OF GREENHOUSE.

A Western Grower's Ideas.

The question of what style house to build, which once was an ever-present theme for discussion, seems to be pretty well settled in the minds of most of the growers. A few years ago we could not pick up a copy of The Review without finding some discussion on the arguments for and against one style or another. Freak houses are not now common, although some growers still have notions of their own which they choose to put to the actual test.

North and south houses are now popular only with the pot plant growers and a few of the cucumber growers. The advantages claimed for the north and south houses for pot plants are too well known to need much comment now, although these problems are always new to some beginners. A north and south house gives more shade at noon than at any other time, which relief from the midday strong sunlight is welcomed by some plants that can stand full sunlight in earlier and later hours, when the rays are not so burning. Some pot plants, however, like full sunlight in the best part of the day, as well as cut flowers, and do better in the east and west houses.

The vegetable grower's idea of building north and south is particularly for cucumbers, which often are trained parallel to the roofs up to a central point just below the ridge. With houses east and west the vines on the north slope get little or no direct rays of sunshine in the short days of winter, when the sun is low in the south, while north and south houses give direct sun's rays to one side in the forenoon and the other in the afternoon. Some of the larger growers now overcome this shade problem by building ranges of connected houses east and west, to permit best light to enter, and then run the beds, aisles and piping in the opposite direction, across all houses, so as to have rows run north and south inside a range of east and west houses. It works quite satisfactorily. Other growers build the east and west houses, but make the trellis or arbors on which the vines are trained at a less steep pitch, so the sun can peep over the ridge and down the north slope of the trellis of vines. This is now the more common method.

The uppermost problem now with large greenhouse owners seems to be how wide to build the houses. In the east the inclination is strongly toward larger houses, both for cut flowers and vegetables. In the west both cut flower and vegetable growers are all pretty well satisfied with what is now called a standard house, this style of connected houses being used almost entirely by three or four of the largest establishments in the world located near Chicago. The fact that these large places use this style of house seems to be sufficient reason for all the smaller ones to follow suit without further discussion.

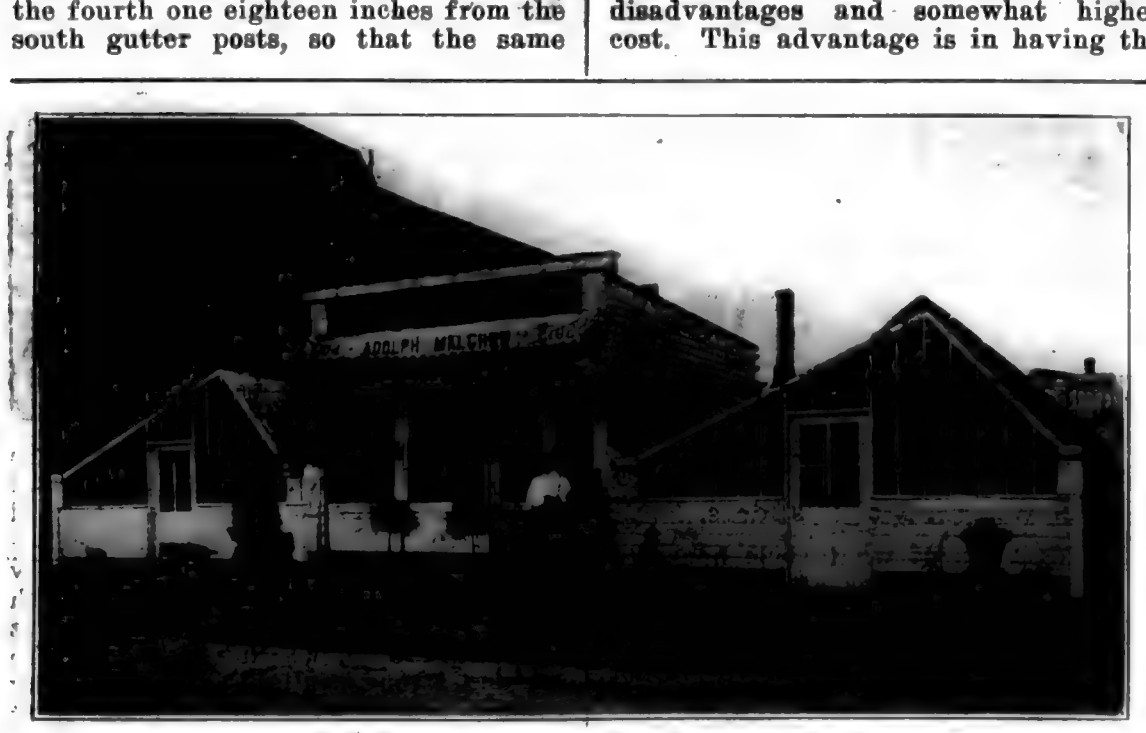
This house, so generally termed the standard western house, is twenty-seven feet wide. The roof is fourteen feet on the south slope and sixteen feet on the north, throwing the ridge a foot south of the center and in line with the gutter, so that the shadow of the ridge falls on the same line as the shadow of the gutter in the shorter days of winter. When the sun is several weeks higher up, the shadow of the gutter falls in the aisle just north of the gutter. There are four 5-foot benches to a house. The first one is against the north wall and the fourth one eighteen inches from the south gutter posts, so that the same aisle answers for the north side of the first bench in the next house.

While I have several of these houses, and like them, and believe that it is always good policy to let well enough alone, still I believe that the style of houses will soon make a change. I do not believe the extremely wide houses will become generally popular, but I do believe that the coming popular style of greenhouse will be a wider one than the standard 27-foot house. Having given this problem years of hard study, I have come to some conclusions that may be of interest to others.

Considering the different styles of east and west house in comparison, it is interesting to note that the easterner feels ahead of the western grower because they build larger houses and more expensive ones, but he is awe-stricken to see and realize the immense areas covered by the western groups of these smaller houses. Then, too, when the easterner meets the westerner at the flower shows, nothing is heard about these larger, finer eastern houses growing better prize winners. Then, to compare profits per equal areas, and this is the most important point of all, the westerners with their 27-foot houses make as good a showing as any growers in the country. Their idea is to cover the largest possible area for the money. As to expense of repair and upkeep, and length of life, of the smaller houses, these 27-foot houses are constructed with iron posts, gutters and purlins, and with purlins supported by trusses on the newer houses, doing away with all purlin posts. It is hard to see how any house could be more lasting or easier to repair or more conveniently planned for benches, etc.

The style of house used so commonly around Boston, being long span to the south and of good width, makes a fine house, but has some faults. They are not expensive houses, only that they must be separated several feet, necessitating waste of land, more expense to heat and for walls, gutters or plates and gutter posts than where connected in one range. The south eave is too low. The ridge, being high and near the north wall, throws much shade north, so that it is necessary to build them separated. They have only one advantage to make up for the several disadvantages and somewhat higher cost. This advantage is in having the sunlight all come in the south slope of the house. Any sunlight that comes through the north slope of a roof over the ridge goes through the glass at such an angle that it loses much of its strength and value.

This same point is the first one of only two that I hold against the standard house. To get that ridge south of the center of the house necessitates the shortest span to the south; hardly noticeable, to be sure, but nevertheless if more of the sunlight could come in at nearer a right angle by coming through the south slope it would be better for the crops. The second point I have against this style of house is that they have only one purlin under each span of roofs. I consider a 16-foot span too long for only one purlin. In protected situations no fault can be found, but where exposed to severe storms the roof waves too much and causes more cracked glass and weakening of houses than would be possible if two purlins were used.



Poehlmann Bros. Co. is now using in its newest houses a truss supporting two purlins to each slope and these, with gable braces and higher gutters, make wonderful houses, but it seems to me the bars are hardly long enough to use two purlins on, for two purlins will hold 18-foot bars as solidly as anyone could desire.

Why not make a house thirty-three and one-half feet wide and have another bench and aisle to each house? Make the roof nineteen or twenty feet slope to the south and sixteen and one-half or seventeen and one-half on the north slope, and a low pitch roof to throw the shadow about as it does in the 27-foot house, but have considerable more sunlight come in through the south slope than through the north, using two purlins to each slope supported by the truss.

The two-purlin truss idea is a good one that has come to stay, but if we make the houses wider to fit two purlins we can get along with four-fifths the number of gutter and gutter post runs, also four-fifths the number of ridges and ventilating machines, etc. For instance, where we have twenty houses now we would have only sixteen, and the same area of glass, but four runs of ridges and gutters less to build and pay for and four double runs of ventilating machinery less. And why not better houses? Would not the opinions of others be interesting on this subject?

W. B. Davis.

The Review will be glad to hear from other growers who have ideas on how the present type of greenhouses can be improved upon.

Establishment of Adolph Malchow, Chicago.

MALCHOW'S PROGRESS.

One of the evidences of the steady expansion of the florists' business is to be found in the progress of Adolph Malchow. His place of business is at 3743 North Clark street, Chicago, so far out that only a few years ago no retail trade could be done there, and the houses were devoted to growing plants sold elsewhere. Mr. Malchow leased the establishment from its owner, P. N. Neglick, in 1906, shortly erected the store building and now does a nice retail trade, for the city has built up all around him and he can sell many times the quantity of stock he can grow in the three houses. In fact, the only cut flowers are a bench of carnations, Enchantress and White Enchantress, the rest of the space being used for pot plants, among which was a nice lot of cyclamens for Christmas. Mr. Malchow has now bought the property, including land and greenhouses. There are three houses, one on each side of the store and one in the rear, with a fourth house built on top of the boiler-shed, which proves a quite handy addition to the facilities.

ENCHANTRESS ON A RAMPAGE.

During the last month many letters have been sent to me about sports from Enchantress or its sports — so many that it seems the variety has gone on a regular rampage, and that ere long it will be difficult to find the true parent variety without some of the variations mixed in.

Some have been offered for registration which are undoubtedly synonymous with disseminated varieties, and for the benefit of those having such sports I want to state that the following sports from Enchantress have been registered and disseminated: White Enchantress, pure white; Helen Gould, flesh-pink, striped and splashed with deeper pink; Mrs. V. T. Omwake, slightly deeper than Enchantress; Washington, deep pink, shade of Mrs. Lawson; Variegated Enchantress, white ground, with rose-pink stripes. This last variety has not been disseminated.

I should also like to caution growers to make certain that theirs are really sports, and not mixtures. A few years ago a prominent grower startled his friends with the report that he had a bright scarlet sport from Enchantress just coming into bloom. Later developments, however, proved it to be another variety, resembling Enchantress somewhat in growth, of which a plant had become mixed with the Enchantress. A few such mistaken sports have been disseminated in the past—luckily, only a few—and it is for this reason that the rule was adopted requiring blooms to be shown at the A. C. S. meeting before registration is made.

CARNATION SHOW IN LONDON.

The annual winter show of the Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society was held in the Royal Horticultural hall, London, December 13. Nurserymen's trade exhibits were not so numerous as on former occasions. On the other hand, there were more entries in the competitive classes and the quality of blooms shown was superior to that of any previous exhibition. This was especially noticeable in the blooms from W. E. Wallace, Eaton Bray, and C. Engelmann, Saffron Walden.

The American challenge cup, for three vases of American novelties, was won by W. E. Wallace, with Dorothy Gordon, May Day and Pink Delight; C. Engelmann, second, with Afterglow, May Day and Pink Delight. For British raised novelties the challenge cup went to C. Engelmann for Carola, Rex and Harlequin; W. H. Lancashire, Guernsey, second, with Carola, Emperor and Rose Dore. The Convent Garden challenge bowl for two vases of blooms and two boxes of the same varieties, packed for market, was won by W. E. Wallace, with grand flowers of Pink Delight and White Perfection; C. Engelmann followed, with Carola and Regina. For vase of a variety not in commerce, H. Burnett was first, with R. F. Felton, and Wells & Co., second, with White House.

The E. G. Hill Co., Richmond Ind., special prize for vase of J. Whitcomb Riley was awarded to W. E. Wallace; G. Lange and C. Engelmann following. The F. Dorner & Sons Co., La Fayette, Ind., special prize for vase of Scarlet Glow was won by W. H. Lancashire; W. E. Wallace and G. Lange second and third.

The leading varieties in the prize list were Enchantress, Pink Delight, Mrs. C. W. Ward, White Perfection, Britannia, Beacon, Carola, Emperor, Harlequin and Rose-pink Enchantress. The best vase in the show was from W. E. Wallace. The decorative classes were nicely filled, and for decorated dinner tables there were six entries.

The floral committee had a busy morning, as the British raised varieties placed before them were numerous. First-class certificates were awarded to Lady Arlington, raised by Stuart Low & Co., Bush Hill Park, and to R. F. Felton, raised by H. Burnett, Guernsey. Awards of merit were granted to Rex, raised by C. Engelmann, and to Mrs. F. M. Crook, raised by Stuart Low & Co. First-class certificates were also awarded to the following American varieties: Mrs. C. W. Ward, Pink Delight, Scarlet Glow, Niagara and White House.

The trade groups were not numerous, but superb. Gold medals were awarded to Stuart Low & Co. for a most artistic setting, in which ferns were nicely blended with the flowers; to C. Engelmann for a great array of vases of fine flowers, many of them varieties of his own raising; to H. Burnett for a group of finely finished blooms, and a silver medal to G. Lange for a smaller but good collection.

The annual dinner and business meeting was held the same evening, J. S. Brunton presiding. The toast of the evening, "The Perpetual Flowering Carnation Society," was proposed by M. Todd, Edinburgh, in a speech full of interest to carnation men. The chairman responded. The annual report showed a membership of 271, an increase of forty during the year, and the balance sheet also showed an increase in funds.

J. S. Brunton was reëlected chairman; S. Mortimer, vice-chairman; L. J. Cook, treasurer; H. Mathias, Lucerne, Stubbington, Hants, and E. F. Hawes, Royal Botanic Gardens, London, joint secretaries; W. H. Page, chairman of floral committee.

were the dates fixed for the 1911 shows. The annual year book of the society, with a record of the year's work and many interesting articles and illustrations, will be published early in the new year. Bee.

SNAILS.

Last summer and autumn I was much troubled with snails. They would not touch Paris green and molasses on cabbage leaves, but fed on asters, dahlias and other fine plants. Can you tell me what to do for them? H. W.

Paris green and other poisons are of no value in fighting snails. Strew slaked lime or black soot about their haunts. The lime will destroy all that it touches. Salt is another excellent remedy. A ring of cork dust or sawdust around each dahlia will act as a sure preventive. Give your land a dusting of lime before planting and a large proportion of the snails will be destroyed. C. W.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lilies.

Easter is now some sixteen weeks away. This seems a long time and the later than usual date is likely to tempt some growers to hold the plants back too long. The standard lily in 1911 will undoubtedly be giganteum. It is naturally a late variety and is always seen at its best on a late Easter. It is a dwarf grower and very floriferous, with a large flower. Harrisii was once supreme, but now there are few so poor as to do it reverence. Disease has frightened many from touching it at all. Formosas are valuable and will bloom over a larger period than any other lily. They are not of one fixed type, but are seedlings comprising a wide range of varieties and differing greatly in their heights. In some ways they are exceptionally satisfactory. As yet they have developed little disease, but, on the other hand, while clean they are often aggravatingly disappointing in producing only one, two or three flowers on many of their stout stems, even when they have grown three to five feet high. They are without doubt, however, an acquisition and will be more grown each year.

Giganteum, apart from multiflorum, which flowers somewhat earlier but hardly makes so fine a flower or so good a plant, should have been potted before now, and if they have made some roots and have the tops peeping, all the better. They will not root and grow so fast as either Formosa or Harrisii and should not be unduly hurried until the pots are full of active roots. Then give them a night temperature of 60 degrees, for this lily enjoys a good heat right along. Be careful in watering until the pots are full of active feeding roots, and remember that you should be able to see all the buds well separated forty days before Easter. The best time to do forcing is after the buds have formed. It is an easy matter to retard them after the flowers start to expand. Do not, however, run the plants cool after housing them, which would probably spoil many of them.

Dutch Bulbs.

To keep up a steady succession of flowers, a number of flats of tulips and narcissi should be brought into heat at least once a week. The tulips for some time will need to be kept dark and warm. The narcissi after the middle of January will not need any drawing up. Trumpet Major is the narcissus of the hour, but Golden Spur is now in heat and will be in flower in a few days. It remains easily the most popular of all single forcing trumpet daffodils.

As the average country retail florist has a call for pans of tulips through the winter, a few each week should be started. Such varieties as Thomas Moore, La Reine, Yellow Prince and Keizerskroon are suitable for early flowering. Keep the doubles until later.

If it is desired to keep tulips and narcissi for Easter, which is quite late next year, they must be kept cold. A cellar or pit as near freezing as possible is what they need. At 45 degrees, or even 40 degrees, they will come in much too early.

THE WEEKLY FLORISTS' REVIEW

As experience is the best teacher, so do we learn fastest by an exchange of experiences. Many valuable points are brought out by discussion.

Good penmanship, spelling and grammar, though desirable, are not necessary. Write as you would talk when doing your best.

Propagation.

Now, while there is a nice, steady warmth in the cutting bench, is a suitable time to root batches of crotons, colored dracænas, dieffenbachias, fittonias and other warm house plants. Give them plenty of water and few will fail to root. It is a good plan to root a quantity of coleus from the old stock plants carried over. Keep these old plants for another batch of cuttings and then throw them away, as they get full of mealy bug. Heliotropes, sweet-scented verbenas, fuchsias, bedding geraniums and alternantheras can also be propagated as cuttings are procurable.

The useful winter blooming Erica melanthera can be rooted in a bench which is used for carnations. Rub off short shoots with a heel for the best results. Few will fail to root. Plant out in summer and they will make nice little plants before fall. Genistas inserted now will make fine 6-inch pots for Easter in 1912.

Do not forget a good batch of marguerites. These carried over summer in pots will make the best possible plants for blooming another winter. If you want a late planting of snapdragons for Memorial day, root the cuttings now. Continue to keep the cutting bench well filled. Apart from carnations, there will be from now on quite a number of cuttings which can be inserted each week.

Keep a diary. This advice may be pooh-poohed by many and classed as needless by others whose memories are of the encyclopedia stamp, but there are many florists who do not now keep one who would find a great benefit from doing so. A short calendar day by day of work performed, such as seed sowing, potting, propagation, time of flowering of various crops, weather conditions and other matters, will prove interesting to look over the following year, and will prove of great practical benefit. The pace in all trades today is such that we leave the things of yesterday behind and forget them, while our hopes and ambitions concern only the things of the morrow. There is so much business to occupy our attention that the plea, "I have no time," may be true. Try, however, to find time to keep a little epitome of floricultural operations. It will not consume much of your time and nothing will repay you better. Among resolutions for the new year about to dawn, resolve to keep a diary.

STARTING CANNAS.

Please advise me when cannas should be placed in the benches to make good plants for bedding. J. W. S.

March is sufficiently early to place cannas in heat in order to get strong plants for bedding in May and June. Watch the cultural columns of The Review for directions from time to time. C. W.

NAME OF PLANT.

We are enclosing a few leaves of a plant and will ask you to kindly give us the name. It grows about eighteen to twenty-four inches high and has a glossy green leaf that is highly aromatic. A. F. C.

This is a species of hedychium, commonly called the cinnamon plant and ginger plant. C.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

While we have passed the shortest days and the duration of daylight will now slowly increase, we have not yet reached that portion of winter which gives the maximum of cold. December has broken all records for continued frigidity, but fortunately snow falls were not heavy and cloudy days were fewer than usual. The pick, therefore, of flowers from the earliest plantings of sweet peas has been fully up to the average. The stems are now improving in length, but not until early spring will they attain that strength which we like to see. Violet flowers in many places have not during the early part of the winter proved so prolific as usual, which has naturally helped the sale of sweet peas, which continue to grow in popularity.

During midwinter feeding must be given with care. The plants are unable to assimilate anything like the same amount of plant food now as two months hence. If the stems show any signs of becoming shorter, a watering of liquid cow or sheep manure once in two weeks will help them. A top-dressing of well decayed cow or pulverized sheep manure is better if lightly forked into the ground before watering. The manurial elements are then more evenly distributed. It is better to avoid all chemicals at this season, for unless applied with great caution, they will do far more harm than good. Tying must be regularly attended to, for once any stems become bent the flowers are unsalable. Remove any sickly plants. A certain number will turn yellow under the most careful culture, more especially where the seedlings have been left too thick. Maintain an average night temperature of 48 to 50 degrees as nearly as possible for plants in flower; cooler they develop too slowly, while warmer they run out more quickly and are more liable to be attacked by red spider. Ventilate carefully, but endeavor to give some air every day. The temperature with sun heat can run up to 65 or 68 degrees, but on cloudy days a maximum of 55 to 58 degrees is sufficient.

With the clearing away of some Christmas crops, it is now possible to give more attention to sowing a good batch of seeds for spring flowering. If you want flowers as soon as possible, it is better to sow Mont Blanc, Earliest of All, Christmas Pink and others of the forcing type, but this is also a suitable time to sow such varieties as Dorothy Eckford, Miss Willmott, Helen Lewis, Helen Pierce, John Ingman, Navy Blue and Countess Spencer. Any of the Spencer type can also now be started. They are a little longer in coming into flower, but sell better than anything else in late spring, when the early varieties are on the wane. A few first-class Spencer sorts to grow are: White Spencer, Mrs. Routzahn Spencer, delicate pink on apricot ground, a charming color; Countess Spencer, the best clear pink, very vigorous; Tennant Spencer, rosy purple; King Edward Spencer, crimson scarlet; Asta Ohn Spencer, a beautiful lavender. Seed can be started in small pots or flats, or sown directly where they are to flower. Flats of sand are as good a method as any, transplanting the seedlings singly into the rows, allowing them six inches apart. Do not leave them closer than this, for you will only crowd them unduly and the result will be weaker haulm and poorer flower stems. The rows for the best results should be five feet apart; six feet is better if space will permit. Three to four feet is too close. Peas want a lot of headroom. The houses should have six to eight feet clear at the sides, for it must be remembered that under favorable conditions and careful culture they will grow ten feet or even more in height. Of course, other plants can be grown between the rows until the peas grow up so as to shade them too much.

The best medium in which to grow peas is loam, liberally enriched with well rotted cow manure, and solid beds are far preferable to raised benches. The largest and most successful specialists grow them directly in the ground.

MILDEW ON SWEET PEAS.

I am troubled with mildew on sweet peas. Can I use one part lime and three parts sulphur, painted on the hot water pipes, without injury to the flowers, as they are in full bloom? If they cannot stand this, will you kindly tell me what to use, as the mildew is just starting? If the lime and sulphur will do, how much of the piping shall I paint in a house 22x75? W. L. B.

With a powder bellows blow some flowers of sulphur over the affected plants. Paint sulphur over the upper part of the flow pipe, which will have the strongest heat. Do not put sulphur on more than one pipe. The fumes from hot water pipes are less pronounced than from steam pipes, and even if you are firing quite heavily, it should be strong enough to bleach out any of the flowers. Ventilate carefully at this season. Mildew invariably comes from cold drafts. Put on a little air at a time and lower gradually. When cloudy spells come, following clear skies, do not allow the temperature to fall unduly before reducing the ventilation.

PERNET-DUCHER'S NEWEST ROSES

Commenting on the season's trials of new roses at the Bagatelle gardens, near Paris, France, the Horticultural Advertiser (English) says:

The finest novelties of an international character were again those shown by the firm, Pernet-Ducher, of Lyons, the most successful rose growers of France, who can point to the magnificent results this firm has obtained, from Mme. Caroline Testout to the Lyon rose. Their Rayon d'Or, a Rosa lutea hybrid, a little wonder in color, was, it is sad to say, not found under trial at Bagatelle, but Beaute de Lyon, likewise a Pernetia hybrid, was in evidence. The salmon-red bud discloses on opening a fiery salmon-pink flower, not very full, certainly, but of great effect. It will prove a fine variety for bedding and pot culture—a rose of the highest class. Souvenir de Gustave Prat, a tea hybrid, is a flower of promise. As if modeled by an artist's hand, stands the slender, canary yellow bud, which, as it ages, becomes creamy yellow, and shows the deeper color of the unexpanded bud in its center.

An aristocrat for cutting purposes, superior to both the above-named varieties, is Lieutenant Chaure, a hybrid tea, which was awarded the second prize. The flower has, if anything, a more exquisite shape than Kaiserin. In blooming, the color takes on a purplish scarlet tone, while the fully open flower is fiery carmine, of good medium size and having a straight stalk, and leaves without a blemish. As a red hybrid tea it is in color and shape a more perfect flower than Richmond and General MacArthur, or indeed any other red rose.

BUDDED HYBRID PERPETUALS.

I transplanted a Paul Neyron rose-bush this fall, as it had not done well in the summer. It was a budded plant, and right around the union there was a swelling as large as my thumb—hard, solid wood. Is that what you call club root? Do you think the swelling or growth is injurious to the blooming of the bush? Is it worth while to keep on growing the bush, or should it be thrown away? R. G.

The swelling referred to is not club root. The latter appears on the roots of plants. Budding causes the swelling you noted and you need not worry about its being injurious to the plants. You will find the same peculiarity on all roses and other plants which have been budded. In planting hardy roses the bud should be covered with soil about three inches. Budded hybrid perpetual roses are hardier, more vigorous and live longer than those on their own roots. C. W.

MRS. E. M. BARTOW.

The success of Mrs. E. M. Bartow, of Chester, Pa., is taken by her friends to prove that the florists' field offers extraordinary opportunities for the energetic and courageous business woman.

Mrs. Bartow began business in 1900. Her first flower shop was a 6-foot alleyway roofed over between two large buildings. In a few months it was apparent that this box would not accommodate the business she could secure.

Mrs. E. M. Bartow.

At that early stage of her business life she lacked the courage and self-confidence which would enable her to sign a long-term lease for an entire store, and, accordingly, she secured a fair sized basement room. She quickly saw that a store below the street level was unsuitable for retail purposes, and necessity thus forced her to take the next upward step in her business career, the renting of an entire store on the main business street.

Business steadily increased as she created a constantly wider demand for the better grade of cut flowers and funeral designs. "When I began business," she says, "I found the people of Chester purchasing an inferior carnation at 25 cents per dozen. Now they will not have a carnation of that grade, but demand a better flower and gladly pay 60 cents to $1 per dozen." Her funeral designs are in demand for a radius of fifteen miles beyond the city limits. She built a small greenhouse in the rear of her store, not for growing purposes, but to carry her stock of plants.

Four years ago the owner of the building she occupied decided to sell. To increase her difficulties, rents along the main street had advanced so rapidly that they threatened to become prohibitive for a small business. Facing these difficulties and encouraged by past success, she did not hesitate to purchase a large building at 317 Market street. Results have proven her good judgment. She has already added several hundred dollars' worth of improvements to her property.

Of course her success has invited competition. "There was a time when I feared competition," she says, "but that is past. My competitors' stores and their advertisements help to create a demand for flowers, and I sell at least part of the flowers." She knows how to keep trade as well as to get it.

A part of her success is due to the fact that she brings a lifelong experience to the business. For three generations members of her family have been the principal flower sellers of Chester. She was also fortunate in having the assistance of her sister, Miss Rebecca J. Edwards, who, until her death last January, had full charge of the selling end of the business. For almost fifty years Miss Edwards had charge of the Chester retail stores conducted by other members of the family, and brought to the business a long experience and a wide acquaintance among the flower buyers of Chester.

Mrs. Bartow has made no attempt to grow her own stock, but depends upon the growers in her vicinity, principally her brother, Wm. L. Edwards, of Norwood, Pa., and the commission men of Philadelphia.

FUNKIAS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

We have received about 3,000 Funkia variegata, with three or more eyes, from Holland. We wish to grow these in pots for Memorial day. How should they be treated? Should the bulbs be divided to one eye each? How soon should they be planted to make satisfactory plants by that time? A. J. B.

It all depends on the size of plants desired. If the funkias are divided to single eyes they will make quite small plants, which will be much less salable than if left as they are. There is no immediate hurry about potting or starting these for Memorial day trade. Store them in a pit or coldframe for the next six weeks. Then pot singly and start in a cool house; 45 degrees at night is ample. A temperature such as you would afford geraniums will insure nice plants by the end of May. If started at an earlier date, you could gradually harden them off and place them in frames at the beginning of May if bench space were wanted for other plants. C. W.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Business remained quiet until December 21, when flowers began to come in more freely and business became more animated. Trade was active December 22 and 23 and opened well December 24. With pleasant weather, such as had ruled most of the month, there would have been a good clean-up and probably the best Christmas on record, but about 8 a. m. the weather, which was warm, 46 degrees in the shade against zero twenty-four hours previous, broke down first in a steady drizzle, which soon turned to a perfect downpour, and the rain, which was welcome to drought-stricken New England, took all the snap out of the flower market. While best quality flowers cleaned up at satisfactory prices, there was a good proportion of second rate and pickled stock, which was either sold cheaply or not at all. Those who held back their flowers until December 24 were the worst hit. This has come to be so common a happening now that the wonder is that so many leave everything to the last day.

The plant trade continues to grow each year. There is not the advance in price in these, as with flowers, and the usual big Christmas jump in flowers has turned hundreds to plant buying. Certainly the sales of these were never equaled in Boston and the plant growers were all well cleaned out of salable stock. Poinsettias, as usual, sold well, dwarf stock in made-up pans going the best. Those grown singly in pots were less in favor, many being cut in order to dispose of them. Azaleas were seen everywhere and had a tremendous sale, Firefly leading. Plants retailing at $4 to $5 were especially popular. Lorraine begonias were never seen in greater abundance nor of finer quality. The bulk sold were at from 50 cents to $5, some large specimens making more. A popular size in 6-inch pots at $3 went remarkably well. There was a scarcity of small pans for low dishes. A great many more in shallow 4-inch or 5-inch pans could have been sold. Cyclamens and primulas each sold in considerable numbers and there were some excellent lilacs. Quite a few Cypripedium insigne were disposed of and a considerable number of Erica melanthera, which was beautifully flowered. Of ardisias there was an insufficient supply. This plant never sold better Among the cheaper berried stock, solanums and Christmas peppers had a good sale. Otaheite oranges sold well. A few bougainvilleas were seen and small quantities of other flowering plants. A lot of small double scarlet geraniums appeared. These were not, however, of specially good quality. Well grown scarlets in 6-inch pots would be welcomed by many retailers. Fern dishes had a good sale, while medium sized palms, nephrolepis, crotons and araucarias were disposed of in fair numbers. Well berried hollies and aucubas had a good sale.

Coming to cut flowers, there was no special advance in roses, which, while firm in price December 22 and 23, softened December 24. The growers sensibly accepted previous prices ruling and in this way sold out quite well. The best Beauties made $12, a few select Richmond $5 and $6, but the bulk of Killarney, Richmond and other varieties went at from $4 to $20 per hundred, only some fancy stock bettering these prices. Richmond was rather scarce and in active demand. The highest price heard of for carnations was $12. The bulk of good flowers made $6 to $10 per hundred, scarlets and crimsons making the highest figure. Pink Delight sold at $8, a few fancies making $10. Whites were the slowest sale, as usual. A good many flowers were moved at $3 to $4 per hundred. Violets sold well, the price being about $1.50 per hundred. Sweet peas sold at 75 cents to $1 per hundred. Valley was abundant, but there was no advance in price. Quite a few chrysanthemums appeared, chiefly Bonnaffon and Nonin. It hardly pays to carry these so long. The public is tired of them. Paper Whites, Roman hyacinths and stevia were overabundant. There were nice lots of white and yellow tulips, yellow daffodils, campernelle jonquils and freesias. Poinsettias made $5 to $6 per dozen for the best bracts, others running down to $1.50. Some good mignonette and antirrhinums were sold. Lilies were in good supply, with little advance in price. Gardenias were not plentiful. Cattleyas were scarce and made quite high prices.

The sale of holly, mistletoe, laurel wreathing and all kinds of greenery was the heaviest Boston has ever known and the wholesalers specializing in these had their resources taxed to the limit.

Since Christmas a quiet market has been the rule, with small arrivals and comparatively light sales. Prices December 27 were holding up well, but would have been better but for the surplus from December 24 consequent on the deluge of rain.

Various Notes.

Mann Bros., of Randolph, had fine batches of tulips, Candidissima, pure white, and Mon Tresor, golden yellow, from French grown bulbs, for Christmas, also plenty of Trumpet narcissi and campernelles. They cut 3,500 lilies. Their berried hollies and aucubas in tubs were the finest seen.

Robert Montgomery, of Natick, had a cut of 8,000 roses for the holidays, including a grand lot of Richmond which made top prices.

A veritable hive of industry was the store of Henry Penn, on Bromfield street. The sale of plants here was tremendous. Small Lorraines and ardisias were sold out clean. Azaleas and violets were in heavy demand. The force worked until 1:30 a. m. two or three nights to keep up with the flood of orders.

The stallholders and salesmen at the Boston Flower Exchange presented George Horner, their popular janitor, with $50 in gold December 24. A. S. Parker, of Stoneham, made the presentation speech in his usual happy style and Mr. Horner expressed his thanks in his own unique way.

F. W. Fletcher, of Auburndale, opened his new salesroom of concrete construction December 15. He reports a first-class Christmas business.

Everett Cummings, the Woburn violet specialist, had one of the largest and finest lots of single violets ever seen here at Christmas. Many stems were twelve to fourteen inches long. One house, 50x225, was a veritable blue mass of flowers before Christmas picking started. Many plants carried twenty flowers each. Mr. Cummings grows 20,000 plants of Princess of Wales.

A. G. Lake, of Wellesley Hills, has an unusually fine lot of Mont Blanc and Christmas Pink sweet peas. He specializes in Whitmani ferns, growing in benches and cutting the fronds, which meet with a ready sale.

The W. W. Edgar Co. had the best Christmas trade in pot plants in its history, disposing of practically every salable plant. Its finely grown Lorraines were sold in short order.

Carl Everburg, of Woburn, had an excellent lot of azaleas for the holidays, and a fine lot of single violets.

The Halifax Gardens Co. was the heaviest shipper of mums for Christmas, Bonnaffon being its specialty; also an immense pick of sweet peas and carnations.

Peter Fisher's new bright cerise carnation, Gorgeous, is already making an enviable name for itself, judging from the numbers of inquiries heard as to when plants of this grand novelty are to be secured.

Streiferd & Son, of Weymouth, had a fine sale on well flowered plants of Cypripedium insigne for Christmas. They are producing Richmond and Killarney roses of fine quality.

Peirce Bros., of Waltham, had a heavy sale on azaleas. Included were many pyramidal plants. They had a tremendous sale on carnations and Asparagus Sprengeri.

Welch Bros. never did so heavy a business in greens as this year. They also disposed of more choice cut flowers than ever before. As usual, their shipping trade was heavy.

J. M. Ward & Co., of Peabody, did a fine Christmas trade in poinsettias, azaleas, araucarias and other plants, in which they specialize.

Extra fine lots of yellow marguerites are coming in from Lewis Smith, of Tewksbury, and D. J. Horrigan, of Foxboro. Mr. Horrigan also has an abundance of calendulas.

John Barr's new variegated seedling carnation sold at $12 per hundred and looks like a winner. Mr. Barr is one of our most progressive growers and is planning to increase his greenhouse area in the near future.

Philip L. Carbone, on Boylston street, had an artistically arranged store for Christmas. His wreaths of spruce, pine cones and Ilex verticillata tied with broad bows of scarlet ribbon were well made and in active demand. Business here was heavy.

H. Hansen, of Malden, had an excellent lot of Firefly azaleas, primulas and other seasonable flowering plants, which found a ready sale.

H. E. Bates, of the King Construction Co., was one of our visitors last week, looking up new building contracts.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, grew many of the superb plants of Erica melanthera seen at the better class stores here.

At the next meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club, January 17, officers will be installed and a pleasing entertainment will be provided for ladies.

J. Newman & Sons, at their Tremont street store, did a heavy Christmas trade, both in plants and cut flowers, last week.

Malcolm Orr, of Saugus, who forsook violets for sweet peas, is having grand success with them. No finer flowers than his were seen in the Christmas market.

William Sim, of Cliftondale, had as usual an immense pick of grand quality Princess of Wales violets from his 100,000 plants. He had also a heavy pick of fine sweet peas.

Inquiry of Henry M. Robinson & Co. elicited the fact that this energetic firm had easily beaten all previous Christmas records, both in greenery and cut flowers. W. N. Craig.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

A little of everything would best explain the weather conditions for Christmas week. The beginning was severely cold and made heavy wrapping necessary. Shipping was difficult and many lots were reported frozen. Along at the end the weather became mild and by Thursday a heavy rain fell, which lasted all day and was a big drawback to business. This was followed by snow and mild temperature, and for Saturday and Sunday the weather was ideal. This condition brought the people out in good fashion and business was excellent. All the stores were cleaned up of all salable stock and from reports the Christmas trade was a record-breaker. Plants were the principal feature and, on account of the scarcity of carnations and low priced cut flowers, they were much in demand. Poinsettias in pans, begonias and baskets all sold readily. Cut stock, especially the carnations, were higher in price than in other years on account of the scarcity. Artificial stock sold this year better than ever and replaced many a flower and plant. Some stores made the window effect of ruscus and other stock not perishable. Baskets of ruscus and box, statice and such things sold well. Violets and valley were most in demand for corsage work and ranged in price the same as in other years. Red bouvardia sold well and was used extensively with Romans.

Various Notes.

After New Year's the bowling club will resume duties at the old stand and we hope to see all the old faces back on the job.

Miss Rebstock was taken sick a few days before the holidays, which was a big handicap, as she is the mainstay of the store. R. A. S.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

It was a retailers' Christmas. For the wholesaler and the grower the prices realized were little above half of those of a year ago. In addition to the advantage of low rates for his stock, the usual retail values of other years prevailed. The public has been educated, through many holiday experiences, to an average of values that now are paid without question. In addition to this encouraging state of affairs, from the retailers' standpoint, never were flowering and foliage plants more abundant or more reasonable in price. Last, but not least, the weather turned warm, deliveries were made safely without any extra care or wrapping, and every retail store on Monday morning looked as if a Kansas cyclone had struck it. The few left-overs in the plant line, if there are any, will all be needed for New Year's gifts, and so the Christmas of 1910, from its retail outlook, will long be pleasantly remembered.

The wholesale distributors of cut flowers found the problem of disposal this year a serious one. The quantity of roses and carnations sent in was enormous. Most of it was of superb quality. There was little pickling and yet it was no easy matter to realize above one-half the prices of a year ago. Friday's all-day rain did not add any to the cheerfulness of the street. The wholesale stores were open all of Saturday night and Sunday. By noon of Christmas day the clean-up had been accomplished. The top price for Beauties was $1, but comparatively few reached this figure; 60 cents to 75 cents was the general average, and many were sold at 50 cents before Sunday night was over. There was a limit to the shipment of Killarney. It dominates values. Every other variety of roses feels this influence. Richmond could not rise above 25 cents. Bride, Maid and Maryland were high at 12 cents. The No. 1 and No. 2 roses were the first to go; much of the long-stemmed stock was left over. The best Beacon and Victory carnations touched 10 cents and the novelties did no better. For Enchantress 8 cents was high mark. Thousands sold as low as 6 cents before Monday. There was great abundance of all varieties, and no finer quality was ever seen at this season. The supply of orchids proved ample for the demand, but gardenias sold at $6 a dozen, and there were not enough of them. Good valley held at 4 cents. There was too much of the medium grade. Lilies did not go above 12 cents, and there was no shortage. Narcissi were a glut. Violets seldom rose above $1.25; all were not sold, however, for on Monday the top was $1 and on Tuesday the street merchants were again in evidence.

The green goods men had a wonderful Christmas, if one may judge by the little stock remaining. This will all go during the present week.

Various Notes.

It is difficult to particularize where all the retailers demonstrate their artistic ability at Christmas, in beautiful window decorations. Among the best of the window displays were Brown's and David Clarke's Sons', on upper Broadway; Warendorff's, at the Ansonia; Dards', Myer's, and the Bunyard Co.'s, on Madison avenue; Bowe's and Small & Sons', on Broadway, and McConnell's and Wadley & Smyth's, on Fifth avenue. Over in Brooklyn there were equally fine window displays at Jahn's, on Nostrand avenue; Wilson's, on Greene avenue, and Phillips' and Masur's, on lower Fulton street.

John F. Sharkey, Jr., arrived in town December 6 and will later be associated with his father at 814 Sixth avenue.

Harry Turner spent his Christmas with old friends in England, going over on the Mauretania.

A. T. Boddington last week shipped a carload of cannas to Winterson's Seed Store, Chicago.

Miss Behan, formerly with John Young, is now bookkeeper for Myer, at Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht were well pleased with their first Christmas. Howard E. Blauvelt is their manager.

J. J. Coan, of the Growers' Cut Flower Co., had a fine lot of mums at Christmas, especially Yellow Chadwick. Prices realized were satisfactory.

Mistletoe was at a premium Christmas eve. Moore, Hentz & Nash say they could have sold double the quantity imported from England.

William P. Ford says he never handled finer Beauties or carnations than this Christmas.

Monsieur Beauplan, of the Forster Mansfield Co., raised the wages of all his employees five per cent as a Christmas present. The firm now occupies the whole building and has some large contracts in decoration. A new refrigerator was built in Wadley's last week, at Plainfield, N. J.

The greatest enterprise of the holiday season was the plunging of C. C. Trepel. His store at Bloomingdale's is four times the size of last year. He had an immense stock and spent $1,200 in advertising in the week. The same method prevailed in his store at Losier's, Brooklyn. He buys cut flowers by the wagonload, and takes risks that would make the ordinary florist turn gray in a night. His wife manages the Brooklyn business.

Joseph J. Levy handled a fine grade of poinsettias and asparagus in pans for his Christmas plant specialty.

Young & Nugent and August Millang, on Twenty-eighth street, did an enormous Christmas business. As a retail street, the building operations of the last six months have been discouraging. Mr. Nugent has a large telephone clientele, and a big volume of orders daily from out-of-town florists.

Badgley, Reidel & Meyer were much elated over their first combination Christmas.

P. J. Smith was under the weather and was obliged to go home Saturday and remain until Tuesday.

J. K. Allen sold an immense lot of poinsettias and carnations in pots.

Traendly & Schenck did a large shipping business and were making no complaints of any kind.

Gunther Bros. added several hundred cases of holly to their turnover this season.

Charles Millang said business was never better on Saturday morning and his only kick was lack of room.

A. L. Young said Christmas was not quite up to other years, but the year as a whole has been more than satisfactory.

Kessler Bros. say the plant trade was enormous.

All the Brooklyn wholesalers and the supply houses report a satisfactory holiday trade, and the plantsmen everywhere were sold out a week before Christmas.

George Saltford shipped large quantities of violets to out-of-town buyers.

Bert Chadwick has been called to London, Ont., by the illness of his father.

S. B. Wertheimer, who was at home ill for several days, is again attending to business.

Bowling.

A half dozen of the faithful found time to bowl December 23. The scores were:

Player.	1st	2d	3d	4th
Berry	137	120	124	149
Scott	140	131	148	167
Shaw	131	122	132	142
Kakuda	121	125	134	125
McArdle	87	105	103	156
Manda	169	189	165	166

Manda wins the Scott prize of $5 in gold for the high average to date. Alex. D. Shaw & Co. have donated several bottles of their best brand of champagne to be competed for, a bottle each week, while they last, going to the high score of the evening. J. Austin Shaw.

WICHITA, KAN.

The Market.

The Christmas trade showed a fair increase over previous years. Most of the stock offered was of good quality and commanded about the same price as last year. Some exceptionally good Lorraine begonias and cyclamens were shown, but most of the azaleas hardly came up to first quality. Fancy plant baskets found a ready sale whenever time could be found to arrange them. The demand for ferns and palms was better than usual, some highly satisfactory sales being recorded.

The cut flower business included the usual kick against high prices, and then the final long sigh and "I'll take 'em." Practically all shipped roses were of good quality, although one or two Beauty orders proved a disappointment. The quantity of both Beauties and other roses was just about sufficient for the demand. In bulbous stock the supply and demand were about even, both being comparatively small, as usual.

Carnations were of fair quality, with ample opportunity to use more than could be secured. There was a marked shortage in violets, hardly any being offered for sale.

Much of the holly came in poor condition, but there seemed to be enough to supply the demand. Green rope was sold before it came, and the later customers had to be content with holly and wild smilax, or not be content at all. Mistletoe was good and the amount handled seemed to be about the same as last year. The florists who handled trees reported clean-ups, while a local commission house imported a car besides, and had some left.

Taken altogether, the Christmas business was a satisfactory climax to a good autumn business, which has shown an even increase over the corresponding time for last season. R.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

Ridgefield, Conn.—F. E. Lewis is building a large greenhouse on his estate, West Lane.

Rumford, Me.—E. B. Davis occupied an extra store on Congress street during the Christmas rush.

Stroudsburg, Pa.—J. Howard Stone held a formal opening December 17 of his new flower store, at 503 Main street.

Beloit, Wis.—C. S. Naugle, who has been ill for the last five weeks, is again able to get around the house and is gaining steadily.

Wichita, Kan.—Ralph Culp, son of W. H. Culp and engaged in the business with him, took unto himself a wife Thanksgiving evening.

Columbus, O.—Fire destroyed the greenhouse of Frank Miller, on Fairview pike, December 16, causing a loss of several hundred dollars. The origin is unknown.

Sharon, Pa.—R. A. Burgoon has just completed a new greenhouse and will plant it to rhubarb and lettuce. He has also installed a new Capitol boiler, with sufficient surplus capacity to heat still another house of the same size.

Minneapolis, Minn.—The building of the Kusik-Eckhardt Co. was destroyed by fire Christmas night. No estimate of the loss is made, but it is stated that the company will start anew as soon as a suitable location can be secured.

Wakefield, Mass.—Chas. C. Ball, whose greenhouses are at Yale and North avenues, had the pleasure of directing the decorations for his own wedding recently. He was united in marriage December 3 with Miss Sigrid H. Widell, of this city.

Maywood, Ill.—Ernst Rober, who has owned and operated the greenhouses at 1712 Fourth avenue for the last two years, has sold a one-half interest to Martin Radke, well known in Maywood as a grower. The business will now be conducted under the name of Rober & Radke.

Berwick, Pa.—John A. Smethers & Son were somewhat handicapped on account of their heavy loss by hail last summer. Business, however, has been excellent, with a good demand for pot plants and an unusually large amount of funeral work, and the outlook, on the whole, is bright.

Austin, Tex.—A. J. Seiders, of this city, has been in Houston, Tex., for the last two months, laying out and planting a large residence park. Many choice plants, trees, etc., are being planted, including a carload of palms from California. In connection with this park a small greenhouse, 18x50, and a workroom are also being built for Judge Edwin B. Parker. The A. Dietsch Co., of Chicago, furnished the greenhouse materials.

Auburndale, Mass.—Frederick W. Fletcher, of the Riverside Greenhouses, has completed a new greenhouse and a cement salesroom.

Babylon, N. Y.—A. W. Warren, formerly with Wiborg, at East Hampton, is now superintendent for the Howell Carnation Co., at this place.

Sandwich, Ill.—Mrs. F. Spickerman, proprietor of the Sandwich Greenhouses, has added to her equipments a handsome new delivery wagon.

Muncie, Ind.—The Muncie Floral Co. reports the holiday trade as the best in seventeen years of experience. Poinsettias sold best, with azaleas a close second.

Fulton, Ill.—E. O. Hills was recently confined to his home for several days by illness, but at last report he had sufficiently recovered to be able to attend to business at his greenhouses.

Berlin, N. J.—L. K. Peacock, of the Peacock Dahlia Farms, has removed from Williamstown Junction to Laurel Springs, where he is making arrangements to cultivate five acres of dahlias next summer.

Ravinia, Ill.—Herman A. Dreiske, who owns a range of greenhouses here, recently purchased a tract of ground at the county line and is preparing to handle shrubs and other nursery stock as well as flowers.

Adams, Mass.—On Saturday night, December 17, an explosion of coal gas at the greenhouses of A. J. Boothman set fire to the roof of the boiler room, but the flames were extinguished before much damage was done.

Richmond, Me.—A recent issue of a local newspaper contained a picture of the home and greenhouses of F. L. Billings, who in May, 1909, purchased the business of the late L. B. Dingley, in the south end. Since Mr. Billings became owner he has enlarged the houses, until he now has 8,000 square feet under glass. He was born in Haverhill, Mass., in 1851, but has lived in Maine the greater part of his life.

Black Hall, Conn.—Edgar H. Steele has resigned his position as manager of the Black Hall Greenhouses and will become manager of the greenhouses of the Andrews estate, at Elmwood, Conn., a suburb of Hartford. The Black Hall Greenhouses have been leased to T. L. Brown and J. F. Howard, local market gardeners. Brown & Howard express their determination to continue to grow the high quality of cut flowers, potted plants and forced vegetables for which this place has always been famous. Connected with it are ten acres of good garden soil for outside crops. Both men are hustlers and start in with the best wishes and promised support of the trade.

Biddeford, Me.—Chas. S. Strout has just completed a new bulb cellar. Its floor is nine or ten feet below the surface of the ground, and the walls, ceiling and floor are lined with cement. He is importing considerable quantities of fine bulbs. He has a new pink carnation of his own raising and is quite hopeful as to its future.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Special convention and National Flower Show, Boston, Mass., March 26 to April 1, 1911.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

Once more the trade has had its merriest Christmas. The business grows every year.

Easter, the next special flower day, comes April 16, 1911, three weeks later than in 1910.

Rev. J. H. Pemberton is the new president of the National Rose Society of England. He is the author of "Roses, Their History, Development and Cultivation."

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

The census bureau has figured out that there are 91,193,490 of us, a gain of twenty per cent in ten years. The florists' business is increasing a great deal faster than the population.

"Wilful waste makes woeful want." Don't let your surpluses go to waste. If you have a little more stock than your local trade calls for, you can turn it into cash by putting a three or four line advertisement in the Classified Department of The Review.

It was a big Christmas. December weather over most of the country was exceptionally favorable to cut flower production, with the result that the large wholesale markets handled much more stock than ever before. First-class flowers were so abundant that all overripe stock had to be jobbed at a fraction of the prices of fresh flowers and large quantities went to waste. It proved anew that it does not pay to pickle.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

The Cottage Gardens Co., Inc., of Queens, L. I., has registered the new carnation, Howard Gould; Mrs. C. W. Ward x dark pink seedling; clear, dark pink; three and one-half inches in size; wiry stem, thirty to thirty-six inches in length; flower deeply imbricated and of fine form. A. F. J. Baur, Sec'y.

CYPRIPEDIUM FAIRIEANUM.

With reference to one of the exhibits at a recent meeting of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, the following communication has been received from Thomas Knight, of Knight & Struck, New York city:

"On page 26 of The Review of December 22 I notice an article regarding an exhibit of orchids made by J. A. Newsham, of New Orleans, in which it is stated that he had a group of hybrid cypripediums, and among the latter was a fine plant of Cypripedium Fairieanum. It may be of interest to your readers to know that Cypripedium Fairieanum is a species and not a hybrid, coming from Assam, India. The habit of the plant is dwarf, the foliage green. The dorsal sepal of the flower is white, yellowish green at the base, veined with purple; the lip is reddish green veined with purple."

RETAILERS' CARDS.

The directory of retail florists which has for years been a feature of each issue of The Review has grown to occupy six pages. The exchange of orders between retailers in widely separated cities has grown to be an important part of the business. It largely has been made possible by the department in The Review, for cards of Leading Retail Florists, and it is a branch of the business that is so easily handled and so great a convenience to the public, that it will keep on growing faster and faster as more and more flower buyers find out how speedily and satisfactorily orders for distant delivery can be handled by the retail florists. Those who are not taking advantage of this department of The Review, either as a means of securing or filling orders, are missing something. See pages 34 to 39.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

In none of the years that have passed has the Chicago market handled so many Christmas flowers as were merchandized last week. The quantity of stock was so great that a new record for total sales was made in most of the houses, in spite of the fact that prices in many of the important lines averaged lower than in recent years.

It was Chicago's biggest cut flower Christmas, but there was a fly in the ointment in nearly every case. The supplies of stock, taking the market as a whole, were considerably greater than had been expected, which fact was at the bottom of most of the troubles. For wholesalers and growers the degree of satisfaction with results is in almost exact proportion to the amount of shipping trade ordinarily handled. The houses that have the most out-of-town customers had the best Christmas; those wholesalers who do little shipping wore long faces. It takes nearly a week, not just one day, to make a Christmas for this market. The long-distance shipments go out first, then those to nearby points, with city trade coming after the shipping is over. Usually the houses that do not ship much count on selling at high prices to those who do, but this year stock was so plentiful on the shipping days that shippers filled practically everything out of their own receipts, and were under little necessity of buying. Thus those who were not shipping did little business for three days, during which their receipts were heavy and for which their consignors expect Christmas prices. The city business is notoriously dull for three days before December 24.

There never has been a Christmas when orders were filled more completely. Even of carnations, of which nearly everyone had been predicting a shortage, there turned out to be enough. Of course, orders for red were not all filled—they never are—and some orders had been turned away, but all the orders accepted in advance were filled as closely as they ever are at such a time, and the last consignments came in, as usual, on a declining market. There were many splits and sleepy flowers that realized little, and low grade white was a glut, so it is quite probable some growers averaged less for their carnations in Christmas week than in either of the two weeks preceding.

The big business for the holiday had been booked on roses. Of these the supply was enormous, and the quality of most of the stock superlatively fine. There really are not so many buyers who used Beauties, when compared to the total number of customers at a holiday, but the extremely large supply was cleaned up. One not insistent on quality could name his price at any time, and early in the week much fine stock was sold cheaply, with some waste of stock that had been held too long to be usable, but strictly first-class Beauties were worth full listed prices Christmas eve. The week's market was not one favorable to the considerable quantities of Beauties shipped in from a distance. Of other roses, only Richmond was short of the demand. It was possible to give the buyers rather better values than in other years, particularly in long-stemmed stock. White Killarney and Bride were in slight request and accumulated badly in consequence of the possibility of giving buyers all they wanted of pink if not of red. There was, in fact, a larger waste of culls than is usual at Christmas, because there were so many good roses that no one had to take weak-stemmed, open flowers unless they were what he wanted.

The violet situation proved peculiar. It appeared the orders of most of the big buyers were concentrated in the hands of a very few wholesalers, who also had all the violets that were needed to fill the orders. Consequently, other handlers had to hunt for places to put the violets, for sales of 200 or 300 do not eat up large receipts when buyers come no faster than last week. Irresponsible buyers refused to take some of the stock ordered earlier because they were able to fill their requirements at cheaper prices. Singles fared fully as well as doubles. Many of the retailers in the end overbought on violets.

While the retailers like to see a market well supplied, the wholesalers and growers prefer one that makes people skirmish for stock—it insures the cleaning up of the odds and ends, which goes a long way toward making good average prices. In the present instance the odds and ends suffered; they were numerous and they didn't sell. Paper Whites and Romans were not wanted. Callas and Harrisii were not in request. Sweet peas and valley could not be cleaned up. Poinsettias sold only moderately well. In the aggregate these items, and the culls from the staple lines, represented many thousands of dollars that would have been added to the week's sales had there been any opportunity of including them in the biggest seven days' turnover this market ever has known.

Before the Christmas rush was over came the call for stock for work for the twenty-four city firemen killed in the Morris fire. This made a use for quantities of white flowers and did much toward cleaning up the accumulation of these, for hundreds of designs were required. The funeral of Chief Horan was on a scale unknown here. There were two fire truck loads of flowers.

The present week opened with a fair half day's holiday business Monday and a big run of shipping on Tuesday. There is an abundance of stock of all kinds, though the close cutting for Christmas and the two days' vacation taken by many of the growers failed to reveal the full volume of the heavy crops until the middle of the week. The wholesalers all anticipate heavy business until after New Year's, by which time it is thought rose crops will be on the down grade. Cattleyas are much more abundant than they have been for some weeks. Valley also is plentiful, Eastern commission houses reconsigning both cattleyas and valley to this market.

Various Notes.

Sunday afternoon, December 25, just as the last Christmas deliveries were going out, an automobile crashed through the Michigan avenue window of W. J. Smyth. This is the second time an automobile has gone through the same window, and the third time within a few months that he has lost one of his big lights of glass. It almost seems that it would be economy to build a breakwater around his corner.

G. H. Pieser, president of the Kennicott Bros. Co., has been critically ill for more than a week, but is now convalescing.

In estimating the Christmas business done in the Chicago market, E. C. Amling says that he thinks Chicago this Christmas handled one-third more flowers than ever before, at prices probably fifteen per cent lower than those of last year, which figures out a rather good increase in the money value of the total sales.

C. W. McKellar is suffering with an extremely sore third finger on his left hand. A small crack in the skin became poisoned and has now become not only painful, but somewhat alarming.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the check sent William Dittman for his last week's sales was the largest ever sent out from their house. Mr. Dittman grows Beauties exclusively. In spite of the lower average prices, the size of his cut made his check several hundreds of dollars larger than last year.

A. C. Kohlbrand, chairman of the Florists' Club's banquet committee, states that he has arranged with the Union restaurant for a dinner following the club meeting January 5. It is to be a Dutch treat, $1 per plate.

Muir is using a big blue Pierce-Arrow motor car for his deliveries. It is one of the most striking vehicles on the street.

A. L. Randall Co. says that the supply department is taking a rest for a few days, but that rush orders came in up to Christmas eve and the year has given them a much larger volume of sales than in 1909.

O. J. Friedman got a quantity of heather from the east for his plant arrangements. His Congress Floral Co. used as an annex one of the two stores in the Congress hotel for which Mr. Friedman has not yet found a tenant.

W. F. Hoerber gave a Christmas dinner to the store employees December 26. He said he was more than pleased with the Christmas business, and Harry Manheim pointed out that White Killarney, which was in specially heavy crop with them, was the only item on which they were long.

John Kruchten, who has been for some time receiving locally grown gardenias, says they sold excellently for Christmas.

South Water street and the railroads got stuck on holly.

Martha C. Gunterberg and Hertha V. Tonner, Chicago's two women commissionmen, both report their largest Christmas.

E. Wienhoeber Co. says the Christmas trade started earlier than last year and rolled up an excellent total, most of the sales being on moderate priced plant arrangements. They use more pottery than any other store in town.

Phil Schupp says that J. A. Budlong handled in Christmas week nearly three times as many flowers as in the same week last year.

The Market.

The Christmas rush is over, but as yet no one is prepared to say definitely how business compares with that of previous years. Everyone is tired out; too tired to sit down and figure up what he has done, but, judging from reports received, business was just a little better than last year.

Plants of all kinds sold well, Lorraine begonias, azaleas, cyclamen and poinsettias going first. The last named is truly the Christmas flower, but it has the reputation of being a poor house plant, and for this reason is not as much in demand as some others. Cyclamen in the larger sizes did not sell readily. Azaleas are always good, and found ready sale. They were almost worth their weight in gold the week before Christmas. Everybody who had plants to wholesale was sold out, and still the orders from out of town came in. More plants were grown this year than ever before, and all of the greenhouses have been cleaned out, so it would look as though business had been better.

Cut flowers were plentiful, with the exception of Beauties and violets. The high prices that prevail at holiday times are gradually causing a drifting from the ice-box over to the plant stands or conservatory, where one can get more for his money.

For some reason, roping, holly and wreaths were not in demand. The report was spread broadcast that lycopodium was scarce, and consequently high priced. There were no green goods stands on the streets, and the bulk of that trade went to the florists, but reports are to the effect that there were quantities left. A good proportion of the holly was well berried, but it was quite dry, and the berries dropped off.

Our first real snow storm came on the Wednesday morning before Christmas, and was followed by a rapid drop in temperature. Store men were rather worried about Christmas delivering, as the streets were icy and transit was slow, but on Friday the sun came out bright and warm and the ice disappeared as if by magic, so that there was no trouble at all in getting around and deliveries were promptly made.

Club Meeting.

The officers of the Colorado Florists' Club, who were elected at the November meeting, were installed at the regular meeting Tuesday evening, December 13. About forty members were present, and they enjoyed the usual program and refreshments.

What proved to be a most interesting discussion was started by N. A. Benson, just as the meeting was about to adjourn. He put before the club the question, "Are western made pots as good for growing plants as pots of eastern manufacture?" It was the opinion of many that they were not, and that it paid a grower to procure his pots in the east, even if the freight did more than double the cost. Ben. Boldt made the statement that western pots could be made quite satisfactory if they were allowed to stand for several days in manure water. He was upheld in this statement by J. A. Valentine, who knew of several concerns that never use a pot until this is done.

The discussion became quite animated and the secretary was instructed to invite the different pottery men to the next meeting, prepared to talk on the subject. It is hoped that all the members will be present.

Various Notes.

O. E. Sandberg, until recently in charge of Fred Hall's place, has bought some land at Brighton, Colo., where he expects to erect greenhouses in the near future.

Emil Glauber has purchased a new automobile. He brings his flowers to the city twice each day, and finds that there is a great saving in time, and that the expense is comparatively small.

The store men were all too busy to attend the Bowling League meeting Friday night before Christmas, but a few of the other boys got together and rolled a few games.

C. U. Fohn and John Berry, of Colorado Springs, were in the city last week.

He could not convince Mr. Horlacher of this fact, however, and the bets gradually jumped from one hat to four or five hats; but before the two left the commission house, the bets took a drop down to nothing. Neither one had gained his

A Personal Letter to Every Florist.

PHILADELPHIA, January 1st, 1911.

Dear Sir:-

Ripeness and progressiveness—that's what you want in a seedsman.

Some florists deal with a seedsman simply because they have formed the habit, or because their favorite house is one with a record dating back a century or two.

Nowadays it is not old age or past greatness, for it is reasonable to suppose that the "old man" himself may have died or retired, and it is a toss-up whether his business-bringing policies are still being carried out, and whether his successors or subordinates are any better executives than those in a new, inexperienced seed house.

Very often it is the "old man's" large block of capital stock that is holding the business together—to uphold the family's business name.

There are other "live," ripe, twentieth-century seedsmen, however, and one in particular, with a rosy record over twenty-one years long—a ripe age—under the vigorous personal direction of its founder, with the ablest managers of departments, the most "up-to-the minute" and courteous business methods, located in the most modern and best-equipped seed-house in the world—these are just a few of the reasons for the marvelous growth of the House of Michell.

All this is not mentioned in a boastful way—only that those who do not know us may realize that they cannot know too many ripe, progressive people, and that such firms may save them some money.

The House of Michell confidently expects to make every florist in the land a customer and a friend, but only by showing the trade better qualities, better values, better service, and better results than they have been accustomed to getting. We realize that this is the only way to get repeated orders.

You want your greenhouses to yield more profits—every "live" florist does—and doesn't it stand to reason that a house which, like ours, is securing a great amount of new business, must be offering extra good bargains to secure such trade?

At any rate, you owe it to yourself to investigate, and whether you need a packet of seeds, a case of bulbs, or several tons of fertilizer, our coming together cannot bring profit to us unless it brings more to you.

You are now on the threshold of a new season. Write for our 1911 wholesale catalogue (it is ready), find out what we have to offer you—how our prices compare with competition—and above all, give us a trial.

Others—and very particular florists, too— are making capital out of dealing here, so why not you?

To give each customer's best interests whole-hearted study; to analyze the conditions; to note the likes and fancies and satisfy them;—that's the idea on which this business has been conducted for over twenty-one years.

Respectfully yours,

PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

December 21.—The thaw that delighted us during the week ending with the shortest day of the year proved a godsend to the plantsmen. The packers had been kept busy during the cold weather, the sheds were full of boxes ready for shipment, and just at the right moment, the weather moderating, the express companies were given the biggest Christmas job this city has ever known. The immense stock of blooming plants has run low and the stock of foliage plants has been depleted, particularly those suitable for basket work. Growers realize that the Christmas holiday plant business has come to stay, provided they produce what is required.

Greens cause the principal activity in the wholesale houses. Boxwood has advanced to double its usual price. Lycopodium is obtainable only in limited quantity. Holly, too, has become scarce, although this word hardly conveys the idea. Great quantities of holly have been used. So far as known all the orders have been filled, but there is no surplus and it is difficult at times to get what is required.

The cut flower market is dull. There is a certain amount of business, with only a moderate supply of stock. The orders are chiefly advance orders for Christmas, with the stock mostly on the plants or in the grower's hands. Roses are abundant—more abundant than anything else. The quality is excellent, prices moderate; the usual pre-holiday advance has not yet come. Carnations are scarce; they have advanced in price. The grower who holds back this year will make me feel that the efforts of this column have been in vain, for it is even greater folly than usual to hold carnations this year. The amount of money returned to the grower during the last week for fresh stock will undoubtedly be larger than this same stock held would realize in the three days before Christmas. Violets are dull. Valley in active demand. Sweet peas are as plentiful as carnations are scarce. Cattleyas and gardenias continue high in price, with the certainty that these prices will be maintained until the end of the year. Callas have advanced. Yellow daisies sell fairly, but no one seems to care about white. Chrysanthemums are practically over. There is little pre-holiday demand for poinsettias. Stevia is in active request. The bulbous flowers sell slowly, likewise tender greens.

JUST AFTER CHRISTMAS FLOWERS ARE GOOD

The Christmas Market.

December 27.—The total volume of Christmas business in plants and flowers, shipping and local, was larger than ever before. The volume of business in plants was larger than ever before. The volume of business in cut flowers was not so large as last year. The increase was in plants; a greater number of cut flowers were sold at lower average prices. The abundance and fine quality of the stock placed business on a more satisfactory footing than in times of scarcity. The retailers generally were satisfied, although the increase in plant sales was at an increased cost of delivery. Hardly anybody sold out clean, yet nearly everybody did more business.

Beauties were not in eager demand. The price, starting at $12 for the specials, gradually fell back to $7.50 on Christmas day. The mediums and shorts sold well. Richmond was in demand at $25 for the fancies, some select stock going up as high as $50. The mediums and shorts sold well. Killarney led the pinks, $25 and $20 for the specials, with the grades at $15 and $12 most in demand. The supply was enormous. Maryland brought the same prices as Killarney, but made a lower average. White Killarney, Bride and Maid sold for $20 and downward, the demand being about equal to the supply. Philadelphia has never seen so many roses before.

Red carnations and the Wards brought $15; select red, $10 to $12; other colors, $6 to $8; ordinary, $4. Carnations held their own in favor. Double violets brought $1.25 to $2; singles, $1 to $1.50. The demand was excellent. Cattleyas brought $70 per hundred; cypripediums, $15. Gardenias were the only really scarce flower, the price being $5 to $9. Valley was in oversupply at $3 to $5. The best sweet peas brought $1. Callas sold for $2.50 per dozen. Easter lilies $10 to $15 per hundred. Mignonette was $8; Paper Whites and daisies, $2 to $3; poinsettias $3 to $4 per dozen. Greens were about normal. The aged and open stock was jobbed at a fraction of listed prices.

The Floral Barometer.

The newspaper man knows that the florists' supplies are an index to the wholesale and retail business that is to come. This is especially true of Philadelphia because the great florists' supply houses of this city do business over the entire country. When they are busy night and day for nearly a month before the holidays, it is a pretty sure indication that the florists all over the country have confidence in the prospect.

H. Bayersdorfer said that over ninety telegrams reached his house after business hours December 17. In response thereto, teams met an incoming steamer that docked that afternoon at 4 p. m. and by 5 a. m. Sunday the entire consignment for his house had been received. By that evening most of it had been shipped to the customers.

Various Notes.

The business of the late J. William Colflesh will be continued by his three sons: J. William Colflesh, Jr., C. B. Colflesh, and D. E. Colflesh, who have been associated with their father at Fifty-third and Woodland avenue.

M. Rice & Co., firm, salesmen, packers, bookkeepers and errand boys, say this has been the greatest season on record, and that their prestige of promptness with orders has been maintained through four weeks' overtime work.

Emil Wohlert, of Bala, the noted adiantum grower, captured several blue ribbons with his fine Brahmas at the poultry show held in one of the armories.

Ernest F. Hoehl has been sending the Leo Niessen Co. some mignonettes that are a pleasure to behold.

W. J. Palmer, of Buffalo, N. Y., paid a brief visit to this city recently.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

Christmas week brought us the most discouraging weather imaginable up to December 24, when it changed for the better. That beautiful day brought out the shoppers early and all the flower stores as well as the nurseries did an immense business and the rush at the former was kept up until the midnight hour. After that time the hundreds of orders for cut flowers and plants were put up for early delivery.

Christmas day was as ideal as anyone could wish it to be, and the sales equaled those of the previous day. The great select stock of adiantums, palms, azaleas, Begonia Lorraine, cyclamen, and especially poinsettias, both in pans and single plants, besides hundreds of planted baskets and jardinieres, found eager buyers, and the sale of cut flowers was enormous.

The favorite flowering plant was no doubt the bright poinsettia, and the large stock in the hands of all the local florists was nearly cleaned out. Azaleas, Begonia Lorraine and valley did not sell as well this Christmas as in former years, although the plants were fine.

The custom of sending plants and cut flowers for Christmas gifts increases here every year, and taking into consideration that the main buying of both was done only on Christmas eve and Christmas day, the output this year excelled that of any other year.

Various Remarks.

Abele Bros.: "We were well satisfied; blooming stock was in great demand."

A. Alost: "Did a fine business and especially noticed the big increase in sales over other years."

P. A. Chopin: "Business excelled my expectations in sale of plants, and cut flowers were nearly sold out."

C. Eble: "Sales all around very satisfactory."

James A. Schindler: "Had a larger shipment of cut flowers than ever and sold out at very good prices."

H. Rehfeld: "My stock of cut flowers sold out and I could have disposed of twice as many."

U. J. Virgin: "Flowering plants, especially poinsettias, planted baskets, adiantums and palms, sold at a rush and the biggest shipment of cut flowers I ever carried for this day was nearly cleaned out."

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

We are in the midst of another Christmas, and although it is rather early to give a complete summary of the business done in the stores and markets, observations made during the last two days and the latest accounts at hand show that an immense business was done in both cut flowers and potted plants. Cemetery stock of all kinds was hard to move and all who handled that kind of stock had a good deal of it left on their hands. Immortelles were exceedingly hard to move, especially those sold by the bunch. The heavy snow which has covered the ground for the last two weeks made it difficult for the public to visit the cemeteries and they just stayed at home.

Natural blooms were scarce. This is expected for some days before the holidays, many growers holding on till the last moment, in the expectation of better prices. Carnations were exceedingly scarce; there were not one-tenth enough to go around, and they brought from 7 cents to 9 cents each, wholesale. Roses were a little more plentiful and brought from 6 cents to 8 cents each, wholesale.

Pot plants were in heavy demand, especially ferns, poinsettias and cyclamens, of which there were heavy shipments. There was an oversupply of holly and mistletoe. The finest kind could be had for $2 to $3 per case, or a loose load for $3 to $6. Christmas trees were a glut and thousands were hauled to the dump.

Various Notes.

The Baltimore Florists' Exchange did a business that considerably exceeded in volume that of any preceding Christmas. Manager J. J. Perry had an extra force of efficient help and the transactions of the day were smoothly and expeditiously forwarded, including considerable shipments to out-of-town customers. By the closing hour nearly everything was cleaned up. Q.

Beaver, Pa.—T. M. Fitzgerald reports Christmas business this year the best ever. White carnations were scarce, on account of dark weather, but for the same reason he had a fine supply of chrysanthemums, white and yellow Jones, that helped out wonderfully. He has set up an additional twenty-five horse-power boiler for a reserve.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Christmas has passed, but it has been one that will long be remembered as the busiest in the history of the florist business in this city. The sudden drop in the temperature to the zero range on December 19 gave the trade some anxiety, which was not relieved until the weather warmed up on Thursday, and little trouble was experienced in the delivery of goods. On Saturday it rained hard and this curtailed to a slight degree the purchasing, but telephone orders apparently made up for the loss of personal trade. All the retailers had from half a dozen to fifteen or twenty extra help, and extra delivery wagons were kept on the rush to make the deliveries.

The sales on greens of all kinds were the largest ever known here, and the same may be said concerning potted plants. In the latter, poinsettias, azaleas, araucarias, ardisias, palms and ferns were among the best sellers, while pans of bulb stock found ready demand. In cut flowers the demand for poinsettias far exceeded any previous year, while roses, carnations and all other blooms moved with astonishing rapidity. Prices advanced to practically double the regular market, but no one seemed to object. Good stock was wanted and any prices were paid.

Various Notes.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island, held December 19, one new member was added to the list.

Resolutions on the recent death of ex-President William A. Appleton were adopted.

M. Macnair reports the biggest Christmas business since he opened a store in this city.

William I. Brown, with the Providence Seed Co., has been reëlected secretary of the Rhode Island Poultry Association.

Johnston Bros., on Dorrance street, employed ten extra clerks for the Christmas holidays, and barely closed their store from Thursday morning until Sunday at midnight.

William E. Crompton has been reelected collector of taxes of the Apponaug Fire District.

Large shipments of flowers, plants and fruits to the homes of the summer residents of Newport now in New York, Boston, Philadelphia and elsewhere, were made by their head gardeners last week.

George C. Kelley met with a serious accident recently, which will confine him to the house all winter. While going down a short flight of stairs into the basement of his greenhouse on Waterman street, one night during the recent cold spell, he stepped on a loose stick and was thrown violently. In falling, his right leg was doubled beneath him, causing a double fracture and dislocation of the ankle. For several days it was feared that amputation might have to be resorted to. The latest reports, however, are to the effect that he will probably recover.

Joseph Kopelman had the first single daffodils in the market, coming from his own houses at Oaklawn.

J. A. Budlong & Sons, of Auburn, cut more than 25,000 Killarney, My Maryland and Richmond roses during Christmas week. Many were sent to the Boston and New York markets.

M. J. Leach & Sons, of 20 Broad street, Pawtucket, report a big business in Christmas goods.

A. Holscher, of Hartford avenue, has contracted for the erection next spring of eight new houses, to contain more than 15,000 square feet. Work will commence as soon as the weather conditions are favorable. These he intends to use entirely for the growing of plants for potted stock for special days. As soon as these are finished and stocked he intends to put up a range of houses for the growing of orchids.

Eugene McCarron, with four extra hands, never stopped work from Thursday morning until early Sunday morning filling orders on cut flowers and plants.

Among the busiest places in the city were the stores of O'Connor, where several thousand dollars' worth of orders for Christmas were filled. He had several church decorations.

turned December 23 from a two weeks' trip through New York and New Jersey in search of nursery stock. He has just finished planting his propagating house, built this fall, with more than 50,000 cuttings of evergreens and privet. He has twenty-five carloads of young trees ordered for delivery as soon as the cold weather makes it convenient to handle them.

Thomas J. Johnston & Co., Edward Brooks, manager, in addition to one of the biggest seasons in its history, had a number of large church decorations.

Charles Hunt had more than 200 of the finest araucarias from his house on Burnside street ever seen in this market. They found ready sale.

William Hay reports a record business at his store on Washington street, while his wholesale trade kept all hands on the jump at his range at Oaklawn.

The rain of Saturday was welcome to the growers, as there was beginning to be a dangerous limit of water supply in several sections of the state.

George F. Johnson, of the Elmwood Greenhouses, has reported to the police that his shop at 521 Elmwood avenue was broken into on the night of December 21 and the cash register rifled. Entrance was gained by removing glass from a small window in the rear of the shop.

A. C. James is to build a greenhouse, plant house and farm stable on Brenton road, Newport, in the spring, to cost about $13,000. W. H. M.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

Christmas trade in most cases was as good as last year, and in some instances better. The wholesalers should have no kick this year, as flowers were plentiful and brought top-notch prices. Indications show that the blooming plant business is on the increase, and with the steady coöperation of all retailers handling blooming plants this end of the business could be made to far exceed that of the cut flowers. This should be far more satisfactory to both the customer and retailer, as in plants there is little advance in prices and in cut flowers they are more than double.

This puts the store man in a bad light, as it is hard to make a customer believe that he does not regulate the prices.

As to demand in cut flowers, there did not seem to be much choice, as everything went regardless of the high prices. Fancy roses brought from $3 to $6 per dozen, carnations $1.50 to $2.50 per dozen. Violets were in heavy demand this year, bringing $3 and $4 per dozen. There were quantities of fancy Beauties at from $18 to $30 per dozen, and Paper Whites, hyacinths, stevia, sweet peas, valley, orchids, poinsettias and lilacs were to be had in large numbers and found ready sale.

The demand for corsages was quite noticeable this year and called for quantities of violets, valley, orchids, lilacs, sweet peas and roses. In pot plants, azaleas had the lead and brought the best prices. While poinsettias are the real Christmas flower, they cannot touch the azalea. It appears as if the Lorraine begonias are a thing of the past, as most people know their keeping qualities and are shy of them. Cyclamens still find ready demand, as do primroses, hyacinths and numerous other plants.

The Flower Market was not up to its usual standard this Christmas. There was plenty of green goods to be had there, but good blooming plants were scarce and the general stock was poor.

In holly and greens the trade was good, and as usual the prices at the seed stores increased as the days went by and stock became more scarce.

Various Notes.

E. A. Nelson says that his Christmas trade was satisfactory, as he had all he could handle. Mr. Nelson had a large variety of blooming plants this year and reports excellent sale for them. He had a fine lot of Lorraines, also the new Glory of Cincinnati.

Sidney Smith says he has had a fine year with his chickens, as well as in the florist business.

Ollie Hobbs, of C. M. Hobbs & Sons, of Bridgeport Nurseries, is carrying an air of responsibility these days. The cause of all this is a new nine-pound boy.

Mrs. Elder, mother of Glen Elder of Hartje & Elder, passed away December 23. She had been ill with pneumonia for about one week.

Bertermann Bros. enjoyed their usual fine business and they report sales in blooming plants considerably larger than last year. Their cut flower trade was large, also. They had an unusually fine lot of blooming plants this year.

Fred Hukreide says his trade was entirely satisfactory.

A. Wiegand & Sons report Christmas business better than last year. Blooming plants sold well, their entire stock being cleaned up. Their cut flower business was far better than last year. This firm used four Overland automobiles and two delivery wagons for their delivery and experienced no trouble in this line.

Baur & Smith had a good cut of carnations for Christmas, and their stock was good. They also had a fine lot of poinsettias.

John Rieman reports business better than last year. He says he sold out of both plants and cut flowers.

The Pahud Floral Co. had a good business and reports a heavy demand for greens, with the pot plant trade not quite as good as last year.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

An exhibition recently was held in the seed store of Thomas J. Lindley, Jeffersonville, Ky., by the Clark County Corn Growers' Association.

The Shenandoah Seed Co., Shenandoah, Ia., has been incorporated, with $10,000 authorized capital stock, by Henry Field and H. E. Eaton.

Fire at Delaware, O., December 18, gutted the building occupied in part by the Zack Davis Co., seed growers, whose loss is estimated at $5,000, with $1,000 insurance.

Why is it so large a proportion of the lithographed catalogue covers show tomatoes? Is it because red is the only color striking enough to catch the seed planter's eye?

The factory of the Benjamin Chase Co., well known to seedsmen as manufacturers of wooden plant labels, was burned to the ground December 11. An account of the disaster will be found in another part of this issue of The Review, under the head of "Derry, N. H."

Alex. Henderson, who has been with Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, for thirteen years, announces that January 2 he will begin business on his own account, in partnership with Guy M. Reburn, formerly a traveler for the same house. The firm name will be A. Henderson & Co., and temporary headquarters will be at room 218, 51 Wabash avenue, Chicago. An importing and jobbing business in seeds, bulbs and plants will be done.

Announcement is made that the Robert Buist Co. will continue the seed business on Front street, above Market, Philadelphia. The present members of the company, since the death of Robert Buist, are Harry C. Stahler, Edward J. Flood and A. B. Kochersperger. Mr. Stahler has been Mr. Buist's confidential clerk for thirty years. Mr. Flood is the southern salesman and Mr. Kochersperger is in charge of the order and mail departments.

CHRISTMAS AT ROCHESTER.

Rochester seed houses are in the habit of celebrating Christmas with dinners to the employees. In the offices of James Vick's Sons, December 24, more than a score of the young ladies from the office and departments, with Charles H. Vick, George Arnold and E. F. Rowe, gathered about the tables and were served with turkey furnished by W. T. Fonda, treasurer of the company. F. B. King, of Mandeville & King Co., entertained the entire office force at the Hotel Eggleston, in celebration of Christmas day. Mr. King was assisted by Arthur W. Mandeville,

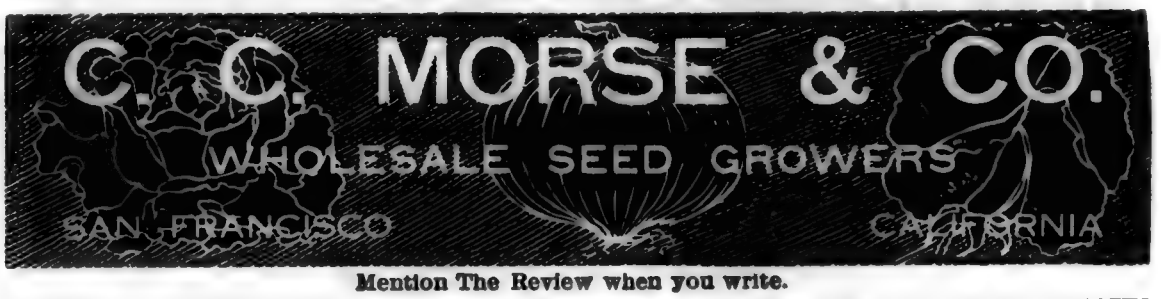
THRESHING RADISH SEED.

Can radish seed be threshed with a common grain machine, such as is used for threshing wheat and oats, or is a special machine required? N. D. B.

Radish seed can be threshed with almost any good grain thresher. It can also be threshed with a bean thresher and clover huller. There is no machine made specially for the threshing of radish seed.



The main thing in threshing radish seed is to have it dry, so that the pods will break easily The pods are sometimes helped in the threshing by frost. A sharp, frosty morning seems to make the pods more brittle and they break more easily. It can be threshed, however, any time when the straw is dry.

WILL POOL THEIR SETS.

At a meeting of the Jefferson County Produce Exchange, held at Beck's hall, Louisville, Ky., December 17, it was decided by the members to pool their onion sets and second-crop Cobbler and Carmen potatoes under the law passed by the last legislature, and H. R. Whiteside was designated as selling agent for the pool.

THE SUCCESSFUL SEEDSMAN.

A letter from a small planter, attacking the seed trade in intemperate language, published in the New York Sun, has elicited a number of replies, one of which, published by the Sun under the heading "The Successful Seedsman," was as follows:

"To the Editor of the Sun: My attention has been attracted to the letter of Fredrick S. Dickson under the heading 'The Seed Business' in your issue of December 8, in which Mr. Dickson says: 'The (seed) dealer declares that he gives no guarantees, expressed or implied, as to the quality, germinating power or any other thing about the article which he offers for sale. Look at their terms as set forth in their catalogues. They may give you onions for gladioli, or potatoes for dahlias, and you have no right to complain. No other business in the world is conducted on so dishonest a basis.'

"This is maligning a class of business men whose morals are as good as those of any other class in America. It is making a false charge against an industry which represents an investment of millions, an annual turnover of many millions, and upon which interests of far-reaching importance depend. There is no business in this country which requires greater foresight, which entails greater legitimate risk, nor which returns to those who follow it a narrower margin of profit, all things considered, than does the seed business. The successful seedsman is a man of keen intellect, infinite resource and thorough integrity.

"It is the custom of the seed trade the world over to refuse to guarantee the crop. But any seedsman will guarantee the seeds he sells so long as they remain out of the ground. Mr. Dickson, or any other purchaser, may not only test his seeds by every process known to himself, but he may call to his aid without cost the scientists of the United States or Canadian governments. The seedsman will abide by the result. After the buyer has tested them to his satisfaction, he may plant the seeds if he chooses—the result will depend upon himself and upon nature, not upon the seedsman.

"H. B. Howard."

Surplus Bulbs

Easter comes April 16, and you will need blooming Hyacinths, Tulips, Narcissi, etc., at that time. There is plenty of time to force them for your Easter trade, and we have a fine lot of bulbs for the purpose—the surplus left from our fall trade. We'd rather sell these below cost than throw them out, and now is the time for you to get a real bargain. You know how low these prices are:

NAMED HYACINTHS, $4.00 per 100.
NAMED TULIPS, $1.50 per 100.
NAMED NARCISSI, $1.50 per 100.
MONSTER YELLOW CROCUS, 60c per 100.
LARGE NAMED CROCUS, 50c per 100.
MIXED HYACINTHS, $2.50 per 100.
MIXED TULIPS, $1.50 per 100.

If you are in need of a large quantity of any of these or other bulbs, write us. We can quote you prices that will interest you.

Write us, also, if you are interested in Asparagus and Maidenhair fern as house plants. We have a fine lot of them at very attractive prices.

A good salesman is a valuable friend to a business man. He is a walking bureau of information, and generally a very intelligent man. Often his time is worth more than that of the man he is selling—he comes perhaps only once a year, and always tries to wear a smile. Now, the best hotel is a poor home, and the boys on the road usually deserve courteous treatment; yet the writer has met men who look upon them as a menace to their business, whereas they are a benefit. The successful salesman has no time to talk about others—he is a booster; he is not merely an order-taker, but a business-getter; he is aggressive; has strength of purpose; combines the interests of the house with those of his clients; and, in general, is a very capable man and an indefatigable worker. He knows no hours for sleep until his business is done, and he eats when he can, stands all kinds of climate and all kinds of people, and is a vital part of this business world of ours and a man worth your time to see.

We know there are some salesmen, or order-takers, in this business who are rum-guzzlers; and some are business-beggars, the latter being principally foreigners; but there are good ones, and there will be more as time flies. Horseshoe Brand salesmen are gentlemen, who have faith in their goods and the house, who have practical experience in the importing business, and who are absolutely independent men, that have "made good." They are selling the best there is, and they know it, and those they do not reach the mail does, and we solicit business from all who want Horseshoe Brand Products.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Christmas week was somewhat unsatisfactory. The weather was extremely cold the first of the week, causing people to hold off in their buying. Friday it rained all day. Saturday, however, was an ideal shopping day and the people did some heavy buying; it is generally reported as having been one of the biggest days ever experienced by the retail men, who worked night and day getting out their orders.

There were enough flowers of all kinds, even carnations, to satisfy all demands, and there was considerable cutting of prices by Saturday, December 24. Special Beauties were offered as low as $50 per hundred, which had a tendency to make those dissatisfied who had already purchased their stock at $100.

Greens of all kinds seemed plentiful enough, except pine, and there were plenty of Christmas trees to haul to the dump Monday morning.

Plants did exceptionally well and plantsmen have no complaint.

Various Notes.

Samuel McClements has the sympathy of his friends in the death of his sister, Friday morning, December 23. Just two years ago Mr. McClements lost another sister, on the same date, December 23. It seems particularly sad that a family who live so much for each other should have death come just at the holidays, when it is simply impossible for a man with such an extensive business to let go of it.

PARSLEY FOR SPRING.

I have just found on my desk a clipping which seems to have been taken from The Review, but when I cut it out I neglected to make a note of the date on which it was written. Please let me know whether the instructions it contains are still seasonable. It reads as follows: "Parsley sown now in rows on a raised bench will give more leaves at a time when the regular winter supply is running to seed and will net remarkable prices. If a bench is not at liberty, drop half a dozen seeds in each of a number of small pots and plant them out when you have a spare bench. These plants may be kept in pots, gradually hardened off and planted outdoors in April. At the time this parsley is yielding nice leaves the price is usually high, the season being right between the winter and summer crops." J. M.

I think this clipping must have been written about Thanksgiving, but it is not too late yet to sow parsley seed for the spring market. It should, however, be done at once and the plants must be well cared for and pushed along. H. G.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Christmas trade in St. Louis was most encouraging among the retailers, and the majority of them say that their sales exceeded those of last year. The rush started in early and lasted until late Christmas day. Although without exact information, from the looks of some of the leading west end florists' showhouses, they must have done a big plant business, and we are safe in saying that Christmas was as good as any previous one, if not a little better.

The weather was all that could be expected — clear and not too cold — and plants did not need much wrapping, which saved a great deal of time. It was thought that because of Christmas day coming on Sunday the flower trade would extend over until Monday to some extent, but this was a mistake, as Monday could be classed as a day of rest for local florists.

As to cut flowers, at the four wholesale establishments there was an abundance of almost everything in season, especially roses, such as Killarney, Bride, My Maryland and White Killarney, but Richmond cleaned up early, as they were in great demand. All brought good prices, but not as high as was expected.

Carnations had one of the largest demands in years. These were nearly all placed on advance orders. Reds commanded the top price, followed by dark pinks and Enchantress; $8 per hundred was the top price for fancy stock.

Violets were most plentiful and low prices prevailed all through, when we consider what they brought last Christmas. Extra fancy did not bring over $2 per hundred and some Californias did not bring over $1.50 per hundred. The demand was heavy, but there was plenty of stock to meet it. No doubles were in the market. The bulb stock, too, had a big demand, with Romans and Paper Whites not any too plentiful. There were plenty of lily of the valley and lilies. There was also a sprinkling of chrysanthemums, but they were not sought. Sweet peas were also a surprise this year, with the price low and an abundance of flowers. None of the wholesalers handled any orchids.

Taking it all in all, those local florists who depended on the local market for their supply were happy. All the wholesalers say they had an increase of business, even if the prices were not so high, and they are well satisfied.

Not much is expected for New Year's, at least no rush, and if the weather holds out stock will be most plentiful and prices reasonable.

Various Notes.

The downtown retailers are more than satisfied with their business. C. Young & Sons Co. had an exceptionally large trade in everything; plants and cut flowers both sold big. The Riessen Floral Co. says everything sold out at good prices. Ostertag Bros., as usual, had all they could do. Henry Ostertag says it was the best yet. Miss Badaracco, Otto Sander, the Foster Floral Co., Grimm & Gorly and Alex. Siegel all say that they did well; more than they expected.

In the west end they say they had a tremendous trade in plants. The Ellison Floral Co., Fred H. Weber, Fred C. Weber, Kalisch Bros., Theo. Miller and Sanders sold up clean. George Waldbart and Mrs. Ayers had all they could do with a big force of extra help. The Metropolitan Floral Co.'s first Christmas was all they could expect. It was big all week. The Eggeling Floral Co. had an extra fine supply of fancy Eaton chrysanthemums for Christmas. R. J. Windler, C. Bergstermann, Charles Beyer, Schray & Sons and F. J. Fillmore say it was a great Christmas. Max Herzog, too, had all he could do. His showhouse looked pretty all week.

In the north end Adolph J. Bentzen, A. Brix, the Ryan Floral Co., the Koenig Floral Co. and F. H. Meinhardt also had one of the best Christmas seasons in years.

A. Jablonsky, of Olivette, Mo., has a variegated Enchantress with rose-pink stripes, which should bring him much if it has the habits of its parent.

The National Clock & Electric Mfg. Co. has had a big year's business in their temperature alarms. Their trade among the florists throughout the country has been large, and they expect a big business for 1911.

The Nicotine Mfg. Co. reports a large business last year. J. J. B.

PACIFIC COAST.

Sacramento, Cal.—M. H. Ebel recently made a business trip to San Francisco and Menlo Park.

Newport, Wash.—Ralph D. Kaler is building a greenhouse here and will grow flowers for the trade.

Los Angeles, Cal.—The purchaser was not the only one who inspected the Christmas holly this year before the sale was complete. Where the purchaser was looking for berries, the county horticultural commissioner was looking for scale.

Seattle, Wash.—L. P. Walz has sold his downtown business, at 1608 Second avenue, and will concentrate his affairs at his rose gardens, 2320 Forty-second street. At the date of this report, December 16, he and Mrs. Walz were making preparations for an extended trip through California.

Redlands, Cal.—The City Nurseries, of which Sidney Hockridge is the general manager, have opened a store on Citrus avenue, adjoining the Citizens' National Bank building. The front part of the room has been fitted up for the flower business, and the remaining space will be used for the handling of a complete line of seeds. A stock of horticultural tools and other requisites will also be carried.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

The Market.

Although this was written within a few days of Christmas, it was yet too early to tell much about how the trade would be. Owing to the mild winter and the entire absence of frost, there was little that was scarce in the flower line. An exception might be made of roses, for there was but a fair quantity of these on hand and they were not entirely of first quality. The price of all stock was slightly lower than that of last season, and it was not expected that last year's selling rates would be duplicated.

The greatest demand up to this writing seems to be for roses, flowering plants and ferns in pots. Azaleas, poinsettias, cyclamens, heather and begonias are all moving nicely. There are plenty of cut poinsettias from the south, and they are of first quality throughout. The local grown stock is principally in pots, and they are a shade lower than last season. Carnations are much cheaper than they have ever been at Christmas time and do not seem to be selling as rapidly as they should. Violets are plentiful and cheap, and the same can be said of valley and daffodils. California red berries and other kinds of green goods are making up quite a portion of the bulk of the sales of many of the smaller dealers.

Christmas Trade.

Business was fully up to that of last year. There was a large supply of all seasonable plants and cut flowers, and all sold equally well. Ferns, azaleas and poinsettias were fine, as were many other smaller plants. Some local dealers were short of roses and carnations and had to buy heavily from Chicago. The weather was fine, but cold enough to necessitate the wrapping of all plants, and this entails much extra work. American Beauties sold as high as $14 per dozen and other roses at $1.50 to $4. Carnations brought $1.25 and $2.

Various Notes.

The William Blackman Floral Co. did an immense Christmas trade and seemed to be far ahead of last year. The whole force was kept continually at work, wrapping up plants, boxing cut flowers and delivering. Their stock of plants was excellent and varied, azaleas and poinsettias being in greatest demand. They had about enough cut flowers of their own, but had to buy quite heavily of other stock. They sold Beauties as high as $14, other roses at $3 and $4 and carnations at $1.50 to $2. Lily of the valley, bulbous stock, violets, etc., were in great demand.

Ben Kramer thinks trade was about the same as last year. He had a lot of fine ferns, azaleas and other plants and they were in demand. He ran short of cut flowers, especially carnations, and could have sold 500 more. He got $1.50 per dozen for carnations and $12 for Beauties. He had several large single orders, one being for fifteen dozen carnations. Besides his Christmas trade, he had considerable funeral work, which kept him rushed till the last day.

Julius Niednagel & Sons enjoyed the largest trade they ever had. They had all kinds of pot plants, and load after load went out all day Saturday and at night. Three wagons were kept busy. Their cut of roses and carnations was heavy, especially roses, and of these about 2,000 were Killarney, all on long stems. The demand seemed to be for the better grade of stock, with more calls for $3 and $4 roses than for cheaper stock. Hyacinths and Paper Whites sold especially well in pots. They had some fine Lorraine begonias and azaleas and cleaned up on these, as well as on the best poinsettias.

Louis Fritsch reports his business as double that of last year. He had not expected such a rush of trade and had to hustle around and get some stock at the last minute.

Royston & Fenton sold all the roses they had and could have sold as many more.

J. C. Elsperman had a big trade. He was extra busy all the week with funeral work.

Nellie Goodge used about thirty cases of holly. E. L. F.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting. St. Louis, June, 1911.

In another part of this issue of The Review, under the head of "Derry, N. H.," will be found an account of the burning of the mill of the Benjamin Chase Co., well known to nurserymen as manufacturers of wooden plant labels.

The Levels & Okonko Orchards Co., of Martinsburg, W. Va., has been incorporated, with a capital of $100,000, for the purpose of carrying on nursery, agricultural and horticultural business. The incorporators are J. C. McKown, of Paw Paw, W. Va.; H. A. Downs, J. M. Small, H. B. Shoemaker and Dudley Harley, of Martinsburg.

NEW PROTECTIVE ASSOCIATION.

The Southern Nurserymen's Protective Association was organized at a meeting of nurserymen at Knoxville, Tenn., December 15. Three sessions were held at the Appalachian hotel. Following the preliminary business the following officers were selected for the ensuing year: President, J. C. Miller, of Rome, Ga.; secretary, A. I. Smith, of Knoxville.

The organization had its inception at the meeting of the Southern Nurserymen's Association last spring, at which time an association of this nature was suggested as being a necessity to the welfare of the retail nurserymen of the south, of whom it is composed. In the new organization are represented nearly all the southern retail nurserymen, and those using road agents for the sale of their goods.

Those at the meeting were J. C. Miller, of J. C. Miller & Sons, Rome, Ga.; H. N. Camp, Jr., of the Southern Nursery Co., Winchester, Tenn.; Mr. Wilson, of the Standard Nursery Co., Knoxville; A. I. Smith, of the Knoxville Nursery Co.; G. E. Nickles, of the Globe Nursery Co., Bristol, Tenn.; O. Joe Howard, of the J. Van Lindley Nursery Co., Pomona, N. C.; John A. Young, of Greensboro, N. C.; W. T. Hood, of the W. T. Hood Co., Richmond, Va.; W. A. Easterly, of the Easterly Nursery Co., Cleveland, Tenn.

TREES AND CHARACTER.

Wm. A. Peterson, proprietor of Peterson Nursery, Chicago, who devotes no small part of his time and means to religious and welfare work, issued a brochure for Christmas distribution, entitled "Trees and Character," in which an oak describes the vicissitudes of its life and the author compares them to the exigencies that develop character in man. He concludes: "Unfortunate tendencies in a tree may go so far

A BLUE ROSE
The Greatest Rose Novelty of the Century
It flowered with us this season and was greatly admired.
The New Rambler (Violet Blue), hailed by the German rose growers as the forerunner of a genuinely cornflower blue rose, is a seedling of Crimson Rambler, very vigorous and hardy, and free blooming.

that it is impossible to remedy them; but a penitent prodigal son will ever find, even to the last, a forgiving Heavenly Father. The old-fashioned idea has been exploded that a young man must sow a certain quantity of wild oats to give him a correct proportion of the things of this world. Dragging your fair name through moral filth and contamination may make you wise; but it not only unfits you for a keen appreciation of the best in this life but handicaps you in the race for the life to come. So, in God's kingdom, any one who will surrender himself fully and freely to the Heavenly Father's plans will develop to the uttermost a well-rounded character."

DERRY, N. H.

At an early hour on Sunday morning, December 11, the building occupied by the Benjamin Chase Co., of this city, was burned to the ground. The company is well known in the trade on account of one of the products of its factory, wooden plant labels. When the fire broke out, it was evident from the first that the large mill was doomed. The fire and smoke first issued from the northeast corner and then enveloped the entire building. The attention of the firemen was therefore directed to the saving of adjoining property.

The main building of the plant was 40x85 feet and four stories high. To this was attached a 3-story wing, 30x40, and a 2-story wing, 18x20. Stored in the mill, and burned along with it, were about 100,000 feet of kiln-dried lumber, varying in price from $75 to $110 per thousand feet, besides a quantity of finished products that were awaiting shipment. It is estimated that the real property loss will exceed $25,000 or $30,000, which is only partly covered by insurance. The loss in addition to this, of the time in rebuilding and getting into operation again, will be considerable. Preparations for rebuilding were begun at once.

Twenty-seven years ago a mill that stood upon the same site was destroyed by fire. It had been built several years before by Benjamin Chase, when he commenced the manufacture of reed ribs, etc. He rebuilt the burned structure and resumed business. In 1893 his nephew, John C. Chase, who was living in North Carolina, became identified with the concern and a few years later took the general charge of the business. In 1907, after successfully conducting the business for an even forty years, Benjamin Chase disposed of it to the Benjamin Chase Co., which had been recently incorporated, and, becoming president of the company, retired from active connection with the work. John C. Chase became treasurer and general manager, and Charles B. Chase assistant manager, the last named having been in the employ of the concern since 1890.

Watertown, Conn.—Henry A. Roeske is using a part of one of his greenhouses as a winter home for his chickens, and this fact seems to have attracted the attention of the daily newspapers, several of which have contained announcements similar to this: "Mr. Roeske has screened off part of a greenhouse and placed his pullets in the warm enclosure. The pullets scratch in ten inches of soil on the cement floor and, seeing flowers in bloom through the screen, think it is summer and go to laying."

A GRAND NEW CARNATION

outclasses everything heretofore grown in the dark pink section. Won first honors in the 100 class for best dark pink at the A. C. S. meeting, Pittsburg, January, 1910, also at the Chicago Flower Show, November, 1909.

It is a pure, bright, dark pink of even shade, size 3½ inches, an early and continuous bloomer, brings fully 25 per cent more flowers to the plant than Lawson at its best; flowers well shaped on long, wiry stems; calyx does not split. It is a good shipper, and the cuttings root easy.

Price, per 100, $12.00; 25 at 100 rate; per 1000, $100.00; 250 at 1000 rate; per 5000, $400.00.

FALL RIVER, MASS.

In one of the worst fires that have visited the business center of this city in many years, the flower stores of Frank Buffington and Chatterton Warburton, in the Merchants block on Main street, were damaged to the extent of several thousand dollars on the night of December 23. Not only was there considerable damage to the stocks themselves, but the loss of business at the Christmas holiday added greatly to the aggregate loss. While the flames did not actually reach either store, the heat and smoke caused a considerable loss.

Patrick H. Sullivan, manager of the Buffington store, was busy attending to customers when smoke began to fill the store. Everybody hurried out and Mr. Sullivan was going too, when the telephone rang. Taking the receiver, the manager was given an order for some carnations. The customer had some directions to give and Mr. Sullivan was taking them with accustomed patience, when the smoke became so dense that he felt he couldn't take any further chances.

"Would you mind calling me again in the morning?" suggested the manager, in that pleasant, mild voice he perpetually wears.

"Well—what for?" queried the customer, in surprise.

"The place is afire," replied the manager, "and I've got to leave you. G-o-o-d n-i-g-h-t." And he joined the throng in the street in a moment.

Frank Buffington furnished the decorations for the coming-out party of Miss Florence Chase at Music hall, December 23. These comprised hemlock and fir boughs, massed with laurel, holly, mistletoe and Richmond roses.

COLUMBUS, O.

Christmas Trade.

Christmas trade was heavy, both in plants and cut flowers. Ferns and palms moved well, but blooming plants took the lead. Azaleas, begonias, poinsettias and cyclamens were the main standbys in blooming stock, and they sold readily and brought good prices. Cut poinsettias sold well, especially for church decorations.

The stock of cut flowers was about equal to the demand. Roses were in good demand and the quality was excellent. Beauties sold well, considering that prices were rather high; they might have moved much better if the prices had been a little lower. Carnations took the lead, as usual. The supply was heavy, but they were about all cleaned up and brought good prices, especially the red sorts, which brought $2 per dozen straight through. The most of the carnations brought $1.50 per dozen, while a few in the smaller grades sold for $1 per dozen.

Violets were in good demand; though the supply was heavy, they were about all cleaned up. Valley and sweet peas found a ready sale. Some extra fine sweet peas were on the market, and brought fancy prices. Smilax and greens sold well and there was a good supply on hand.

Holly moved well; there was some good holly on the market and some that was exceedingly poor. There was a great scarcity of wreathing and much more of it could have been sold. Mistletoe moved well. Christmas trees were at a great premium and people took trees that had the tops cut out and paid good prices for them; even the little branches were worked off. Holly wreaths were cleaned up in good shape and were of good quality. Moss wreaths, with immortelle and boxwood wreaths, moved nicely.

All the craft say it was one of the best Christmas seasons for years.

FINE FERNS

Ready For Immediate Retail Sale

We have an exceptionally fine and large stock of Ferns in the following varieties—first-class plants of exceedingly good value—plants that will please the most critical buyers, both in regard to quality and value.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima (improved). The finest of this type—never showing a Boston frond; has not reverted in the last four years. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.; 8-in., $12.00 per doz.; large specimens in 12-in. pans, $3.00 to $5.00 each.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima Compacta. This bears the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii does to Bostoniensis. It is a dwarf, compact plant, especially fine in the small sizes. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scholzeli. Fine plants, 3½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in. pans, $6.00 per doz.; 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis. Extra strong plants, 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scottii. 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Small Ferns for Fern Pans. Best and hardiest varieties, assorted: Pteris Mayii, Wimsetti, Adiantoides, Aspidium Tsussimense, Crytomium Falcatum, etc. Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, $3.50 per 100.

CROTONS. Nice assortment, well colored, 5-in., $9.00 per dozen.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Last week was an extremely busy one for the florists. The working up of holly and other seasonable decorative material kept the retailers busy the first half of the week, while the plant men made their final deliveries of plants for the holidays. At the close, of course, all those connected with the wholesale and retail distributing end of the trade exerted themselves to the utmost.

As a whole, the supply of stock exceeded expectations. The demand was about equal to it in most lines, for it took up the good stock as fast as it arrived. On Friday some of the retailers received telegrams from up-state growers quoting flowers at much less than the regular Christmas prices.

The supply of roses was ample. In fact, the growers seem just to have got their crops in for the holidays. The request for Richmond and Rhea Reid exceeded the supply. More pink, too, could have been used had they been forthcoming. Of these, Killarney deserves special mention, both in respect to the large quantity and the exceptional quality. American Beauties were sufficient in numbers and quality to meet all requirements.

Not nearly enough carnations arrived to fill the orders of the retailers. All good, long stock brought top prices, at which many retailers found it impossible to do business on a 100 per cent basis. The red and Enchantress varieties led in carnations.

Other stock arrived regularly and was, in general, enough for the orders. New York double violets were in large supply. Lily of the valley, while much of it was sold, did not clean up entirely. Narcissi were long and well flowered. Roman hyacinths and stevias were offered in quantities. Longiflorums and callas were rather short in numbers. There were enough poinsettias for requirements. The supply of all green goods was ample.

The plant business was good this year. Begonias, azaleas, potted poinsettias and ferns were most sought for. All the stores cleaned up nicely on them. C. H. H.

Port Ewen, N. Y.—Lafayette Terpening and Samuel Tinnie, who reside in adjoining homes on Salem street, will build a greenhouse on their property and will begin in the spring to grow violets for the market.

GERANIUMS

A fine lot of young Geranium plants, just right to grow along into the finest kind of plants for spring sales. The finest varieties in their respective colors for bedding.

Marvel, dark red; A. Ricard, orange scarlet; Decorator, the improved Ricard; M. de Castellane, cherry red; Jean Viaud, pink; Castries, pink; Beaute de Poitevine, salmon; Countess de Harcourt, white. From 2-inch pots, $2.50 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

PELARGONIUMS.

PANSY GERANIUM, MRS. LAYAL.
This beautiful pelargonium is of the easiest growth, dwarf in habit, and literally covered with flowers all the time; and as it requires little or no attention, it is invaluable as a window plant. The coloring and marking of the flowers are most extraordinary, light pink, white, dark purple, black, etc., almost rivaling the pansy in uniqueness of flower. It is this combination of coloring which obtained for it the popular name of pansy geranium. Strong plants, $5.00 per 100.
J. W. Davis, 225 W. 16th St., Davenport, Iowa.

Pelargoniums. 2½-in., $5.00 100; 3½-in., bushy stock, $8.00 100. Clean and ready for a shift. Our selection from 80 best new and old varieties. No list. Cash, please.

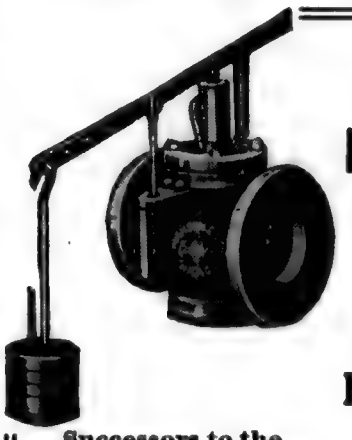
Greenhouse Heating.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

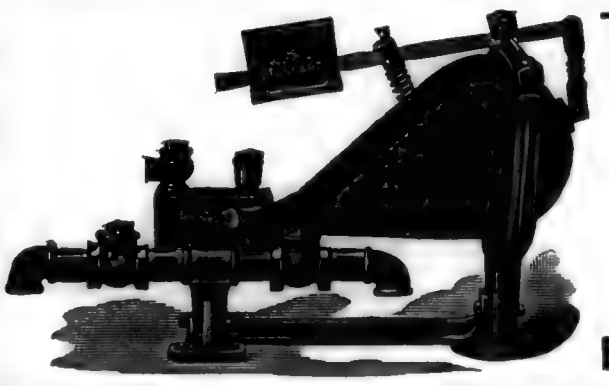
We are planning to build one more greenhouse, 28x80, here in eastern Kansas. We now have four houses, of the following dimensions: two, each 18x100, one 22x85 and one 15x65. Our boiler is a 40-inch steam tubular, with thirty-two 3-inch flues, each twelve feet long, and a 2½-inch steam outlet. Can we heat the fifth house also with this one boiler, carrying a carnation temperature, in weather about 5 degrees below zero? Last winter we went through weather 18 degrees below zero, with our four houses, and this seemed to be no load at all for the boiler. J. W. P.

From the description the boiler seems to be of about thirty-two horse-power, and it would appear to be amply large enough to furnish a carnation temperature for the houses described, even at 10 degrees below zero. While it would be better to have a 3-inch opening, the smaller size will answer if the distance is not too great from the boiler to where the feed pipe for the first house is taken off.



TO IMPROVE THE CIRCULATION.

I have installed a Honeywell generator in my hot water system and I have put it on the return pipe, close to the boiler and between it and the expansion tank. In house No. 1 the pipes run on an up grade around the house and return the same way, with the same grade down for the returns. At the return elbow a 1-inch pipe is attached, leading to the tank.



In house No. 2 the flows run overhead to the farthest and highest point, where there are two air-cocks, and return in manifolds. It is on the return in this house that I have put the generator, and I find that the 1-inch pipes from the highest point in house No. 1, which are under the beds, give great expansion. Can I feed the boiler with the pipe the generator is on? If so, I can get along all right. If I cannot feed the boiler on this line, will it be satisfactory to plug up the 1-inch pipe in house No. 1 and put in a pipe from the tank to the bottom of the boiler? My boiler is a sectional Peerless. The circulation is fairly good, but I think—in fact, I am sure—that I can get better results. C. W. B.

The circulation in both houses will be improved if the flow pipes can be raised so that the highest point will be near the boiler. This should be an easy matter in house No. 2 and can probably be arranged without much trouble in house No. 1. If this is done, merely connect the highest point of each flow pipe with the expansion tank. It will answer, however, if one pipe only is connected and an air-cock placed on the highest point of the other flow pipe.

Without knowing more about the size and number of the pipes in the houses, it is not possible to give a definite

WHAT THE USERS SAY

Kroeschell versus Cast Iron

I have one of your new 1910 model Kroeschell Boilers, and same has proven very satisfactory. We have no trouble to keep temperatures in the coldest weather. We fire once or twice during the day, and once at night, and have had the best satisfaction I have ever experienced in a boiler. Formerly I had two cast iron boilers; one cracked and I took both of these boilers out. My coal bill with the cast iron boilers ran from $195 to $207 per season during the past seven years. This year, with your boiler and soft coal, my coal bill was only $103 and I still have some coal left. Your boiler is the best and cheapest on the market, not alone for the price, but also in fuel saving. I am very glad that you are so well known in Buffalo, N. Y. I have never heard anything but praise, in which I join heartily. Wishing you every success, I remain, MAX BUEHLER, Forks, N. Y. opinion regarding the efficiency of the heating system. Unless the piping is run downhill, as just recommended, the plan of connecting the expansion tank to one of the returns near the heater would answer the purpose desired.

HEAT FROM HOT AIR FLUES.

I have a greenhouse almost completed, 21x40. It is ten feet six inches high at the ridge and five feet high at the eaves, with twenty inches of glass in the sides. The walls are made of 1-inch boards and the cracks are covered with strips four inches wide and one inch thick. I can not get my boiler before next fall and I am planning to try to heat this house with a furnace, running two flues from it, one under each side bench, which will be three feet wide and thirty inches high. The center bed will be a solid ground bed. In building the flues I will use brick for the first fifteen feet from the furnace, and then 8-inch tile. When I get to the rear end of the house, should I run a stack up from each flue separately or run both of them into one stack?

I will use coal for fuel and will want a night temperature of 45 to 50 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees below zero. I will use the raised beds at the sides for pot plants and vegetable plants, while the center bed will be used for growing lettuce. I am located in eastern Ohio.

G. C. H.

While the results would be more satisfactory if hot water or steam could be used from the start, fairly good results can be obtained by means of a flue built as proposed. Care must be taken, however, to have the joints perfectly tight, so that no coal gas can escape. If the wind could always be depended upon to blow in the same direction as the flues run, they could be joined to one stack, but it will be safer, at any rate, if a separate stack is built for each flue.

The Market.

Christmas weather was delightful, a little cold, but no snow or ice, so that delivery was easy and everyone enjoyed a most excellent trade.

American Beauties were plentiful, with prices somewhat lower than last year, and there were enough tea roses for everybody. Carnations were in good supply and first-class red sold for $2 per dozen, with sufficient for all demands. Sweet peas were plentiful and had a good call and violets sold well.

There was little use for hyacinths, which was lucky, as they were scarce. Narcissi sold well, but the supply was short, while the reverse was true of valley.

Holly was so scarce that by Friday it was difficult to find enough to go around. There were more calls for wreaths than ever before and lycopodium was exceedingly scarce, with the prices away up. Wild smilax was in good supply. Trees sold better than ever before and the supply was light, although a carload of cedar trees arrived late Friday and prices had to be cut in half on them.

Potted plants had the lead with some florists, while others had a better cut flower trade. Made-up plants sold well everywhere. Begonias had a good call at fair prices, but some of the stores made the mistake of marking prices on plants too high and found themselves heavily overstocked. W. H. H.

FURNISHED in continuous lengths of 500 feet. An exceptionally high grade hose manufactured with a woven jacket insertion instead of cotton duck, and with specially selected rubber in the inner tube and cover.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

ST. PAUL.

The Market.

Christmas has come and gone once more and the average florist is pleased with results. Everything was conducive to a good trade. The weather for two or three weeks was mild and bright, bringing out the blooms to perfection. People with money to spend spent it liberally with the florists.

On Friday the weather suddenly turned cold, and 10 degrees below zero was recorded Saturday morning. In consequence of this, there were some complaints of frozen plants and flowers, but the temperature moderated Saturday evening, snow fell and Christmas morning was ideal.

There was a good sale on greens. Lycopodium was in short supply and wild smilax was sold in its place, making a shortage on that before the week was ended. Holly was of excellent quality and in great demand, every one seeming to want a holly wreath.

Plants sold readily and everything salable was closed out early. Poinsettias were easily the leaders. Cyclamens, azaleas, peppers, cherries, ardisias and anything in the plant line went. The sale of baskets filled with plants was unprecedented; the prices ranged from $3 to $10 each. Fancy wreaths made of ruscus, hemlock, cones, Mahonia, etc., were in good demand and sold readily at $3 to $5 each.

Various Notes.

We just learn by the morning paper that the Kusik-Eckhardt Co., the supply house of Minneapolis, was burned out December 25. We regret to learn this and trust the loss is not a heavy one.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A NEYRON WREATH.

How Georgia retailers can rise to the demand for large funeral designs is shown by the accompanying illustration. This is a wreath on easel made by H. G. Evans, now in charge of J. F. Ammann's store at Alton, Ill. At the time, he was employed as designer by the Idlehour Nurseries at Macon, Ga. The roses are Paul Neyron, grown outdoors. The deep rose color of the flowers and the green of the cycas made a pleasing combination.

MAKING THE STORE ATTRACTIVE.

Some Decorative Hints.

The general appearance of the store, inside and out, has as much to do with local trade as with transient customers, and the new flower buyers are sure to be attracted to the place which has the most inviting aspect and the greatest individuality of method in display.

There is as much in attention to numerous small details about the place as in any one prominent feature. Some time ago the writer visited a number of stores in succession in different cities, and the most common fault of all was the lack of the requisite cleanliness and neatness. Either the window or some portion of the store was neglected or dirty. Empty pots, or vases of old water, or discarded boxes are enough to spoil the looks of the whole place. And it takes the help of the whole force to keep the store looking trim and neat. This much accomplished, how shall we, with a moderate outlay of time and material, make our store the most attractive in the place? For a flower store, of all places, ought to be always beautiful, at least the front room.

Seasonable Helps at Slight Cost.

There are two commodities which will contribute to this improvement of the premises, at the same time reducing the expense to a minimum. One is the use of flowers which are past their prime, and the other is the liberal use of native foliage and flowers, especially the foliage in the various stages, according to the season. To illustrate: When the autumn foliage is in its glory, the whole store can be decorated for a day's work in gathering, transporting and placing, and some of these oxidized beauties will retain their color and form for weeks. Then, later in the season, at holiday times, there are the various conifers, which can be worked up in wreaths, garlands and forest effects. Then there are the cones themselves, which, in garlands and bunches tied with scarlet ribbon, make fine decorations for the wreath, while the tiny ones in strings may be used for portieres and tapestries. Holly berries strung in this way keep their color till nearly spring.

Cover the unsightly spots and partition off the unseemly corners with these decorative features. This work will serve a double purpose; besides making the store more attractive, it will suggest to people that you have good ideas about decorative work, in case they need some work of this kind done. From the same material screens for the back of the window can be made, without much outlay of money. Then there are cat-tails, wild grasses and all such materials, on which we trample any time we take a walk in the woods.

The other asset was left-over flowers. According to their race, color, or previous condition of servitude, these should be placed in more or less prominent places about the store. After a day's service as first-class stock, and having suffered more or less from handling, roses and chrysanthemums are ready for an over-night soak. If plunged deep in water, flower and stem, and left there for about twelve hours, they may come out fit for sale next day, or at least will do quite well for store decoration. The chrysanthemums may need the outer petals trimmed, but the roses, even if full-blown, will stand for two or three days in some decorative feature.

I once knew of a store which had a low partition separating the salesroom from the workshop. There was a wide ledge on the top of the partition, on which could be set good sized pots, jardinieres or baskets. It was kept decorated all the time with plants or cut flowers, and proved an attractive decorative feature and a continual demonstration for customers. All of the full-blown and weak-stemmed roses not needed for other purposes were held for this place and they certainly paid for their keep. No one entering the store could miss this display. Killarney roses were one of the specialties for this purpose, and their excellent keeping qualities and extraordinary beauty of color and form were displayed to advantage on this particular place.

If the quality of this left-over stock will not bear close inspection, wire it and put it in some retired place or well up above the eye-line.

Window, Desk and Counter.

Then there is the window, where the best stock must be arranged in the best way. Either one good feature alone, or several which are parts of the whole, may be a good plan for window displays. To illustrate: One large basket of yellow chrysanthemums, with a suitable background, is a better window feature than a number of medium sized baskets of promiscuous colors, set here and there merely to fill the space. Or one large vase with a number of tiny vases placed around it in a circle, with light garlands or ribbons connecting each small vase with the center vase, all filled with choice flowers of one kind and color, will attract a better class of flower buyers than a window which is simply filled with a lot of vases of various colors and kinds of flowers.

Wreath of Paul Neyron Roses.

If a small desk with cards and envelopes is kept for customers' use, always have a dainty vase or basket of flowers on it.

A few little counter pieces often sell themselves as well as the other flowers. Small baskets, that have never before seen the outside of the case, may be gradually sold out if tastefully displayed in this way on the counter or desk.

Arrangement of the Lights.

The kind of lights and their arrangement in the store, and especially in the window, may of themselves be either helps or hindrances. In the average window a chandelier is a nuisance. It occupies space often needed for high decorations; it interferes with the reflecting space of the mirror, and, when lighted, is more conspicuous than the display itself. Ceiling light, or reflected and subdued light, is much the best for the window and, in fact, for the whole store.

Some outside decoration for a store shows a public spirit in a shop keeper, and also one who is wide-awake to his own advantage. Many florists are allowing department stores, hotels and restaurants to go far ahead of them in this respect.

It is possible to have an outside decoration of some kind nearly all the year around, either with window boxes, hanging baskets, bay trees and boxwoods, or decorated pergola and balcony entrances. In fall and winter, when the growing plants are out of commission, branches of autumn foliage, wild smilax, pine trees, garlands and wreaths, or cone decorations could be maintained most of the time. There are many fancy conifers which could be set in the window boxes, and at holiday times these outside points will be good display places for Christmas trees, samples of wreathing and garlands. In the late fall, fill them with blooming chrysanthemum plants. In summer the number of pretty decorative plants is legion. According to the climate, one can have a wide range of bedding plants to choose from, which will keep up a continual round of bloom from early spring till the first hard frost.

In Separate Windows.

Many stores are arranged with two small or medium sized windows, instead of one large window. There is at least one advantage to be gained by this arrangement; a larger variety of flowers and colors can be displayed at one time. Colors which would jar each other in close quarters in one window, could thus be displayed separately to each one's advantage.

A good point for display in the store is one directly opposite the front entrance, as already described in the instance of the decorated partition. Arrange a group of specimen plants at such a point, or a tall vase with some choice, large flowers, and several good ferns grouped about it on the floor. If convenient, hang a basket about this point and fill the inside pan with sprays of asparagus or smilax, letting part of the strands hang, while others are caught to either side or trained upward.

Sometimes we are inclined to be dissatisfied with our store rooms, as being unfit for our purposes, but we need at such moments to recall the story about the desert and what it did with the aid of a certain well-known flower.

ANNUALS FOR CUT FLOWERS.

Please publish a list of the best annuals for cut flowers, which may be grown from spring-sown seed.

W. J. B.

The two most valuable annuals for cutting are sweet peas and asters. Quite a long succession may be had of each. A few excellent asters are: Queen of the Market, very early; Semple's, Victoria, American Branching and Comet. A short selection of excellent sweet peas is as follows: Dorothy Eckford, pure white; Countess of Spencer, clear pink; Helen Lewis, orange pink; King Edward VII., scarlet; Frank Dolby, lavender; Mrs. Routzahn Spencer, delicate pink. Of course, mixed seed can be used, but bunches of separate colors are more pleasing.

Some other useful annuals are: Zinnia elegans, ten weeks' stocks, larkspurs, lupines, salpiglossis, candytuft, mignonette (should be sown early), Hunnemannia fumariæfolia, Shirley poppies, nasturtiums, Gypsophila elegans, cosmos, Centaurea Cyanus, Centaurea moschata, coreopsis and scabious. Some of the foregoing should be started under glass to insure an early crop, but all can be sown outdoors if preferred.

COLEUS SHED THEIR LEAVES.

I wish you would let me know what is the reason my coleus leaves wilt and drop off. They are in 6-inch pots, in a temperature of from 65 to 75 degrees. They seem to do well for a while and then go back in a day. J. G.

Either dryness at the root or an excess of water will cause the coleus to shed leaves at this season of the year. The temperature mentioned should be sufficiently high to keep them in good shape. It hardly pays to carry old plants along in the size of pots named. Better get in a good batch of cuttings and let the old stock break away with another crop, which in turn can be taken off, after which the old plants are as well discarded, as you can get plenty of tops from the young plants to work up the needed stock.

BOOMING BAY TREES.

Under separate cover, same mail today, we are sending our booklet, "Just Bays," which goes to about 3,000 of our customers. Our business in bay trees is increasing annually in rapid strides. They are being used more and more for formal gardens, roof gardens, and for decoration around florists' and nurserymen's offices. We of course get this trade annually through wholesale houses and our object in sending this booklet is to induce these wholesale houses to push the sale of bay trees more through their salesmen, travelers and catalogues. We suggest that you note the receipt of this booklet in your reading columns, as our trade with wholesale houses stimulates advertising in your columns by them.

ILLINOIS FLORISTS TO MEET.

The Illinois State Horticultural Society, with the coöperation of the Illinois State Florists' Association, the Cook County Truck Growers' Association, the Illinois Outdoor Improvement Association, the Lake Forest Horticultural Society, and the Horticultural Department of the University of Illinois, will hold a ten-day horticultural institute at the University of Illinois, Champaign, Ill., beginning Tuesday, January 31, and ending Friday, February 10, 1911. During the first seven days, the general plan for each morning and afternoon session is a lecture or talk occupying about one hour, followed by a practical demonstration, laboratory exercise or discussion lasting from one to two hours. The evening programs will consist largely of lectures illustrated by the stereopticon. In this way various topics of vital importance to horticulturists will be presented in a thorough manner. The last three days of the institute will be devoted to the annual meetings of the Illinois State Horticultural Society, Illinois State Florists' Association and other horticultural organizations. There will be exhibits of fruits, vegetables and flowers; also of spray machines, orchard heaters and other accessories to successful horticulture. Throughout the entire convention, the various topics will be handled by men who are recognized as experts in their respective lines. Anyone interested in horticulture in any way is invited to attend the institute, and participate in the discussions.

The program for the meeting of the State Florists' Association is as follows:

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 8.

10:00 a. m. Preliminary Session. Appointment of Judges and Committees.

2:00 p. m. President's Address. Report of Secretary. Report of Treasurer. Report of Advisory Committee for the Experiment Station. Question Box. Business Session.

Evening. Banquet.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 9.

9:00 a. m. "Live Issues for the Florist," J. C. Vaughan, Chicago. "Some New Things," E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind. "Work at the Experimental Greenhouses," H. B. Dorner, Urbana. Reports of Committees. Miscellaneous Business. Election of Officers. Adjournment.

Exhibits are to be staged by noon, February 8, and to remain until 12 o'clock, February 10. Write J. F. Ammann, secretary, Edwardsville, for particulars. The exhibition will be open to the public February 8 and 9, from 3 p. m. to 10 p. m.

During the ten days there will be many features of special interest to those in the trade. Some of them are as follows:

"Temperature and Moisture Requirements of Different Vegetables," Prof. J. W. Lloyd, University of Illinois, 1:30 p. m., January 31.

"The Parts of Plants and Their Functions," Dr. C. F. Hottes, University of Illinois, 3:00 p. m., January 31.

"Insects," illustrated lecture by Dr. S. A. Forbes, State Entomologist, 7:30 p. m., January 31.

"Insects of the Greenhouse and Their Extermination," John J. Davis, Assistant to State Entomologist, 10:30 a. m., February 1.

"The Nature of Parasitic Fungi and Their Influence on the Host Plants," Prof M. B. Thomas, Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Ind., 1:30 p. m., February 1.

"Ornamental Shrubs and Trees Used in Landscape Gardening," Bruno Nehrling, Normal, 1:30 p. m., February 2.

"The Nursery Business as Related to a Demand Created by Professional Landscape Gardeners," A. M. Augustine, Normal, 2:00 p. m., February 2.

"Packing and Shipping Plants and Flowers," J. F. Ammann, Secretary, Edwardsville, 3:30 p. m., February 2.

"How to Plan Home Grounds," illustrated lecture by W. N. Rudd, Blue Island, 7:30 p. m., February 2.

"Methods of Plant Propagation," with demonstrations, H. B. Dorner, University of Illinois, 1:30 p. m., February 3.

"Fertilizers for Use of the Florist," H. B. Dorner, 10:30 a. m., February 4.

"Illinois Greenhouses and Their Products," Philip J. Foley, Chicago, 7:30 p. m., February 4.

"Floral Decoration," with practical demonstration, Miss Emily Dorner, Lafayette, Ind., 3:00 p. m., February 6.

"Greenhouse Management," C. L. Washburn, Hinsdale, 9:00 a. m., February 7.

"The Home Garden," Edward O. Orpet, Lake Forest, 10:30 a. m., February 7.

"Native Trees, Shrubs and Flowers, Their Usefulness for the Embellishment of Home and Public Grounds," E. Bollinger, Lake Forest, 7:30 p. m,. February 7.

"Street Trees of Illinois and General Phases of Civic Improvement," J. A. Pettigrew, Superintendent of Parks, Boston, Mass., 8:30 p. m., February 7.

"The Technique of Hybridizing and Crossing," Prof. C. S. Crandall, University of Illinois, 7:30 p. m., February 8.

"Landscape Gardening," illustrated, George E. Hooker, Chicago, 8:30 p. m., February 8.

Illustrated pruning, Prof. John Craig, Ithaca, N. Y., 1:30 p. m., February 9.

STORE OF LUBLINER & TRINZ.

In Chicago when "The Syndicate" is mentioned it is to be understood that reference is made to the firm of Lubliner & Trinz, whose operations include, besides the flower store at 44 Randolph street, next door to Marshall Field & Co., a prosperous vaudeville theater in Milwaukee. Mr. Trinz is the manager of the theatrical interests of "the syndicate," while Harry Lubliner, with A. C. Spencer as his right-hand man, looks after the retail flower store interests. The accompanying illustration is reproduced from a photograph made in the first place for use on a picture post card. It will serve to give the idea that the firm has the facilities for handling a large amount of stock and anyone in the Chicago wholesale market will state that appearances are not deceitful.

Port Chester, N. Y.—Edwin C. Leonhard, of the firm of Emil Leonhard & Son, florists of North Main street, and Miss Louise Lennon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Lennon, of New York, were married last week.

NEW S. A. F. DIRECTORS.

E. Allan Peirce.

E. Allan Peirce.

E. Allan Peirce, eldest son of the Elisha N. Peirce whose forefathers left their home in England to seek their fortune in the new colony at Boston in 1630, was born in West Cambridge, Mass., May 18, 1869. After leaving school he worked with his father until 1895, when he and his brother were taken into partnership under the name of E. N. Peirce & Sons, which was reorganized under the name of Peirce Bros. after the death of E. N. Peirce, in 1905.

From a few small greenhouses this establishment has grown to a large and successful plant, containing over 200,000 feet of glass, making a specialty of carnations, chrysanthemums and lilies, of which the firm has been one of the largest growers in New England. Much glass is also devoted to plants, 6,000 cyclamens being flowered and over 10,000 azaleas forced, besides a variety of other plants.

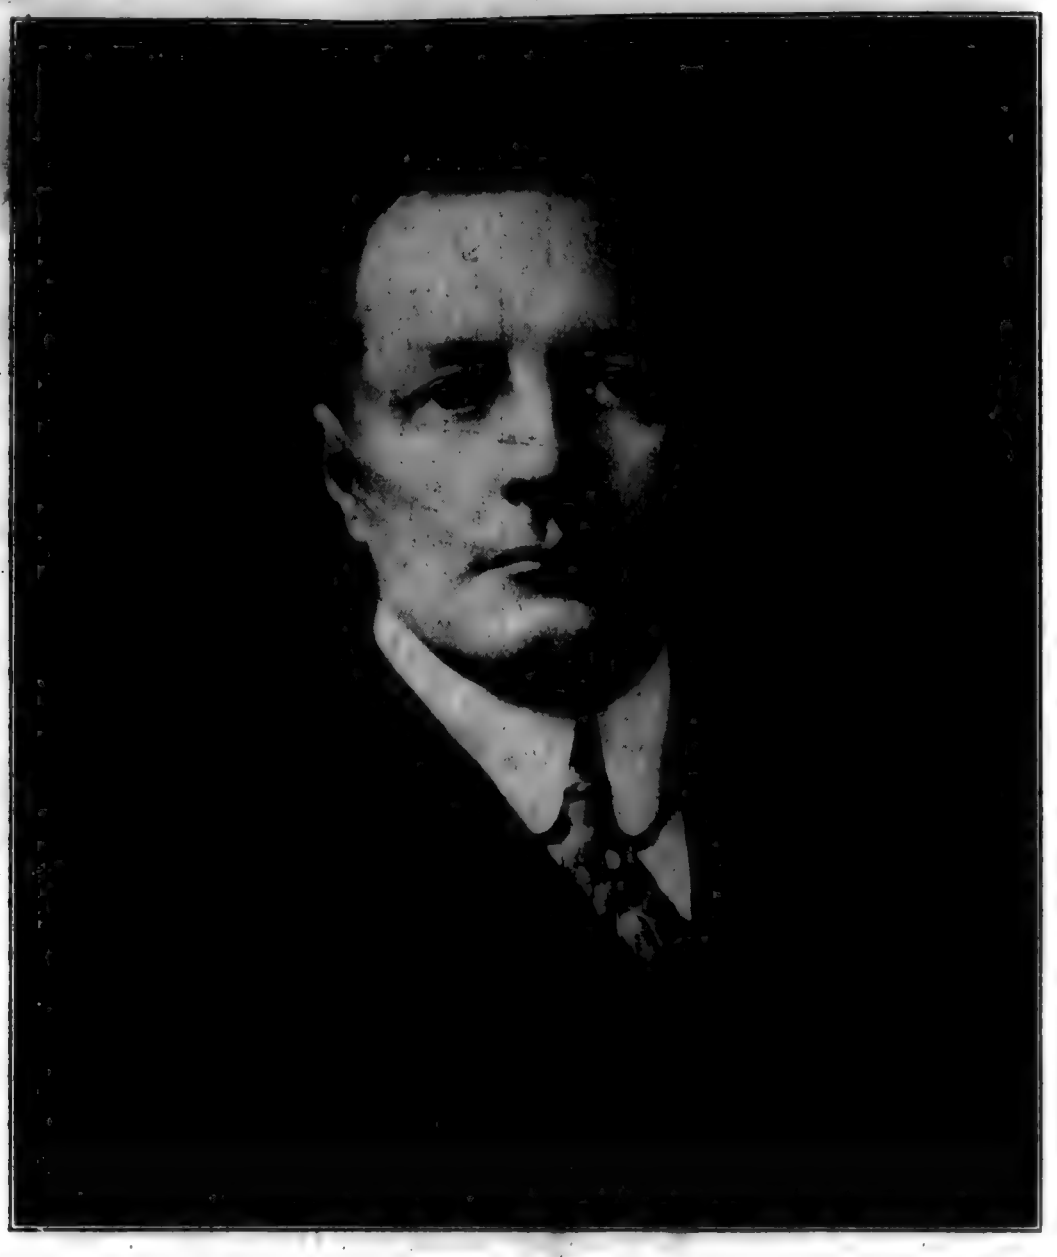
Mr. Peirce and Margaret Wendell Phillips were married in 1899 and they have an interesting family of six children, three boys and three girls. Mr. Peirce has always been interested in the militia and was a lieutenant in the Massachusetts State Militia in 1891, and served during the Spanish war in the Fifth Massachusetts U. S. V., attached to the Second U. S. army corps. He is a life member of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, member of the Boston Florists' Club, and a director in the Boston Florists' Exchange and vice-president of the American Carnation Society. He also belongs to numerous societies, clubs and patriotic organizations, and is one of the committee of five selected to have charge of arrangements for the National Flower Show to be held in Boston in March.

Harry A. Bunyard.

Harry A. Bunyard, well known as a traveling man and now general manager for Arthur T. Boddington, was born January 3, 1868, at Ashford, Kent, England. His father, Thomas Bunyard, was one of the sons of the old established firm of Thomas Bunyard & Sons, Maidstone, Kent, nurserymen, seedsmen and florists. The boy was truly born and raised in the nursery business, and the house where he first saw the light was in the Ashford Nursery, at that time a branch of the Maidstone concern. He received a common and grammar school education and at 14 years of age was apprenticed in his father's business, going from there to Sander, at St. Albans, spending considerable time in the seed and orchid departments.

In the Royal Horticultural Society's Gardens at Chiswick, London, he studied and worked under the late Archibald Barron and during that time was foreman of the orchid and herbaceous departments. While here, he competed for the prize offered by the Gardeners' Chronicle for the best essay on "Roots and Their Work," securing second prize against nearly 100 competitors.

In 1888 Mr. Bunyard arrived at Castle Garden as an emigrant, securing his first employment with Peter Henderson & Co., working at their greenhouses in Jersey City. The following year he took a position with Pitcher & Manda as herbaceous foreman, going on the road in the fall and remaining with them to their dissolution. Later he traveled for Clucas & Boddington Co., then again with Arthur T. Boddington, where he has been located for the last six years.



Mr. Bunyard has been a well-known figure at the S. A. F. conventions since the one in Buffalo in 1889, and is a life member. He is vice-president of the New York Florists' Club and secretary of the National Sweet Pea Society of America, which was organized in 1909 on his initiative, and is an active member of many other horticultural and floricultural societies.

Mr. Bunyard was the first eastern manager of the Florists' Review. He believes that a man's business should be his hobby and is also a great believer in advertising, but insists that the best advertisement is the satisfied customer. Among the other "chores" that he does at odd times is the designing of the covers for the Boddington catalogues.

ARE WE PROGRESSIVE?

[A paper by S. S. Skidelsky, of Philadelphia, Pa., read before the Philadelphia Florists' Club, January 3, 1911.]

If I could prove to the satisfaction of the craft that at the bottom of most of our failures lies the inexorable cause of ignorance, inefficiency and a disregard for the little details which go a good way toward the make-up of the sum and substance of a successful business undertaking, I should indeed be proud of my achievement. I shall not venture, however, to treat the subject in an exhaustive manner, for fear that I might fail in the attempt.

With your permission, I will read a letter which appeared a few months ago in one of our trade papers. It read: "Can you tell me what is the matter with my violets? I am enclosing a few leaves, and if you can give me any information regarding them, it will be appreciated. I have a greenhouse, 22x70, chiefly in violets, and there is something wroug with them. We also have our sweet peas in the same house, and I am enclosing some of them. They are not doing as well as they might. Will you tell me what to do with them? I am located in eastern Missouri." And this from a citizen of Missouri, who, according to the popular belief, should have been "shown" before he undertook the growing of violets and sweet peas—not after! I need hardly add that the Missourian in question represents a type not at all uncommon among us.

The Vital Point.

The question has often been asked: Are we tradesmen or professionals? If I remember rightly, a paper on this subject has been read and debated in our own club. This question had often occurred also to me, as it has to many others, and the answer, if we pause long enough to consider it from every conceivable viewpoint, leads invariably to a counter question, namely: What does it matter—tradesmen or professionals?

The mere classification of a business —and a business it is with all of us— can neither enhance nor detract from its true merit. What should really concern us most is: Are we competent, efficient and well-equipped to undertake an important work, and make a success of it without altogether trusting in our lucky stars? The Missourian who made a failure of his violets and sweet peas, and can not even tell what "ails them," might as well have undertaken the construction of an aeroplane or the preparation of a brief in an important case before the Supreme Court. The results, to be sure, would have proven equally unsatisfactory. Can we imagine, for a moment, a competent machinist, a cabinet-maker, or an attorney or a physician doing his work on the mere assumption that if he does "not succeed, he must try and try again"? Hardly. And yet this is precisely the method employed by many and many a man in the florists' trade or profession.

A Would-be Florist.

"The florists' business looked mighty good to me," remarked an ex-coal dealer in a western town, one day, to me. "I sold out my business," he continued, "and built a range of six houses. Not knowing a thing about growing, I engaged a man who claimed he knew it all, with the result that I lost heavily the first season. The season following, I hired another fellow, a carnation grower, and planted four of my houses with carnations and two with miscellaneous bedding stock. As bad luck would have it, we had a dry season, the plants made poor growth in the field, and when benched they began to wilt and to stem-rot. Neither of us knew what to do about it. Another failure stared me in the face, but I was determined to make the best of it, and so put in a batch of lettuce to help pay for the coal at least, let alone money-making. Well, sir," concluded the would-be florist, "if you know of anybody looking for greenhouses, please send him around. I'll sell out cheap."

Now, here is a case of a man who, because the florists' business looked good to him, did not at all hesitate to dispose of his coal business and to embark in something he did not know anything about.

Can we imagine a carpet-weaver or a doctor undertaking his respective work without any training, but simply because the carpet business or the medical profession looked good to him? Hardly. But horticulture, evidently, puts no obstacles in the way of the novice. On the contrary, it seems to allure coal dealers, carpenters, machinists, clerks, and, if I may change Dante's verse, it invites all—"All hope cherish, ye who enter here." Men, and women too, who know no more about flower or plant culture than they do about bridge building, often embark unhesitatingly in the florists' business, trusting to mere pluck or luck, with the result, as might be expected, of failure in the end.

Room for More Experts.

The thought has often occurred to me that but few professions or trades, if any, are being conducted on the "hit or miss" principle to so great an extent as is the florists' business. To be sure, we have competent and able growers everywhere. We can point to men who have achieved success because of their ability and foresight. There are rose growers, carnation growers, plantsmen, specialists in every branch, many of whom are well known to all of us. But such men, we must admit, constitute but a handful as compared with the number of incompetents. I will hazard the assertion that for every successful carnation or rose grower, for every man who knows not only how to do things, but why and when to do them as well, there are dozens, at least, who grope in the dark, who know nothing about soils, about the use and abuse of fertilizers, about the requirements of plants, about the proper handling of bulbs and seeds—who, in brief, are utterly unfit for the work they are doing. My own observations, during nearly a quarter of a century of road life, among all classes and conditions of florists, have led me to but one conclusion, and that is, that our business, notwithstanding the tremendous progress it has made, lacks in those fundamental elements which are so necessary in order to insure its permanent, healthy growth. The florist who makes a failure of his roses, for example, and cannot diagnose the cause of the failure in order to apply the remedy, or to nip the very failure in the bud, proves conclusively that he had not studied his trade or profession. In other words, he has not the theoretical knowledge or scientific basis upon which to work out his practical results.

The Hit or Miss Principle.

On the other hand, the man who makes a success of his plants and is

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Lily of the Valley.

After New Year's the small grower who handles a few thousand pips annually can start the new season's crop with a certainty of success. It is quite otherwise when forcing is tried a month earlier. Specialists have houses set apart for valley culture, where steady bottom heat and top heat can be maintained. The small grower must needs adopt more crude methods, but a case built over heating pipes, with the latter boarded in to hold the heat, will grow good valley. Use six inches of clean sand to place the pips in; or, if you prefer it, plant in flats of sand, to permit removal to a cooler house if necessary. The pips must be kept quite dark until the spikes are well drawn up; then admit more light by degrees, to harden the stems, give substance to the flowers and encourage leaf-growth. A bottom heat of 85 degrees, with a top heat of 55 to 60 degrees, suits valley, and if your case is of sufficient size it can also be utilized for forcing early tulips for some time.

The sand can be used over and over again, as the pips make no roots while being forced. Loam, cocoanut fiber or other composts may be used if preferred, but sand is the cleanest and best medium and the one in general use.

Poinsettias.

There is little sale for poinsettias after the holidays and it is best to lay a good supply of stock plants on their sides under one of the benches, or store them in a dry shed, where they can be kept until the time arrives to pot and start them up. Plants which have been grown in benches can be lifted and stored close together in boxes. They will keep well in any dry and frostproof shed or cellar. The demand for poinsettias has this season been extra good, many growers not having a single salable plant left. Do not throw away any stock plants. Many a florist will be glad to buy such. Advertise them, and you will have no trouble in selling them.

Cinerarias.

The earliest batch of cinerarias is now coming into flower. While not a market flower which sells as well as cyclamens or primulas, nicely grown cinerarias make neat house plants and, stood in jardinieres, they are quite effective, as the foliage is handsome in itself. The chief trouble with these plants in houses where fumigation cannot be given them is that green aphis in a short time will appear in myriads on them, particularly if the plants are kept in a warm room. Later sowings of cinerarias should now be ready to shift into their flowering pots. These should be in nice flower about the end of March, but by keeping them cool they can be held until Easter quite easily. The stellata type will flower later than the ordinary large-flowered form and may be had until May. For decorative work, it is decidedly superior to the old type, but it is a tall grower and does not make so symmetrical a pot plant. Cinerarias want a rich soil. For the last shift, two-thirds loam and one-third dry cow manure, with the addition of some fine bone, soot and coarse sand, will make a suitable compost. Ram the soil firmly in the pots and grow the plants as cool and airy as possible all the time.

Calceolarias.

Calceolarias of the rugosa type, such as the old and well-known Golden Gem, should be pinched until the end of February, when the shoots can be allowed to run up and flower. They will then flower in May and be at their best for Memorial day, at which time their golden yellow flowers, which are lasting when cut, will be found extremely useful. As these calceolarias soon fill the pots with roots, care should be taken to shift them into their blooming pots before they become potbound. If you have a good batch of these plants and want flowers for cutting, rather than plants, and can spare a bench in a cool house, plant them out. Treated thus, they will give a grand crop of flowers.

The herbaceous, large-flowered varieties must not be subjected to any forcing. To have them at their best, a temperature such as single violets revel in, 40 degrees at night, should be given; 5 degrees higher should be the absolute night maximum. Nice plants can be flowered in 6-inch pots, if feeding is carefully done, but better ones are to be had in 7-inch and 8-inch. Once the plants become potbound, if carelessly watered, they will quickly turn yellow. Fumigate once a week without fail, no matter if you never see a green aphis, for if they get a good foothold they will speedily ruin a batch of plants. These calceolarias, while they will withstand the midday sun now, should receive some shade after the end of January.

Purchase Seeds Now.

Seed catalogues are now arriving on each mail and the bulk of them will arrive by the third week in January. Business is less rushing now than it will be even a month hence, and while the days are short we can spend an evening looking over the catalogues and making out a seed list for the coming season. There is always something of a charm in looking over well gotten up seed lists, and even if some things we order do not come up to our most sanguine expectations, it is a good plan to try a few new things annually. All will not prove with us what the eulogistic introducers say, but if we get even one desirable novelty it will repay a little experimenting. Make out the seed list early in January. You will get your orders filled much more promptly than if you wait until you actually need the seeds, and the seedsmen, who will be overwhelmed with business in a few weeks, will much appreciate your trade now.

CARNATIONS

CARNATION RUST.

Will you please tell me what causes the spots on the enclosed carnation leaves? The spots first appeared on the petals and have now spread to the foliage. H. L. S.

The spots on the specimens forwarded are caused by the common carnation rust. If you had spots on the petals of the blooms, they must have been caused by something else, as this disease is always found on the foliage. If there is a great deal of this rust on your plants, I would advise you to go over them and pick off the leaves which show this breaking out and burn them. Discontinue overhead watering, and keep the overhead conditions as dry and bracing as possible. Give all the ventilation you can without causing too much direct draft on the plants or too low a temperature. Dust air-slaked lime around under the benches, and even over the plants if there is a great deal of the disease. Painting a steam pipe with sulphur will also help to destroy the spores of the disease.

This disease is not feared now, as it was at one time, before we knew how to handle it. About fifteen years ago it did a great deal of damage, and it was feared by carnation growers as much as stem-rot. Under present-day methods of culture it seldom becomes troublesome, though it can be seen in a limited way in almost every carnation establishment. The whole secret in controlling it is, that when kept dry, the spores remain inactive. A. F. J. B.

CHLORIDE OF LIME IN WATER.

Can you tell me what effect water, in which chloride of lime has been put in sufficient quantity to kill typhoid germs, will have on carnation plants grown for cut flowers, and on carnation cuttings in the sand for rooting? Will the continued use of such water be injurious to the plants or cuttings in any way? I am growing carnations in Toronto at present and am compelled to use such water all the time. E. M.

If the chloride of lime is put into the water to make it potable, or, in other words, fit for drinking and domestic use, it will certainly not injure your carnations. Water will only take up a certain quantity of lime and, unless the mixture were kept agitated, you would get only the same amount of lime in the water you used, regardless of how much of the lime were put into the water. If agitated, the water would have a milky appearance, but this would not be done, as it would prevent the accomplishment of the very purpose for which it was put into the water. The addition of lime in any form to water will cause the vegetable matter on which the typhoid germs feed to drop to the bottom and leave the water free from all foreign matter.

The continuous use of this water may cause the stems of your carnations to become a trifle brittle at the joints, but outside of that I hardly think you will notice any effect whatever.

CARNATION FOR NAME.

Please tell me the name of the inclosed flower. G. F. D.

The bloom forwarded was badly frozen and wilted, so that about the only thing left to guess by—and it can only be a guess—was the calyx. From that, I would guess the plant to be Beacon. Beacon makes a bushy plant, with long grass. The blooming sheets come up quickly after they begin to shoot up, which is not very early in the fall, and the stems are quite stiff. The color is orange-scarlet in cool weather, and decidedly bricky in warm weather. Perhaps this description will help you to name your plant. A. F. J. B.

PROPAGATION.

It should be possible to secure a good many tops from the stronger geranium plants now, and if you carried over a number of old stock plants, they should now furnish a good crop of cuttings. Geraniums at this season can be rooted either in the cutting bench, or singly in 2-inch pots, unless the propagating bench gets the sun, and as these houses are often built to face the north, it is better and safer in every way to use pots. Stand them where they can get some bottom heat and let them have the full sun. Use sandy loam in the pots. Soak well after inserting the cuttings; then allow them to dry out well before watering again. Under this plan not over five per cent of the cuttings should damp off, but if a sunless cutting bench is used, or the cuttings are heavily shaded, the loss will be much heavier. From cuttings taken now and potted along, nice 4-inch pot stock can be had for Memorial day. The loss from damping off on cuttings produced on plants under glass is always less than when the thicker and softer outdoor cuttings are used.

Plants in pots should receive some attention at least once a week. Give them a fresh stand. Pick off any dead or decaying leaves. Remove weeds and scratch over the surface soil, as well as the ashes or sand on which they stand. As there is no advantage in allowing them to flower now, keep all trusses removed. Let the plants have plenty of fresh air, always avoiding anything in the shape of a stuffy atmosphere. The plants which have been in 2-inch pots for some time, if not yet potted, should be moved into 3-inch pots. Do not use any fresh animal manure in the soil, but add a little fine bone. If you have some spent hotbed or mushroom manure, which will crumble through the fingers, one-fourth of this to three-fourths loam will suit them.

GERANIUMS FOR NAME.

Will you please name the three red, cherry and pale pink geraniums sent under separate cover? H. W.

The flowers were so much discolored that identification was impossible. Later in the season, when frost is less liable to affect, send a sample truss of each in a small wooden or tin box. Wrap the bottom of the stems in damp moss or cotton wool. The shoot inclosed with silvery foliage is Santolina maritima. C. W.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Everybody is happy, because, taken as a whole, 1910 was a history-making year and brought a big stride forward in the florists' business. There is no denying that the people of Providence, always conservative, are waking up to the fashion and propriety of having cut flowers on all occasions. The greatly increased weekly sales are evidence of this, while the demand for flowers for special events is especially marked.

The growers have been quick to note the increasing demands, and as a result several have put up new glass during the year just closing and others are preparing to add to their ranges this spring. The growing demand for potted stock is causing several of the greenhouse men to arrange for propagating this line of stock, something of which there has been comparatively little in this vicinity heretofore.

Since Christmas there has been but little general business, although the latter part of the week witnessed a revival, caused by several funerals and the placing of orders for the municipal and state inaugurals for Monday and Tuesday, January 2 and 3. These entailed conspicuous decorations and the making up of bouquets, baskets and other designs. Prices have dropped back almost to normal, although a slight advance was maintained because of the inaugurals.

Various Notes.

George Hunt, of Burnside street, took his seat this week for a second term as a member of the Common Council.

Lindsay Bros., Clyde street, Clyde, report an unusually good business during last year. They are contemplating renovations the coming spring.

Thomas Curley, Harkness street, this city, has recently had several large decorations for weddings and social functions.

Frederick Covell, manager of the flower department of the Shepard Co., reports the biggest year's business since the department was opened. It is reported that the net profits were over $7,000.

Nels Pierson, this city, cut over 10,000 fine Princess of Wales violets for the Christmas trade.

Frank P. Barker, of Warren, is contemplating a rearrangement of his violet houses in the spring, with much additional glass.

Johnston Bros. had the decorations for the anniversary dinner of St. John's lodge of Masons at Masonic Temple, December 27.

John M. Green, of Plainfield street, has opened a retail store at 232 Cranston street.

Giles S. Congdon, of Court street, Bristol, reports an unusual rush of business recently.

Nathan D. Pierce, of Norwood, has put one of his new houses that he completed last fall to sweet peas, for early spring cutting. The house is 30x100 feet.

Elmer E. King has finished the rebuilding of his houses at Attleboro, all the underpinnings having been concreted. He has 40,000 geranium cuttings, all in, that are looking fine and promise excellent returns.

Theodore Peterson, of Benefit street, had an unprecedented business in connection with the holidays, choicest stock finding ready sale.

John Sharkey, with the Elmwood Nurseries, who suffered from a shock a few months ago, is said to be recovering and hopes to be ready to resume work with the opening of spring.

Annie F. Peckham, 112 Carpenter street, had the decorations for two large weddings last week.

Ernest Carl, 295 Lowell avenue, brought in several hundred fine azalea plants for the local trade at Christmas.

At the last meeting of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society, Charles W. Smith, who has been secretary for the last twenty-one years, announced that he would not be a candidate for reëlection at the coming annual meeting. A nominating committee was appointed to select candidates for the various offices. Richard M. Bowen was reëlected to represent Rhode Island as the vice-president of the New England Fruit Show. The appreciation of the members of the services rendered by Miss Louisa M. Mullen, as assistant secretary, was shown by their presentation to her of a silk umbrella.

A drop of 43 degrees in about ten hours on December 30 brought the temperature down to zero and caused the growers to keep on the alert against loss by freezing.

Visitors in this city last week included Charles R. Fish, of Charles R. Fish & Co., the West Side Nurseries of Worcester, Mass.; Mr. Lawton, of Fall River, Mass., and James F. Mulcahey, representing N. F. McCarthy & Co., of Boston. W. H. M.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The flower business for the holidays was satisfactory all around; if in some cases it was not ahead of last year, it still can go on record as an excellent business. Market conditions were much different from those of other seasons. Owing mainly to the unfavorable growing weather, the supply in all lines was just about equal to the demand. This was proved by the high prices which prevailed several weeks before the grand rush. Especially was this true of carnations. Still a good many who had some holiday experience had hopes of a larger supply than the one which really came in. With most carnation growers the daily cut was not large enough to practice the pickling act. The supply in roses was just about equal to the demand. All other stock, of which there was a good supply, was cleaned up. We have it from a reliable source that the supply of cut flowers was about one-third less than last year. This undoubtedly was the cause for the brisk sale of pot plants, for never before were there so many plants offered and disposed of as during this year's Christmas week. The New Year's orders were mainly filled with cut flowers.

Various Notes.

M. A. McKenney Co. reports a highly satisfactory trade in cut flowers and pot plants for the holidays. As they had more or less trouble with pickled carnations in other years, they say they went easy on them and asked buyers to take something else.

"We had our share of decorations and, taking it all in all, we are well satisfied with the amount of business done for both Christmas and New Year's," say J. M. Fox & Son.

For the Currie Bros. Co., Roy Currie said that they sold at least again as many pot plants this year for Christmas as last year. January 2, when they expected to rest, they had their hands full of work for a Masonic funeral at Mayville, Wis.

The Wisconsin Floral Co., in the Caswell building, reports surprise at the way cut flowers sold, for they expected pot plants would be first in line. The New Year sales were exceptionally satisfactory.

Wm. Zimmermann could have disposed of a good many more carnations if they could have been had in time.

The large supply of pot plants and cut flowers which Wm. Edlefsen had at his North Milwaukee place was quickly disposed of by the Edlefsen-Leidiger Co., plus large lots supplied by our local wholesalers.

The Stewart Floral Co. reports that medium sized foliage and blooming plants were the best proposition. Their trade does not call for cut flowers at such high prices as prevail during the holiday season.

Holton & Hunkel Co. says they were on pins just before Christmas, because with orders for carnations coming in from all directions, their supply became exhausted ahead of time, causing a great deal of unlooked for worry. In all other lines they cleaned up in good order. The supply of local violets was fully up to the demand, which was the best for some time past.

C. C. Pollworth Co. reports being more than pleased with the holiday business. At their Wauwatosa plant they had a fine lot of cyclamens, azaleas, various begonias, poinsettias, primulas, etc., which they cleaned up long before Christmas. They did not handle holly in such large quantities as in previous years, owing to the fact that produce commission merchants stock up grocers, who seem to handle it more for glory than for profit.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The new year opened gloomily. It rained all day and all night, and was still weeping Monday. The retailers felt the chill, and the general verdict for the holiday is that it was hardly as good as a good Saturday. However, there were many plants and plant combinations used as New Year's gifts and large quantities of roses and violets were bought by the large hotels, for distribution to their guests, one firm alone having an order for 30,000 violets for this purpose. This may be taken as a general custom with the best hotels.

Roses cleaned up well last week and on Sunday, January 1, there were none left unsold. The street was, however, flooded with violets, late as usual, where they should be early, and in consequence there were thousands left over, to be sold at any price offered Monday morning, and more arriving on the early trains. It looks as if a lower range of violet values is already established. The situation is a serious one. For Christmas, the delay in arrival of the violets caused enormous loss. Thousands of boxes, sent by a so-called special train, which crawled in after every regular train had passed it, reached New York in the early morning, half a day late, and after the retailers could wait no longer. These canceled orders knocked the bottom out of the violet market Christmas, and stock that would have sold clean for $1 and over fell to under 50 cents. The express company seems most to blame. The growers with their grievances must look to the company for redress. A united protest would wake up this autocratic corporation to a sense of its responsibilities. The wholesalers kept their men all night at the station waiting. The antiquated method of distribution of the boxes on arrival is another cause of general complaint. The time used in checking and collecting could easily be saved, and the allotments made instantly upon arrival. Another complaint early this week was the discovery of short count in many of the bunches, amounting in some cases to over twenty per cent. Buyers of violets by the bunch have always paid for fifty.

In roses, Killarney still dominates the market, but the great shipments of the last month can hardly be continued much longer. The crop is diminishing, but it has caused a result quite unexpected when it was put upon the market; it has reduced the average price of roses for special holiday requirements nearly fifty per cent. Everybody seems to grow it, who grows roses. It is the most generally popular member of the rose family ever introduced.

Carnations held well during the holiday season. The stock was everywhere superb. There seem to be few common kinds grown. The quantity arriving of all kinds is now sufficient for all needs and prices are lower. Of orchids there is now a great abundance, and prices are down about twenty-five per cent. These, and the gardenia, are society's choice, and more of them are worn than ever before. Valley is overabundant, and the street merchants are the outlet for it and the violet surplus. Without them, and Charley Trepel, the barrels would be fuller than they are. Lilies are lower and always abundant. Of lilac, stevia, mignonette, poinsettias, hyacinths and narcissi the less said, perhaps, the better. There seems no limit to the supply. Smilax and other greens are plentiful. Sweet peas are improving rapidly.

The market is dull and steady at present quotations. With the advent of clear, crisp, winter weather will come stability and improvement.

Various Notes.

The January meeting of the New York Florists' Club will take place Monday evening, January 9, in the Grand Opera House building, Twenty-third street and Eighth avenue. President Nugent will inaugurate his regime by giving a smoker to the club, which will include a collation and music.

"Should auld acquaintance be forgot?" is the motto on M. A. Bowe's New Year's cards, as he retires from his old home on Broadway to his new store at 60 West Thirty-third street.

Myer has closed all his busy holiday branches and is concentrating at his store on Fifty-eighth street and Madison avenue, which will soon be enlarged.

John F. Sharkey had a big New Year's, with dinner work.

M. C. Ford says his sales of American Beauties and carnations during the holiday season broke all records.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht handle a big lot of orchids every day, from the big conservatories at New Rochelle.

P. J. Smith is still under the weather.

Badgley, Riedel & Meyer were unfortunate in having a part of their surplus in the bank that failed last week.

Brooklyn.

John V. Phillips reports the best holiday business of his life.

R. G. Wilson says business was never better than now. He has dropped all outside enterprises and is giving his two big places in Brooklyn all his attention. He has been receiving from Charles Weber blooms of the new carnation, Brooklyn, with 3-foot stems.

Hugo Jahn says he had a great holiday business. Next week he has the decoration for a big wedding and reception.

S. Masur says Christmas and New Year's were his biggest ever. He occupied two extra stores.

The special meeting of the directors of the Greater New York Florists' Association was held Tuesday, January 3. Manager Crawbuck reports a large New Year's trade.

W. H. Kuebler says his supply department has increased 100 per cent over last year.

Harry Crawbuck supplied all the green goods for the Unity Club's big decoration New Year's eve, and has the contract for the old guards' ball, January 20.

E. W. Wiles says his December laurel business was enormous. He will soon move to larger quarters.

J. W. Merritt and his traveling man are both away on business trips in New England and Pennsylvania.

Bowling.

The Alex. Shaw prize, a bottle of champagne, for the high score of the evening, December 30, was won by Manda, with a total of 201. Another bottle will be given by the same house next Friday evening. There will also be bowling by all members of the New York Florists' Club Monday, January 9, the afternoon of the club meeting, at the Albion alleys, Twenty-third street and Sixth avenue. The scores December 30 were:

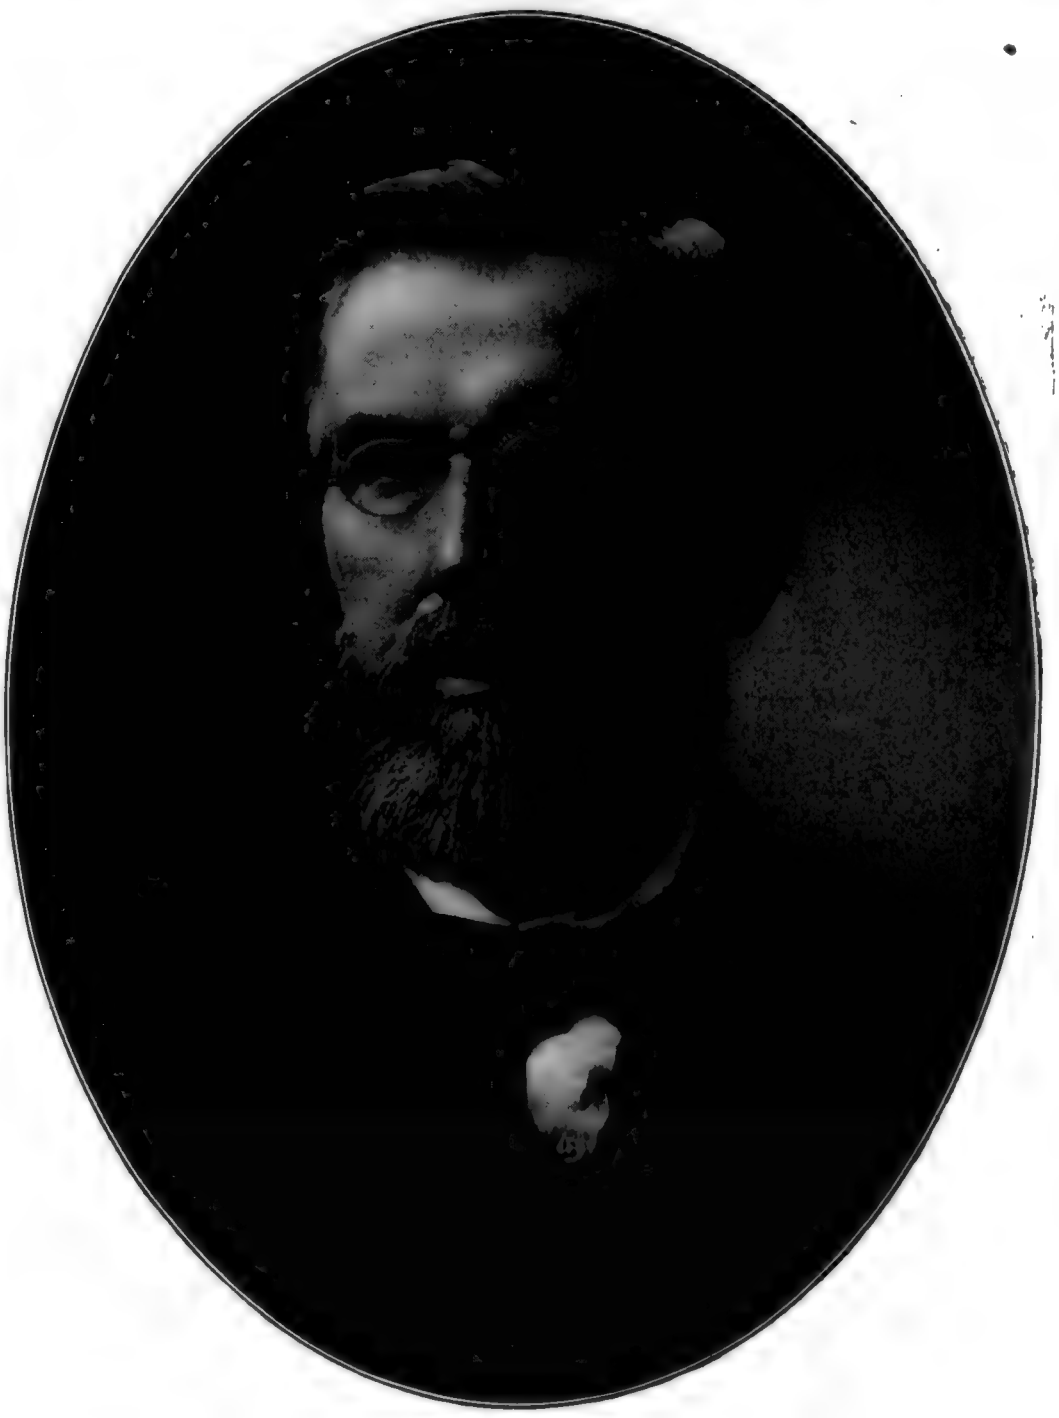
OBITUARY.



Fred Dorner.

Father Dorner is dead! The word came unexpectedly, for he was attacked by pneumonia at his home at Lafayette, Ind., December 23, and six days later succumbed to heart failure. His death, like his life, was peaceful and calm, with his family about him. There are few men in floriculture more generally beloved.

To Father Dorner more than to any other man the world owes the American carnation in its perfection of today. A close student of nature, his success in the development of this flower of the people has made the name of Dorner known the world around. The greatest progress in his work was being made at the time when The Review was founded, in 1897, and it was the good fortune of this publication to have Mr. Dorner as the author of its Carnation Notes during the first few years, to give to the trade his own story of the methods by which he had made such wonderful progress with the flower. He was president of the American Carnation Society in 1896.

Fred Dorner was born at Baden, Germany, November 29, 1837, the son of Fred and Christian Dorner. He came to America in 1855, to join a brother who had settled at Lafayette. His first occupation was with a florist, Lloyd, then pioneering there. Later he farmed, and in 1865 removed to Wisconsin, to return to Lafayette in 1870. In that year he started in the florists' business, renting a small range of glass. In 1889 he bought property on Indiana avenue and built the nucleus of the plant that in later years has become so well known to the thousands of pilgrims to this Mecca of devout carnationists. The business prospered steadily and in 1905 a tract of twenty-four acres still farther out on Indiana avenue was purchased for a new range, now approximating 100,000 feet of glass. The business was incorporated in 1896 as the F. Dorner & Sons Co., with the founder as president, Theodore A. Dorner vice-president and Fred E. Dorner secretary and treasurer. Miss Emily Dorner is in charge of the retail store at 640 Main street, where the offices of the wholesale department also are located.

Although Mr. Dorner was one of the first of American florists to take up the carnation and although he probably has raised more seedlings and disseminated more varieties than any other man, the results of his labors have all come in the last twenty years. It was in 1891 that he disseminated his first named varieties. The set consisted of nearly a dozen, notable in their day, but he survived them all by many years. From 1891 down to the present, hardly a season has passed without one or more introductions of new carnations by the Dorners. Of the set of ten sent out in 1892, Mme. Albertini Diaz stood the test longer than any other, but it was in 1893 that Mr. Dorner scored his first real, and, perhaps, all things considered, his greatest, success with the dissemination of the variety William Scott. Far as Scott is outclassed by the carnation of today, it stood for years without a peer and the blood of Scott without doubt is in practically all the varieties of later introduction, for all the hybridists working in the late 90s used Scott as their standard. In 1897 Mr. Dorner gave White Cloud and Mrs. Bradt to the trade; in 1898, G. H. Crane; in 1904, Lady Bountiful; in 1906, White Perfection; in 1908, Winona; in 1909, Pink Delight; in 1910, Scarlet Glow, and in 1911 the firm is sending out White Wonder and Gloriosa. These are but a few of the better known of the many sorts that have been launched from Lafayette; but they are enough to make secure the fame of their originator. Also, as a diversion, work was done on the chrysanthemum and some good things put out in the trade, among them Golden Eagle.

Fred Dorner.

March 2, 1861, Mr. Dorner and Marguerita Eihl were married. A golden wedding had been planned for three months hence. With Mrs. Dorner there survive seven of thirteen children. They are: F. E. Dorner, who is treasurer of the American Carnation Society; Theo. A. Dorner, who in later years has carried on the work of raising new varieties; Herman B. Dorner, of the University of Illinois, Urbana, secretary of the Society of American Florists; Wm. P. Dorner, of Indianapolis, the only son who has not adopted his father's calling; Emily Dorner, the florist daughter; Mrs. F. E. Hudson, of Lafayette, and Mrs. Claude Riddle, of Los Angeles. All the children except Wm. P. Dorner were at the bedside when death came, Mrs. Riddle having come from California and H. B. Dorner from Urbana to spend the holidays.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon, January 2, and was one of the largest at Lafayette in many years. The trade was represented by a large number of Indiana florists and there were many from a distance, including George Asmus, president of the S. A. F. Flowers in profusion included wreaths from the trade organizations and many firms and individuals in the guild. Interment was in the family plot in Greenbush cemetery.

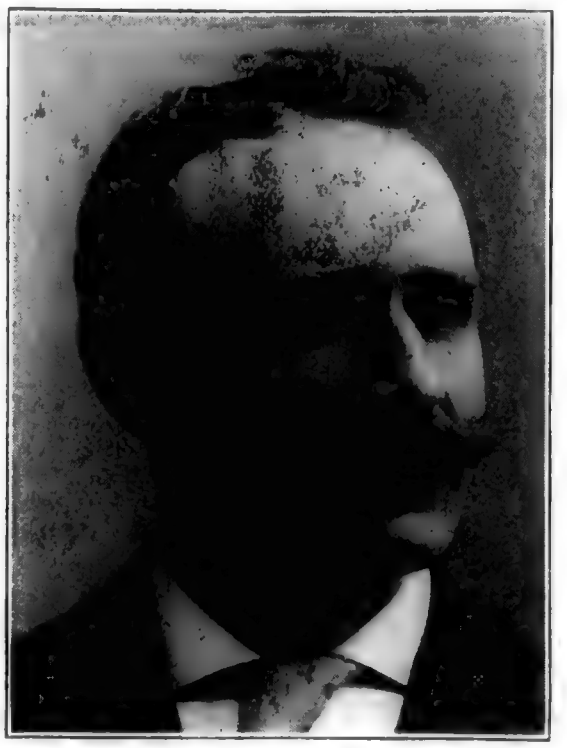
John Gormley.

John J. Gormley passed out with the old year; he died at his home, 2636 Orchard street, Chicago, early in the morning of December 31, from cancer of the stomach. He had been unable to attend to business, except for brief intervals, since November 1.

Mr. Gormley was 47 years of age, a native of Ireland. Coming to this country in his youth, he made his home and married in Boston, where he was employed in leading flower stores. He gained a reputation as an artist in the arrangement of flowers which led to his engagement by Ernst Wienhoeber, more than twenty years ago, to remove to Chicago. Mr. Gormley remained with Mr. Wienhoeber for a dozen years, his work and his personality appealing to the richest class of flower buyers in the Garden City. When the Fleischman Floral Co. opened its branch store on the north side of Chicago, Mr. Gormley was placed in charge, but this proved only a temporary arrangement, for after a few months he and Lovelace R. Bohannon exchanged connections. Mr. Bohannon, now in business for himself in the University Club building, Chicago, had been in partnership with John Canger, as Bohannon & Canger, 27 State street. In 1905 Mr. Bohannon took charge of the Fleischman branch and Mr. Gormley joined Mr. Canger, having a working interest in the firm of Canger & Gormley. Save for a time that Mr. Gormley spent with the L. S. Donaldson Co., Minneapolis, this arrangement continued to the day of his death, the business prospering and now being in a larger store at 29 State street.

Besides his widow, Margaret, Mr. Gormley left two daughters, Helen and Mary. The funeral was held New Year's day, from St. Clement's church, interment being at St. Boniface. There was a large attendance, including many in the trade; also there were many flowers.

John L. Turner.



John L. Turner, of the firm of Griffith & Turner Co., farm implement and seed dealers, died at his home, 1434 Harlem avenue, Baltimore, Friday, December 30, at the age of 91 years. Mr. Turner was secretary and treasurer of the firm. His death was due to the infirmities of old age, but was thought to have been hastened by a fall he received on December 1 at the seed store on North Gay street. Since that time, he had been confined to his home. The funeral was held January 2.

BOSTON.

The Market.

The week following Christmas proved exceptionally quiet. The severe rain storm December 24 caused the stores to have a lot of flowers undisposed of, and this adversely affected business. Prices have dropped considerably on about all staples, and a further decline during the present week is looked for. A severe cold wave December 31 again shortened sales. As a rule, Saturday proves the best business day in the week, but the last two have been spoiled by climatic conditions. Roses are abundant and inclined to sag in price. Killarney remains the greatest favorite, but Mrs. Ward keeps up its popularity. Beauties are in quite good supply. Carnations have taken a big drop in price, and it needs to be gilt-edged stock to realize $4 per hundred. Violets, in spite of the fact that they are only averaging half a crop with about all growers, have taken a considerable drop.

Sweet peas are increasing in numbers all the time and indications are that a tremendous quantity will be placed on the market the coming spring, as more growers are taking them up each year. The quality is slowly improving. Lilies are overabundant. Callas are in quite good supply. Valley is not selling well. Considerably more Dutch and French bulbous stock is arriving; tulips of all colors, campernelles, Trumpet Major and Golden Spur narcissi are included.

Quite a little freesia is coming in and larger supplies of mignonette. A good number of both yellow and white marguerites are seen.

Calendulas are more plentiful than in former winters. Forget-me-not is coming in small lots. Pansies are in good supply, while gardenias continue scarce. Cypripediums are plentiful and the cattleya scarcity is gradually becoming relieved by heavier arrivals of C. Trianæ. The trade in asparagus and adiantum has been rather light since Christmas.

Various Notes.

Henry R. Comley, on Park street, showed some fine hybrid amaryllis December 31. Among other flowers, he had calanthes, Cattleya Trianæ, both cut and in plants, Lælia anceps alba and other good things.

E. E. Fletcher, at the Boston Coöperative Market, is handling for Albert Batley the best stevia seen this season. Mr. Batley has several 100-foot benches planted with it.

L. E. Small, of Tewksbury, likes Carnation Scarlet Glow well. Of Pink Delight he has 3,500, and they are going finely. He also grows Beacon, Fair Maid and other varieties. He has one house of sweet peas, from which he has been picking since September. He has no trouble in flowering Marguerite Queen Alexandra in winter, and has also a fine batch of the yellow annual chrysanthemums just coming into flower.

Dobbins & Shannon, of Woburn, at the Boston Coöperative Market, are this season producing an extra fine grade of single violets. They had a shipment of 13,000 December 31.

Chester Paine, of the firm of Paine Bros., Randolph, is spending a few days in Maine. His firm is shipping quantities of yellow daffodils, pink, white, yellow and scarlet tulips and other bulbous stock at the Boston Flower Exchange.

H. W. Field, of Northampton, through Thomas Pegler, is disposing of some fine carnations at the Boston Flower Exchange. These include Alice Taft, a white seedling, Prospecter, scarlet seedling, a dark crimson seedling, also Melody, Winsor and other standard varieties.

N. F. Comley, at the Boston Coöperative Market, has quantities of Cosmos Lady Lenox, also big consignments of sweet peas and carnations.

Quint & Weiss, who recently opened a flower store at 379 Boylston street, closed it January 1.

S. J. Goddard, of Framingham, is in the market with an extra fine lot of Purity freesia, in addition to his fine line of carnations.

Herbert T. Capers, for the Halifax Garden Co., is now handling 10,000 sweet peas weekly. Among some of the newer carnations they are sending in are Sangamo, Dorothy Gordon, Victoria and Apple Blossom. The last-named variety does not prove a good shipper and seller.

William Spillsbury, of Woburn, one of our best single violet specialists, reports a Christmas pick of 9,000 violets, against 18,000 a year ago. William Sim's pick fell off 80,000, and practically every other grower's in like ratio, some showing a much heavier decline. The dry summer is blamed for the sparser blooming of the plants.

T. F. Galvin showed some bouquets with the old paper holders at his Tremont street store, December 31. One of Rose Mrs. Aaron Ward, edged with Erica melanthera, and another of Pink Killarney, edged with valley, were quite pleasing. In one window a mound of cut orchids, including fine sprays of white phalænopsis, cattleyas and cypripediums had a telling effect.

James F. M. Farquhar and wife are spending a few days in Montreal and taking in the ice carnival there.

Mann Bros. had the first scarlet tulips and Golden Spur narcissi of the season at their stand in the Boston Flower Exchange December 28.

J. P. A. Guerineau is spending the present week in Newport, R. I., in the interests of the T. J. Grey Co.

E. J. Rogean, for H. F. Calder, of Norwood, is handling the finest lot of Campbell violets seen this season. Mr. Calder is one of the few specialists who have excellent success with double violets.

Vernon T. Sherwood, recently at the Mount Desert Nurseries, Bar Harbor, Me., is now with S. J. Goddard, Framingham.

Henry W. Vose, of Hyde Park, brought in a fine lot of Golden Spur narcissi December 30. This is quite early for these narcissi, it usually being the middle of January before they appear of decent quality.

The annual inauguration meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society occurs January 7. The address of the president and reports of the various committees will be the principal business.

Charles Evans, of Watertown, is in the market with quantities of his noted strain of mignonette.

Rose Mrs. Aaron Ward, which William H. Elliott first grew in quantity, is being largely used this season for bridesmaids' bouquets and for table decorations. Mrs. A. R. Waddell, somewhat similar in color, promises to be another popular sort.

Julius A. Zinn, on Park street, has a quantity of well-flowered plants of Cypripedium insigne. He still has some fine Jeanne Nonin mums. Among roses, Mrs. Ward is sold largely, as well as Safrano, Bon Silene, and other sorts not usually grown.

December easily broke all records for chilliness, the mean temperature being the lowest in over thirty years. The rainfall also was deficient.

John Walsh & Son, of Melrose Highlands, had the best Christmas trade on record, having an excellent call both for plants and cut flowers.

Albert Batley, of Maynard, reports Christmas home trade as heavy. He had only a few flowering plants left, and but for the torrential rain December 24 these would have gone.

J. T. Butterworth, of South Framingham, is now getting a fine cut of Cattleya Trianæ. His cypripediums have flowered profusely. He also has fine valley.

The demand for space for trade exhibits at the national spring show in Boston is steadily growing and it looks as though all available space will be taken. Some of the individual exhibits will be a whole show in themselves.

Kidder Bros., of Lincoln, grow splendid single violets, and they are so beautifully bunched that they are always snapped up as soon as they arrive in the market. Growing good stock alone will not make it command top market prices, unless bunching is attractively done.

Mrs. W. H. Ward, of Montvale, near Woburn, who is one of our few lady flower sellers, but a most gracious and efficient one, is at present bringing in a fine lot of carnations and sweet peas, in addition to myosotis of excellent quality.

The pink antirrhinum grown by Paul E. Richwagen is the best I have seen in a long time, and as the color is pure, it sells on sight. W. N. Craig.

WILL STAY WITH US.

I have been a subscriber to The Review ever since the first number was issued and I think it will still be the leading journal for florists when my present subscription runs out; I enclose my check for $5 to pay five years in advance. Henry E. Reimers.

AMERICAN CARNATION SOCIETY.

Department of Registration.

In the official report of the registration of the new shell-pink sport of Enchantress, named J. R. Walling, published in The Review of December 22, page 29, an error occurred in the address of the originator, Joseph R. Walling. Mr. Walling's address is Keyport, N. J., not Keyport, N. Y.

.....BUSINESS AND OTHER NOTES.....

Columbus, O.—J. R. Hellenthal's Christmas was better than ever before. Azaleas and poinsettias sold better than anything else.

Colorado Springs, Colo.—The weather has been bright here, so it made Christmas trade good. Plants were plentiful, but cut flowers were not so abundant.

Houghton, Mich.—The Lakeside Floral Co., of this city, Calumet and Chassell was unable to supply the Christmas demand with the output of its own greenhouses, and Manager York went to Chicago to purchase extra stock.

Brattleboro, Vt.—The boiler room at C. E. Allen's greenhouses was nearly ruined by fire December 28. It was thought that the heating plant, though badly damaged, could be operated, thus enabling Mr. Allen to save the greater part of his stock.

Marysville, Kan.—H. R. Fisher has taken over the property and business of the partnership heretofore existing between D. Von Riesen and H. R. Fisher under the name of the Marysville Floral Co. Mr. Fisher says Christmas trade was quite satisfactory, with the call principally for cut flowers.

Port Arthur, Tex.—Chas. E. H. Pearsons, proprietor of the Port Arthur Greenhouses and Nurseries, announces dropping the word Nurseries from the name. The business in future will be known only as the Port Arthur Greenhouse.

Warsaw, Ind.—The demand for flowers during the holiday season was greater here than ever before. The Christmas stock at Wm. Terrell & Son's and at W. W. Dederick's was exhausted as early as Saturday evening. Scarcely a flower could be bought at 6 o'clock on Christmas eve.

Brockton, Mass.—W. W. Hathaway reports that Christmas trade surpassed that of 1909 by a large margin. Plants sold well, including poinsettias, azaleas, Lorraines, primroses, cyclamens, palms and ferns. Carnations were of the best quality ever handled at Christmas. The best sellers were Beacon, Pink Delight, Rose-pink Enchantress and White Perfection. Roses sold on sight and there was also a good call for violets, valley and other flowers. Holly and other greenery were in heavy demand. Since Christmas, trade has remained extra good.

Lincoln, Neb.—C. H. Frey says he had the best holiday trade since he started in business, as it ran thirty-five per cent ahead of previous seasons. Everything cleaned up in fine shape and the cut was especially heavy, with first-class stock. The weather was ideal; cold nights and sunny days. There was a big call for azaleas, cyclamens, primulas, poinsettias, peppers, Lorraine begonias, pans of Roman hyacinths, ferns and yellow mums. Mr. Frey grows a lot of Percy Plumridge and reports a good sale for them, both cut and in pots.

Albuquerque, N. M.—Roy Miller has been made manager of the Albuquerque Floral Co., vice John N. Bernard.

Sherman, Tex.—H. O. Hannah & Son report that business in Texas is growing and state that their Christmas sales were forty per cent greater than last year.

Naperville, Ill.—Charles F. Rohr reports that his Christmas trade was the largest since he has been in business. Everything sold readily, especially potted plants.

Falls City, Neb.—Simonton & Pence say there was some objection to Christmas prices, but that everything sold and the holiday trade made the best total to date.

Matamoras, Pa.—Roddie Dewitt, a young man employed by Colonel Quick, was found unconscious in the greenhouses December 21, and died soon after at his employer's home.

Flint, Mich.—D. P. Smith says that Christmas trade was better than last year. Red roses and red carnations were the best sellers. There was also a good demand for plants.

Negaunee, Mich. — The Negaunee Nursery and Greenhouses had a record-breaking Christmas business and were obliged to send to Chicago for additional stock to meet the demand.

Kansas City, Mo.—Biedermann & Son are more than satisfied with their Christmas trade, having had one of the best holiday seasons in all their experience. Their stock was in fine condition, but scarcely sufficient for the demand.

Tarrytown, N. Y.—At its place at Broadway and McKeel avenue the F. R. Pierson Co. does a constantly increasing retail business. At Christmas many flowering plants and greens were sold, as well as the concern's specialties, which are ferns and cut flowers.

Albion, N. Y.—Julian T. Duquette, the florist and seedsman at 66 to 78 Clinton street, will also add a nursery department to his business. He has set aside a plot of ground for an ornamental nursery and will finish stocking it in the spring.

Fayetteville, Ark.—The Southwestern Seed Co. says: "Our holiday business this year has been very satisfactory indeed, our sales on cut flowers showing a large increase over former years, and we sold every blooming plant in the house. Taking it all around, business was the best we have had for several years."

Sabula, Ia.—W. B. Lovell, the florist of this city, and Mrs. Galliard, of South Carolina, were married recently, under circumstances which, as reported, are romantic enough to form the foundation for a love story. They had never seen each other, it is said, until their wedding day, but had carried on their courtship by correspondence, a mutual friend having been responsible for their introduction in this manner.

Red Wing, Minn.—The firm of Decker & Fritze has been dissolved and the business is now conducted by Richard H. Decker.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by act of Congress, March 4, '01

Officers for 1910: President, F. R. Pierson, Tarrytown, N. Y.; vice-president, F. W. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; secretary, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.; treasurer, W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y.

Special convention and National Flower Show, Boston, Mass., March 26 to April 1, 1911.

Annual convention, Baltimore, Md., August 15 to 18, 1911.

RESULTS.

We give them. You get them.
We both have them.

Carnation cuttings are selling well; early orders are more numerous than last year.

Did you turn over a new leaf January 1? Hope you made a resolution never to write another business letter without using a printed letter-head.

Not a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

Inquiries continue to reach The Review, unsigned and with nothing by which the writer can be identified. Anonymous inquiries never can be answered. Sign your full name and address and you will be answered.

The pool of cement manufacturers broke up December 31, with the immediate effect of a reduction of 10 cents a barrel in the price of their output. Production has for a long time outrun consumption.

In the last few years great changes have come over the cut flower industry in America. From an effort to produce the goods to meet the demand, latterly the aim has been to connect as far as possible with the existing call for stock. It seems not unlikely that the time now has arrived when attention should be devoted to creating new uses for flowers, and new outlets. In this connection the advertising in local newspapers by retail florists is to be encouraged.

S. S. Skidelsky, in his address before the Florists' Club of Philadelphia, published elsewhere in this issue, expresses a view on which there may, at least, be more than one opinion. This trade would not be what it is today were it not for the men who have gone into it without experience. The knowledge they have gained at the cost of time and money has, in many cases, been put to a use that must command universal admiration and commendation. The way to get somewhere is to make a start.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Department of Registration.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration of the geraniums, Panama, White Cloud, Ruby, General Wooster, Barnaby Rudge and Bright Eyes, by F. H. De Witt, Wooster, Ohio, becomes complete.

H. B. Dorner, Sec'y.

December 29, 1910.

CALENDARS RECEIVED.

The Review has received, within the week, 1911 calendars from the following:

Charles H. Lilley Co., Seattle, Wash.; Adam Schillo Lumber Co., Chicago; Benjamin Chase Co., Derry, N. H.; Green Floral Co., Dallas, Tex.

AMERICAN GLADIOLUS SOCIETY.

President Hendrickson has appointed the following committee to investigate the diseases of the gladiolus, each member to work in connection with the experiment stations of the different states:

New York state, Arthur Cowee, Berlin, N. Y.
Ohio, M. Crawford, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.
Wisconsin, H. H. Bridge, Lake Mills, Wis.
Massachusetts, L. Merton Gage, Orange, Mass.
Indiana, E. Y. Teas, Centerville, Ind.
Michigan, C. H. Ketcham, South Haven, Mich.
Connecticut, B. F. White, Terryville, Conn.
Iowa, G. D. Black, Independence, Ia.
New Jersey, I. Leonard, Iona, N. J.
California, Dr. W. Van Fleet, Chico, Cal.
Illinois, H. B. Dorner, Urbana, Ill.

L. Merton Gage, Cor. Sec'y.

THE WAY TO FIND BUYERS.

There are a great many ways of selling, but advertising is not only the cheapest but most effective:

We tried writing to those we thought might use our stock, but it was like sending medicine to a well man; but when we advertised in The Review we found those who wanted our goods.—J. J. Cable & Son, Butler, Tenn., December 30, 1910.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The buyers have had things in their favor ever since Christmas. As quickly as the growers got down to work again after their holiday relaxation, the plants were again ready to give a liberal cut and receipts in the market were so heavy that the conditions noted at the close of the Christmas rush were maintained through the following week. There was a good volume of business moving, but not enough to consume at regular rates all the flowers that were offered. The result was a resort to jobbing stock at cheap prices in the effort to effect some sort of a clearance.

The New Year's business is growing each season, but so is the supply, the latter faster than the former. Prices for New Year's are estimated to have averaged about half what they did for Christmas, in some cases, notably on carnations and violets, not half. While Beauties, red and pink roses sold fairly clean at the lowest prices thus far known for New Year's, the heavy supply of white roses could not be moved. Carnations held their own pretty well until the last day of the year, when there was a bad slump.

New Year's calls especially for cattleyas, valley, gardenias and violets for corsage work. Of cattleyas there now is an abundance. Gardenias are a glut. The wholesalers mostly buy these in the east to sell for the house account, but the eastern sources stocked up the retailers for New Year's and it left the wholesalers hung up. Valley is plentiful. It had been expected that the call for violets would be good—it always has been before. There was, indeed, a large use of this flower, but the receipts were so heavy that prices went to pieces on the last day of the year and the average return to the growers can hardly be otherwise than disappointing.

Killarney

For size of flower this stock is unequaled.

The longer the stem the larger and finer the flower, but if you try to buy elsewhere Killarneys with as large, fine heads as ours carry, you will have to pay for extra stem to get the flower. LENGTH FOR LENGTH OF STEM, OUR KILLARNEYS ARE UNEQUALED FOR SIZE OF FLOWER. Splendid color, perfect foliage. A big cut. We also have all other Roses in large supply and of finest quality.

Specially Strong on White Killarney.

Beauties

Our Beauties will make friends for you.

Your customers know that there are Beauties and Beauties. Don't make the mistake of thinking the people won't know the difference. They will. We want to hear from buyers who have not previously used our Beauties because our Beauties make friends—for us and for you. Include Beauties in today's order and send it to us.

CARNATIONS

Now is the time to push this flower.

You can push Carnations, for we are in position to supply the best grade of stock in any quantity at moderate prices. Large and fine as our supply has been, the cut is increasing rapidly. The quality is right up to top notch.

The Cream of the Violets

We handle the cream of the Hudson River Double Violets and the finest of home-grown singles. If you have been buying elsewhere, or if you have not used Violets from this market, send us an order. You can easily build up your trade on our Violets.

Orchids—Cattleyas

Can supply the finest home-grown Cattleyas without notice. Always on hand, awaiting your order. The public want Cattleyas - supply the demand.

A Large Cut of Fine Smilax Now on.

Fancy Valley and Easter Lilies

always on hand; can supply in quantity every day in the year.

There are now considerable quantities of tulips coming in, to find no waiting demand. Paper Whites and Romans are so plentiful that they make low prices. There are all the Easter lilies that can be used and callas are coming in more freely. Freesia has appeared. Pansies and daisies are available in any quantity needed and there is a little good bouvardia. Sweet peas are plentiful and the quality is excellent.

The greens department presents no new feature of interest save that there is a large quantity of smilax ready to cut the moment the orders appear.

The present week opened with an all day drizzle on New Year's, with the result that city stores generally carried over enough stock to serve their needs for the half day's business on Monday. There was, however, a fair run of shipping Monday and Tuesday. The supply of stock is fully up to all requirements, quality is good and the situation is one that encourages the retailers to push for business. Carnations are plentiful and Paper Whites a glut. Stevia has turned to the short side.

December and the Year.

The first part of December was marked by a plentiful supply of roses and a shortage of carnations, but the latter part of the month brought an abundance in all lines. Where prices the first part of the month were excellent, for the latter half of the month they averaged much below those of other years. The quantity of stock sold was, however, so great that the total of sales for the month ran considerably ahead of last year, taking the market as a whole.

Taking the year 1910, the various interests in the market were well enough satisfied so that if 1911 proves as good, there will be little complaint. It is to be doubted, however, if the money value of the cut flowers produced for this market in the aggregate has increased any more than has the glass area of the growers. The number of shippers is constantly increasing.

December Weather.

December was bright, cold and dry, not so cold as December a year ago, but 3 degrees below the average. The sun shone on an average of three hours and fifty-four minutes a day, which is forty-two per cent of the possible duration.

For the year 1910, the accumulation of excess temperature was 772 degrees. The deficiency in precipitation was 6.42 inches.

Various Notes.

The imports of seeds, plants and bulbs through the Chicago customhouse in 1910 were valued at $233,258 and paid duty amounting to $53,305.25.

Manager John Sinner says that the report current in the wholesale district, to the effect that the Flower Growers' Co. has leased new quarters for its market, is premature, but a director of the company is authority for the statement that it is practically certain the market will move May 1 to the second floor at 15 Randolph street, next door east of the building occupied by A. L. Randall Co. and E. C. Amling Co. A stockholders' meeting is called for January 5.

It is said the arrivals of violets from the Hudson river district on the morning of the last day of the year amounted to ninety-eight boxes.

E. C. Amling Co. expects to be in its new quarters on the street floor at 17 and 19 Randolph street before the end of the week.

George Asmus took office January 1, as president of the S. A. F., and received many congratulatory messages. January 2 he attended the funeral of Fred Dorner, at Lafayette.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. says the next month will see the last month's shortage of carnations more than made up for.

M. A. Leganger is the latest addition to the staff of the A. L. Randall Co. He has represented leading ribbon mills and will travel for the Randall supply department.

The esteemed Tribune in its New Year's review of Chicago's commercial affairs, estimates the turnover of wholesale cut flowers in the great central market for 1910 as $2,420,000.

W. E. Lynch says the year opened with a heavy run of shipping orders for the two half days with which the week and 1911 began.

The Florists' Club will install officers and have a dinner, Dutch treat, $1 a plate, at the Union hotel tonight, January 5.

Tim Matchen says that the demand for carnation cuttings, if early inquiries are any indication, promises to be the heaviest Peter Reinberg has yet had.

N. J. Wietor reports that the last half of December was the best Wietor Bros. ever have enjoyed, the quantity of stock cut more than counterbalancing the lower prices which prevailed.

Wednesday, January 11, the Chicago Carnation Co. will entertain at Joliet. A special car will be provided for the guests, leaving Chicago at 11:45 a. m., stopping at the greenhouses and getting into Joliet by electric car in time to catch the 4:15 train back to Chicago. Luncheon will be served at the greenhouses.

Vaughan & Sperry say that the local crop of Cattleya Trianæ is due before the end of the present week.

Zech & Mann sent their customers a handsome calendar, a reproduction in colors of Kenyon's "The Summer Girl," who has her arms full of roses. It was a specially apt selection.

J. H. Rohmer, formerly with Bassett & Washburn, of Hinsdale, has become carnation foreman for Wietor Bros.

The charity ball January 3 made considerable extra demand for fancy flowers, including long Beauties, which were scarce that day. C. A. Samuelson has some specially good work.

R. C. Engledew & Co., Geneva, are sending John Kruchten the first of their crop of Cattleya Trianæ. The number of orchid growers is increasing rapidly.

Among the wishes for a happy new year received by the wholesalers was a notice that the cold storage warehouses have doubled their charges for the first month's storage of each case of ferns. Where the charges formerly have been 15 cents for the first month and 12 cents per case each month thereafter, the new rate is 30 cents and 15 cents. The claim is made that a room must be specially set apart for the ferns, which do not completely fill the room and are therefore more expensive to handle.

E. B. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, has interested himself in calling the attention of the wholesalers to a new building which has been started by the University of Chicago at the corner of Market and Lake streets. The building is to be 80x200 and six stories high, with foundations large enough for additional stories. Mr. Washburn thinks the location admirably adapted to the wholesale cut flower business and has been showing plans of the building to the wholesalers this week. The space is to be had at about 45 cents per square foot.

Joe Dunn, who, prior to a brief experience in business for himself, was foreman for J. A. Budlong, appears to be again making good since taking charge of the Des Plaines plant of Hoerber Bros.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. is sending out a unique portrait of its traveler, Fred Lautenschlager, announcing the firm's exhibit at the national flower show.

REPOTTED FERNS TURN YELLOW.

Will you please tell me what is the matter with my Whitmani ferns? I repotted them in quite moist soil and did not water them for a few days, but sprayed the foliage for several days after potting. They turned yellow about a week afterward. Did I do wrong in spraying them? J. H.

It seems probable that these ferns suffered from lack of water at the root, for, unless the potting soil was really too wet to use, the plants should have had a watering immediately after they were potted. Spraying overhead would be likely to do more harm than good to Nephrolepis Whitmani at this season. As a matter of fact, this variety will not stand as much spraying at any time as the Boston fern, the fronds being so much more dense that they are liable to be borne down by the weight of water on them. PHILADELPHIA.

The Rising Eastern Market.

Business has been active throughout the holidays. The scale of prices, particularly rose prices, has fallen. New Year's, divided between December 31 and half of January 2, saw excellent business, but nothing extraordinary. Taken all through, the volume of holiday business was larger than usual, but the supply of flowers was so large as to keep prices down. The ball season is active—four large local balls in one week. There is a heavy shipping demand, with the orders smaller since New Year's, though just as numerous.

Cattleyas have dropped in price, as well as carnations and roses. Sweet peas are selling well, especially the colored sorts. Valley has more evenly balanced supply and demand. Daffodils have come. Lilac is plentiful. Paper Whites and Romans are overdone. Greens are selling better, particularly Asparagus plumosus.

Christmas Impressions.

The description of the wholesale market published last week gives but a partial view of Christmas.

The retail shops had, almost without exception, all that they could possibly do. The holiday falling on Sunday gave a little better opportunity for completing the work on time. While most of the orders were for Saturday, some could be delivered on Sunday and some were for Monday. The heavy crops of roses made it possible to get all the flowers that were necessary for the orders at moderate prices. The immense quantity of really fine blooming plants gave better value in plants than this market had ever seen before. It was not that the prices on plants were lower, but that the quality was better, or, if our business must be measured by the yardstick, there was more bloom per square inch.

Charles Henry Fox, discussing Christmas, said that plants predominated. They were used in great variety, singly and made up. Violets and Beauties were in demand. Carnations were not handled, because they are always held at a holiday until overripe and it is difficult to judge their age; they have so often in the past gone to sleep immediately on reaching their destination. Roses, on the contrary, can be judged readily and they were used wherever possible. Christmas business was most satisfactory.

Fred Ehret was pleased with Christmas business, saying that "it went well." Plants sold better than anything else. Souvenir boxes were in demand. Roses sold well at lower prices.

Among the Christmas windows arranged in the flower shops was a beautiful symphony in red designed by John Wilson for J. J. Habermehl's Sons, at Twenty-second and Diamond streets. There were red baskets, red bells, poinsettias, red ribbons and miniature red electric lights, all effectively combined.

H. H. Battles' picture window contained a huge red basket filled with holly, with a center of scarlet boxwood. Yes, it was scarlet boxwood. I cannot give you the botanical name, but must refer you to George Rausch.

There were other windows of beauty that proved magnets to the throngs of Christmas shoppers, but these will suffice to give an idea of the work of our floral artists.

The possibilities of Christmas are just opening before us, with the problem of production more nearly solved than ever before. With better value offered in our wholesale market, our retailers have a splendid opportunity of interesting more and more people in plants and flowers for Christmas gifts.

Various Notes.

The Joseph Heacock Co. has taken the store formerly occupied by Edward Reid, of 1526 Ranstead street, as a base of operations. Carl Corts will receive the cut of both the company's

The Pine Tree Silk Mills Company

A most successful ribbon for florists is the new Wire-Edge Taffeta and Satin Taffeta. This is a fine, pliable wire, woven along the edge. Entirely concealed, and the ribbons to all appearances look like plain taffeta and satin taffeta ribbons. When these wire-edge ribbons are tied into bows on flowers or baskets or plants, the bows do not fall or get mussed, but retain their shape under all conditions. Many florists are already using this wire-edge ribbon, and all praise it and send duplicate orders.

Wire-edge satin taffeta, 4½ inches wide, $1.62 piece of 10 yards.
Wire-edge taffeta, 4½ inches wide, $1.25 piece of 10 yards.

It is not high in price. In fact, purchasing direct from the mill, you save all between profits.

building, to store stock. Mr. Berkowitz says that Porto Rican mats and other Easter goods are arriving.

John W. McIntyre handles the entire product of one of the lilac specialists. The season for forcing this beautiful flower is now on in earnest.

Senator Heacock being absent on official duties at Harrisburg, Alfred Burton presided over an excellent meeting of the Florists' Club January 3. Mr. Skidelsky's essay evoked interesting discussion. Resolutions of sympathy were ordered sent to the family of J. W. Colflesh. Refreshments were served. Visitors included W. S. Adams and Harry Wintzer.

The H. F. Michell Co. has announced lectures in its series for January 23 and January 30.

The lilac forced by W. F. Lacroix is Rouge de Marley. Phil.

CINCINNATI.

The Gateway to the South.

Holiday business took up nearly everything as fast as it was offered. The darker colors were in especial demand. Toward the end of the week much funeral work used up the white roses and many Paper Whites and Romans, which were accumulating. Prices as a whole held up nicely. Beauties, Killarney and Richmond were fine in quality and in especial request, while other varieties easily held their own.

Carnations are quite shy of the normal cut for this time of the year and held up their price nicely until the latter part of last week, when it was shaded somewhat. The supply of other stock was ample and double violets exceeded in numbers the request for them. This is also true of valley. The single violet, Princess of Wales, was conspicuous by its absence, as compared with other years at this time.

Poinsettias sold up about as fast as they arrived, and longiflorum lilies were offered in fair quantities and sold out readily. Callas are not as yet an important factor.

Boxwood is now offered again in the list of green goods. The supply of other decorative stock is ample.

TORONTO.

The Market.

With the Christmas rush far enough in the past to permit an accurate estimate, everyone reports business much bigger and better than ever. Everything sold well and all the stores were cleaned right out. It seems that this year the people had the money to spend, and the public is each year becoming more and more educated to the value of flowers and flowering plants as Christmas gifts. Cut flowers of all kinds sold well in the downtown section in the bigger stores, but on the outskirts the demand was not so good, the high price holding back the buyers. This was offset, however, by the number of flowering plants sold. The demand for these was much larger than in the past, and azaleas seemed to be the favorites. Ferns were sold in big numbers. The general run on azaleas was from $2 to $5, while the best brought $10 and in some cases more. Naturally, red was the most sought-after color, and Beauty and Richmond roses were sold in large numbers. Red carnations were cleaned out.

The business in holly, mistletoe and wreathing was immense. A great number of the uptown florists handled this for the first time and made big money on the sales. Then a number made up wreaths and crosses of green material, with artificial red flowers, and these were in good demand for placing on graves.

Various Notes.

The Steele-Briggs Seed Co. reports an immense business in this line, as does J. A. Simmers. Comparatively little stock was left on Monday morning.

S. A. Frost, of College street, did an immense trade. Everything was cleaned out. He could not devote as much time to the sale of green decorations and holly as he has in the past, and on that account had about a crate left over. His increased staff was kept going till 2 a. m. Sunday morning. "An increase of about thirty-five per cent," is the way he sums the situation up.

J. S. Simmons and J. H. Dunlop both report a much bigger trade than ever before, in spite of the high prices. The usual large staff at each place had to be doubled and, notwithstanding this, they were kept busy till well into Sunday morning and nearly all Christmas day.

Mrs. Walker, Thomas Plumb, C. E. Lewis and others in the northern section are well satisfied with the showing.

Robert Barron and F. Simpson & Sons, the two large provision dealers of the northern end of the city, who handle cut flowers, both report increased business.

Grobba & Wandrey, of Mimico, shipped some magnificent specimens of azaleas into the city. E. F.

SEFTON CORRUGATED SHIPPING CASES

STRONG, LIGHT AND CONVENIENT

WHY use heavy wooden Boxes for Shipments of Flowers and Plants when you can get a box better adapted to your needs, weighing about one-half as much?

Our Boxes are made to fold flat; thus insuring economy in storage space and enables the commission merchant to knock them down and return them in bundles, reducing return charges--they can be used over and over.

Our Patented K. D. Tin Corner is the only satisfactory K.D. corner ever adapted to a Corrugated Shipping Case. It gives you a perfectly flat box. Costs no more than set up corners.

Six Pages of Retailers' Cards

This department for the cards of Leading Retail Florists—those florists who have the facilities for filling the orders sent them by other florists—has made possible the recent rapid development of this branch of the business, a branch of the trade now established for all time and so helpful that its volume will keep on increasing for many years.

Are you sending and receiving your share of these orders? You can send your share (and make 20 per cent profit without effort) if you let your customers know you can perform this service for them. To receive your share—well, The Review's department for Retailers' cards remains the one way of getting prompt action on the order in hand. If you are the only florist in your city represented here, you get the orders coming into your territory from other florists. If you are not represented and "the other fellow" is—we can leave it to you what becomes of these desirable orders.

To be represented costs only 70 cents per week on a yearly order. This is for one-inch space. Other spaces in proportion.

Why not send your order today—now—before you forget it?

equally at sea to explain the whys and wherefores, is no more to be commended than he who, through mere chance or accident, hits upon a streak of good luck. The "hit or miss" principle accounts equally for the results in both cases. It was a "miss" with the one, and a "hit" with the other, while the law of cause and effect underlying both is a mystery or a closed book to either.

The question naturally arises: Why do people venture into a trade or profession, the essential knowledge of which they do not possess? Why give up a paying coal business and build greenhouses, without first mastering the art of growing? Why so many failures everywhere, while those really successful, because of a thorough training, intelligent observation, deduction and application, are comparatively few? Is it because the florists' business "looks so mighty good"? Granted. Then there is that much more reason why we should bend all our energies and put forth our best efforts toward equipping ourselves in every way in order to build our success upon a more solid foundation.

The farmer who tilled the soil for years past, and who thought he knew all about it, as his fathers did before him, is just beginning to realize that he has yet much to learn, that his primitive methods of farming will not do, if he is to keep pace with the progress of the times.

In this connection it may not be amiss to quote a few lines from an article of Gantt, in the Engineering Journal, having a direct bearing upon the subject under consideration: "In the United States our superb national resources have enabled us to make phenomenal progress without regard to the teachings of science, and in many cases in spite of our neglect of them. But we have reached a point where we must recognize that the proper application of science to industry is of vital importance to the future prosperity of the country."

The Progressive Farmer.

The progressive farmer has evidently arrived at the same conclusion, if we are to judge by the number of farmer boys filling the halls of the state agricultural colleges, the farmers' institutes, the agricultural departments of the high schools, the university extension courses, etc. The experimental stations established in various states, in most cases as a result of the pressure brought to bear by the farming element upon state legislatures, is but an additional proof that the farmer is not only awakening, but that he is wide-awake to his interests. He is not content to let well enough alone, but wants to accomplish the best results possible. He wants to know something about the chemistry of the soil, about the ways and means of improving it, about diversified crops; in brief, he realizes that in order to increase and to improve his product he must combine brain and brawn, and work out his problems upon scientific principles.

In his annual report, Secretary of Agriculture Wilson tells us that "since October, 1908, the number of institutions in the United States giving instruction in agriculture has increased from 545 to 875. Departments of agricultural instruction have been established in thirty-eight public high schools. Two hundred and fourteen institutions now give teachers' training courses in agriculture. Farmers' institutes are now organized in every state. The attendance at the institute meetings was 2,395,908. Ninety-nine movable schools of agriculture were held, with an attendance of 65,977." These are interesting facts.

The Florist's Opportunity.

Now, what the farmer has accomplished, or is striving to accomplish, should not be beyond the reach of the horticulturist as well. If the farmer deems it wise and to his interests to send his son to an agricultural college, and to take advantage of a university extension course, often brought to his very doors, as has been the case in some western states, why should the horticulturist neglect his opportunity to broaden out and to equip the rising generation with a more thorough knowledge of the details of the profession in which they are engaged?

Our business has grown to gigantic proportions, and the capital invested is beyond the dream of the florist of only a generation ago. Just think of it! Twenty years ago, Boston supplied Chicago with cut flowers. Need I tell you that Chicago no longer depends upon the Hub for her supply of cut flowers? Our progress in a commercial way has indeed been phenomenal, but while we have ample reason to congratulate ourselves upon the success achieved, we must at the same time not overlook the fact that our business growth, unless we increase our means and efficiency, cannot possibly continue along successful lines.

Take the labor problem, for example. Look over any of our trade papers, and you will readily see that on an average there are three good positions open to every competent man. I think I am safe in making the assertion that the man who can manage a greenhouse and can produce the stock possesses an asset far greater than that of the boss who invests his money in the greenhouses, and worries about the weekly payroll besides. I will go further, and say that no profession (granted that we are ornamental horticulturists, and not mere tradesmen) is as much in need of professionals as the florists' profession is. Good and competent men, men who know how to do things, are wanted everywhere. Such men are scarce.

Horticultural Schools.

But to come to the point. Since we have reached the stage in our commercial development beyond which we cannot go unless we increase our means and improve our efficiency, is it not high time that we make the effort to have well equipped horticultural schools where young men, our future ornamental horticulturists, may take a course of training, and, like the wide-awake farmer, learn to know the details of their business more thoroughly than their predecessors? It seems to me that horticulture in general is of sufficient importance to assert its rights, like manual training or any profession taught in our special schools, colleges and universities.

A horticultural school, under the leadership of a competent head and a staff of well trained instructors, would not only teach the young man something about the elements of soil, phosphates, hydrogen, the proper use and application of fertilizers, the nature of pests and of fungi, and the right way of fighting and overcoming these evils, but it would also teach him system and method, two most potent factors in the success of any business.

We all know only too well the difference between intelligent, systematic work and that of the sloven, who, like the proverbial bee, keeps continually at it, but, unlike the industrious insect, achieves but poor results.

System and method are indisputably the means that were in a great measure responsible for the success of many of our prominent growers of today. Peter Henderson represented a striking example of what system could accomplish in a business way, and no less an authority than the great English peer, Gladstone himself, tells us that "the man with a method and system accomplishes more in a week than the sloven will in a month."

Modern Business Requirements.

Our business demands that we devise means and ways of conducting it in a business way. We can no longer remain passive to our own interests, nor dare we ignore the methods which the progressive and wide-awake farmer sees fit to employ in order to adapt himself to the exacting business conditions that confront him today.

The cry is already heard that the "big fellows" are swallowing up the little ones. Translated into other words, it simply means that the progressive horticulturist is forging ahead, while the one who cannot see beyond the limit of his own shadow is dropping by the roadside. It is merely a question of the survival of the fittest.

In a recent announcement in the Outlook, the editors promise for the near future a timely article on "The New Science of Business." "There is a new thing in the world of industry," they tell us. "It is the efficient application of exact scientific principles to present business methods. It has been applied in machine shops and foundries, in cotton mills and paper mills, in bleacheries and dye works, in printing and lithographing establishments, and in other businesses. The science of management can be applied to every department of every business."

There certainly cannot be any question about it, nor can any one doubt the urgent need of horticultural schools everywhere, if the scientific principles are to be applied in our greenhouses, as well as in the machine shops.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

THE retail seed season with southern California concerns is belated because of lack of rain.

Now that the holidays have passed, we all will settle down for the new seed selling season.

THE Holland salesmen have gone farther west this season than ever before. Several have been clear to the coast.

JOSIAH L. YOUNG, seedsman at Troy, N. Y., filed a petition in bankruptcy December 27. Assets are placed at $17,000.

IF all the reports of floods that have come from France this winter prove half true, the seed growers there have suffered severely.

THE California seed growers are not pleased with their start for 1911 crops; absence of normal rains is the principal cause of their anxiety.

FOR warehouse purchases, Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, has leased the third and fourth floors of the building at the southwest corner of Thirty-fifth and Morgan streets.

ON the boat from Hamburg arriving at New York December 27 there were only five cases of valley pips, but there were sixty-eight cases and 145 bags of seeds, with 550 bags of peas.

NOT a few subscribers save themselves the bother of annual renewal by sending The Review $2, $3, or sometimes $5, instead of the dollar-bill that insures fifty-two visits of the paper.

THE season's crop of lily of the valley pips is pretty much all in; the boat from Hamburg arriving at New York December 29 had only two consignments, 141 cases for C. F. Meyer and 103 cases for McHutchison & Co.

THE January general magazines carry scarcely any seed advertising. The trade seems to have come pretty unanimously to the conclusion that the orders obtained by the use of space at $450 per page cost more than they are worth.

THERE appears to be some surplus of tomato. A list to hand January 3 quotes some two dozen sorts in quantities up to 300 pounds of Sparks' Earliana. Also heavy quantities of watermelon, lesser quantities of cantaloupe, cucumber, squash, etc.

IN their foreign and colonial wholesale catalogue, received December 30, Watkins & Simpson, London, do not price peas, but say: "In consequence of the world-wide shortage of peas and many stacks being still unthrashed at time of going to press, it is impossible to fix values except by special quotation."

LILY OF THE VALLEY GIANT FORCING
We offer pre-eminently the finest Lily of the Valley in the market today. Pips selected with the greatest care. Cold Storage Valley, ready for forcing, per 1000, $15.00; 500 for $8.00.
Spiraea Gladstone For forcing, excellent stock $1.25 doz.; $9.00 100 secretary of state for incorporation papers for the Diamond Seed Co., with a capital stock of $25,000. The company will be organized by the election of W. J. Wood, a traveling salesman for the McGregor-Noe Hardware Co., as president; T. H. Sander, of the Springfield Seed Co., vice-president, and Everette Beasley, of the Winona Land & Loan Co., secretary. All of the officials of the company are business men who know the needs of the farmers of the Ozark country. They feel that the seed business in this section will support another company of this character and plan to commence business at once.

EARLY-BLOOMING HYACINTHS.

A Holland correspondent in an English trade paper has this to say:

"As has been noted in this paper formerly, the bulbs have especially good forcing qualities this year. December 14, at Bennebroek, a fine collection of hyacinths was in full flower, this being an unusually early date. Of course, the flower spikes were not so large as one may see them at the end of January, and the colors of some varieties were rather pale. The varieties were Yellow Hammer, White and Rose Cornelia, Wilhelm I. and L'Innocence. Reading this, some may ask: 'How is it possible to get these varieties in flower so early?' The growers have discovered that the bulbs grow better if exposed in a heated shed after being lifted, but they flower later, and just those varieties which had had the highest temperature were the latest. This was a sign for some of our grow-

ARTHUR T. BODDINGTON, Seedsman, 342 W. 14th Street NEW YORK CITY

A "WORTH WHILE" NOVELTY

THE OSTRICH PLUME CELOSIA "PRIDE OF CASTLE GOULD" is an entirely distinct type of the Celosia Pyramidalis Plumosa, and surpasses by far anything thus far placed on the market. This strain has through constant culture and careful selection and hybridization proven its superiority to anything similar ever offered.

The following four strong points speak for themselves:

HABIT OF PLANT. Pyramidal, compact growth of from two to three feet, with immense, extra fine-feathered heads, gives the plant a most striking and unique appearance.

MARKET VALUE. The flowers being of such bright and intense color, and the plant of erect growth and beautiful foliage, it creates the greatest admiration, wherever shown, and establishes a demand for itself that every plant-lover must appreciate.

COLOR. The following distinct colors are among these hybrids: Blood-red, real Carmine, Golden Yellow, Salmon, Deep Scarlet, Dark Orange and Wine Red. However, by variation, there will be found many more shades; the self-coloring will be surprising.

DECORATIVE VALUE. As a pot plant, with its quick-growing habit, we believe there is no finer plant known at the present time, wherefrom in the course of six months a most excellent stock of salable plants in every size can be obtained. As a bedding plant, it cannot be equaled by any other annual for its profusion of flowers and variety of striking colors, and we consider it the queen of all decorative annuals where showing groups are desired, and when given a fine, sunny exposure it will develop to its highest perfection.

We offer seed for the first year strictly from pot-grown plants, furnished by the introducers, Messrs. Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J.

All packets we send out will contain mixed seeds.

Price per Packet, 50c

ers that the late growth was the result of too much and too long heat. They reasoned that a better result would be obtained if the bulbs, just as they were taken up, were exposed to a slight artificial heat, and they proved to be right. The hyacinths which flowered December 14 were prepared in this way, and in the future the growers will sell bulbs flowering without exception by Christmas."

A RECORD IN VALLEY.

We recently received on two steamers within twenty-four hours shipments of lily of the valley pips totaling 1,033 cases, all consigned by Aug. Bitterhoff Sohn, Berlin, Germany, to us for reforwarding. This we believe makes a new record for one day's receipts.

Deliveries of valley pips are generally good this season, though the crop is short—not enough to go around. Prices were high and are continually rising in Germany upon high grades. Prospects for next season are that the crop will be smaller than usual, the demand larger than usual, with a higher range of prices prevailing and an unceasing demand for high grade pips.

Notwithstanding reports to the contrary, the highest grade of pips that Germany produces is now being shipped to this country. Medium grades go to Russia and Europe. The poorest are used almost exclusively in Germany.

SEEDS BY PHONE.

Telephone trade is an important part of the business in many other lines of merchandizing, and in fitting up their new store at 518 Market street, Philadelphia, the H. F. Michell Co. planned to adopt this up-to-date selling method to the seed trade. They installed a most complete, modern telephone system, embracing five trunk lines and fifty subsidiary lines, enabling customers to receive instant attention when calling for their number. In the 1911 catalogue they say:

Gloxinias, in Choicest Mixture, or in Separate Colors, as Blue, Red, White, Red with white edge, and Blue with white edge, 60c per doz.; $3.50 per 100; $30.00 per 1000.

Gloxinia, New Emperor (Gloxinia Hybrida Imperialis). A new type, a cross between Sinningia Regina and the best types of Hybrid Gloxinias. This not only covers a full range of colors as in the ordinary type of Gloxinia, but the foliage also is very ornamental, the leaves being of a rich bronzy red color, with strong projecting white veins. The flowers all stand erect, thus showing to best advantage. We offer in choice mixture, $1.25 per doz.; $8.00 per 100.

FANCY LEAVED CALADIUMS.

We have the largest stock in the world. Over 400 varieties, including not only all the good standard sorts, but many new varieties never offered in quantity before.

This is one of the most valuable plants for decoration of the Florists' store window during the summer months and during recent years we have sold many thousands for this purpose. We especially recommend the choice rare and new varieties at $15.00 per 100 for this purpose.

We offer special selections according to variety as follows:

Choice Standard Varieties. The finest collection ever offered at the price, $1.75 per doz.; $12.00 per 100; $100.00 per 1000.

Choice Rare and New Varieties. A splendid assortment, especially valuable for the retail florist, $2.25 per doz.; $15.00 per 100; $140.00 per 1000.

Rare New Varieties. The most recent introductions, $3.50 per doz.; $25.00 per 100.

Choice Mixture, $1.50 per doz.; $10.00 per 100; $80.00 per 1000.

Our New Quarterly Wholesale List, issued January first, contains a full list of seasonable Plants, Seeds, Bulbs, etc. Write for it if you have not already received a copy.

field in the last days of 1910, as witness the following from Austin, Tex.:

"The charter of the Cross S. Farming Co., Crystal City, Uvalde county, Texas, with an authorized issue of capital stock of $1,000,000, was filed December 23 in the office of the secretary of state. The purpose for which this corporation was formed is the growing, selling and purchasing of seeds, plants, trees, etc., for agricultural, horticultural and ornamental purposes, and to purchase and lease all lands necessary for that purpose. The incorporators are E. J. Buckingham, Carl F. Groos, H. L. Howard and Mason Williams. F. W. Mally, who recently resigned as entomologist of the state department of agriculture, is connected with this company."

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The business among the local trade since Christmas has been fairly good; of course, nothing like the rush of the previous week. From reports gathered Monday morning, January 2, in the wholesale district it seems that New Year's trade was good in cut flowers and in the decorating line. This is only among the uptown florists. The downtown florists say it was like any ordinary week and a little extra on Saturday and Sunday. There was also plenty of good stock to be had at any of our wholesale houses all through last week.

Plenty of roses in all grades and varieties are to be had at reasonable prices. Carnations are not overplentiful, but are enough for the demand, with $5 for top price. There have been more violets than the demand called for, at $1 per hundred for the best.

Bulbous stock is more plentiful, and last week found plenty of it in the market. Romans and Paper Whites sold well. Lily of the valley had a good call. Callas and Harrisii are coming in more plentifully and sell well. Sweet peas are in good demand.

The opening of the grand opera season this week at the Coliseum should make an extra demand for good stock. There are also several big social events for this week, which should make the first week in the new year a good one for the local florists, and it should continue so until Lent sets in.

Various Notes.

A new firm, known as the Alexander Floral Co., has started business in the county. They purchased four acres of land from George Waldbart on Olive street near the North and South road. They are building a house, 25x150 the material coming from the King Construction Co. John Wunderli is manager, and they will grow roses for this market.

Monday, December 26, there were plenty of double violets in the market, as two large shipments from the east were refused by several west end florists because they came too late for Christmas orders. The express company sold them to pay charges, and they were bought up by downtown florists.

Miss Rose Klosterman, the clever young artist with the Metropolitan Floral Co., says she had her hands full all through the holidays.

Ostertag Bros. furnished the decorations in the Coliseum for the opening of the Metropolitan Opera Co. Wild smilax and laurel were the principal decorations. A big force was at work Monday, January 2. This firm also had a number of clubs and downtown cafes to decorate for New Year's eve.

All the west end establishments have replenished their stock of plants since Christmas and the places look natural again. A goodly number of plants were also sold for New Year's.

W. C. Smith says the reason of the slump in California violets Christmas and the low prices compared with last year, was that the consignments last year were 9,000 and this year, 48,000, and the break had to come.

Fred Ammann created quite a lot of excitement in Edwardsville during Christmas week, according to the daily press reports from that city. All his deliveries were made in an undertaker's wagon, his own wagon having broken down from the strain of heavy deliveries. Every time the undertaker's wagon stopped with a delivery of flowers the neighbors thought someone had died and rumors of an epidemic were at once started, until an explanation had been made by the evening paper.

C. Young & Sons Co. furnished the bride's bouquet used each evening at the Century theater by Julian Eltinge, who uses fresh flowers at all of his performances in "The Fascinating Widow." This firm had the finest lot of azalea plants ever seen for the holidays, and all sold up at good, big prices.

Otto Sander made fine violet window displays last week. Mr. Sander is so well pleased with the business in his new location that he is fairly bubbling over with enthusiasm.

Word was received here Monday, January 2, that Fred H. Weber had been appointed state vice-president for eastern Missouri by President Asmus of the S. A. F. The appointment is a good one and will be well received by the local trade.

Alexander Waldbart & Sons, J. F. Windt, the Volkman Nursery Co., Alex. Johnson and the Townsend Floral Co. all report that their holiday business was large and, with some of them, beyond expectations.

The Retail Florists' Association held its regular monthly meeting Monday, January 2, in the Knights of Columbus hall, with a good attendance.

The Florists' Club will hold its New Year's meeting Thursday afternoon, January 12. The officers are making efforts to bring out a large attendance.

Surplus Bulbs

Easter comes April 16, and you will need blooming Hyacinths, Tulips, Narcissi, etc., at that time. There is plenty of time to force them for your Easter trade, and we have a fine lot of bulbs for the purpose—the surplus left from our fall trade. We'd rather sell these below cost than throw them out, and now is the time for you to get a real bargain. You know how low these prices are:

NAMED HYACINTHS, $4.00 per 100.
NAMED TULIPS, $1.50 per 100.
NAMED NARCISSI, $1.50 per 100.
MONSTER YELLOW CROCUS, 60c per 100.
LARGE NAMED CROCUS, 50c per 100.
MIXED HYACINTHS, $2.50 per 100.
MIXED TULIPS, $1.50 per 100.

If you are in need of a large quantity of any of these or other bulbs, write us. We can quote you prices that will interest you.

Write us, also, if you are interested in Asparagus and Maidenhair fern as house plants. We have a fine lot of them at very attractive prices.

MARKET PRICE OF LETTUCE.

I am growing a quantity of lettuce this year and am watching your market reports for prices, but do not know how many a 2-box strap contains. Will you kindly inform me about this? I am offered 75 cents per dozen for the leaf or curly lettuce, such as Grand Rapids and Hanson. Is this price all right?

J. M.

Chicago lettuce boxes hold about four and one-half pounds of lettuce, or fourteen to eighteen bunches. There seems to be no regular weight or number to the case, although a few growers see that each case has five pounds in it. Of course, the number of bunches depends on the size of the lettuce when cut. The price you mention I would consider all right for the early part of December, when you were getting it.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The after-the-holiday news is usually the nearest correct, so it may be well to add a little summary to last week's report. Christmas trade was better than last year, worse, or about as good, depending on whom you are talking to. There is no doubt that plant trade cut a larger figure than ever before, and at least one of the larger shops admitted that it was the best end of the Christmas business. All the shops, indeed, did a larger plant trade than usual.

The fact that plants were pushed so hard interfered with the cut flower end, up to Saturday, when plants took a back seat and little was heard of but flowers. Killarney and Richmond roses seemed to have the preference, chiefly because they were of such high quality and the prices were so nearly right, and because regular flower buyers find them such satisfactory house flowers, looking good after they are a week old, even if full-blown. Beauties and orchids were not so much in demand. In fact, Beauties have a hard time keeping up with the other roses grown here these days, and it seems that they must come down in price to do so, which they did at Christmas. Violets, while they sold cheaper than last year, did more than hold their own and seem in

¶I have tried all the various strains of Earliana on the market, and yours is the only one I have found that meets my idea of what a good early Tomato should be.
—Prof. W. F. Massey.

"Grower" writes, Nov. 13, 1910: "I think your strain the finest early variety ever produced for outdoor use, and a good heavy cropper. For forcing it is also very good. It seems to do better with two or three stems than with one alone. It can be planted much closer than other forcing varieties, and has not yet shown a fruit with me that had blossom end rot or dry rot, although other varieties around it have shown it more or less. It is remarkably solid and meaty inside, but has one fault like all Earlianas, having a thin skin. If kept too dry they show a softness, but they will stand more water and feed than any other variety I ever grew."

"Grower" runs 100,000 sq. ft. of glass and knows what a good tomato should be.

Send for our circular for further description and see Market Growers' Journal of Nov. 5.

If you want to be first on your market with perfect tomatoes that will bring a premium over top-notch prices, plant Langdon's Northern Adirondack Strain of Earliana Tomatoes. Equally good for field or forcing.

Prices: ½ oz., 40c; 1 oz., 60c; 2 oz., $1.20; 4 oz., $2.00; 8 oz., $3.50; 1 lb., $6.00.

better favor with the better trade than last year.

Carnations, which have been in short crop and for which high prices were asked, took quite a tumble before it was all over, and there were more than enough to go around. The better shops do not push carnations hard, stating that there is not enough profit in them, as the street stands seem to keep the prices down too low. It is also asserted that they are unsatisfactory, on account of the poor keeping qualities of some of the varieties now grown. Lilies sold unusually well for Christmas, and all other novelties sold about as usual.

The week between Christmas and New Year's was slower than usual, but on Saturday things awakened and there was some hustling, with the probability that a fine New Year's trade would be the result.

On the whole, the larger city shops undoubtedly did well and most of the complaint comes from the smaller dealers in and out of the city, who did not do as well as in other years. About one-half as many Christmas trees were lost as were sold, and few tree men made money. The commission men were stuck with holly and wreaths.

Various Notes.

G. P. Weaklen paid the penalty of overwork, being confined to bed from Monday until Saturday, when business forced him back, although far from well.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has been having a series of entertainments, including two large balls, which have kept her forces working night and day for the last two weeks. Now Mrs. Williams says it is not business she wants—it is just a little rest.

Randolph & McClements not only report the best Christmas they ever had, but say that there have been more social doings than in the last two years combined, and at this writing they are arranging one of the largest affairs that will probably take place this winter.

De Forest Ludwig, who is now a student at Cornell, has been home for the holidays. E. C. Ludwig dropped the Christmas tree and green business and gave his entire attention to his cut flower business, with most satisfactory results. Christmas was certainly good to him.

The express companies had the usual number of boxes of cut flowers which were refused on account of late deliveries.

The Pittsburgh Cut Flower Co. has been receiving some fine Yellow Trumpet narcissi and yellow and pink tulips. They are feeling good over their holiday trade.

Mrs. J. Elicker, of Homestead, Pa., wound up her New Year's business with a big bunch of funeral work, which would have made a big day's business alone.

To Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Gerwig, for Christmas, a daughter.

Howard Carney was one of the successful candidates in the Pittsburg Dispatch coupon contest, winning a player piano. Hoo-Hoo.

Schenectady, N. Y.—Clark Witbeck, a dealer in hardware and agricultural implements at 416-418 State street, has let a contract to Hitchings & Co. for the erection of a greenhouse, and intends to grow stock for commercial purposes.

Shakespeare is said to have possessed a brain vocabulary of about 15,000 words; Webster about 8000; while the average man has perhaps 1000. Now, the English language is simple as compared with the Japanese. The modern printer in Japan must make a selection from about 8000 characters to "set up" even an ordinary story. These characters stand for words and sometimes whole sentences. Just think it over before you begin to study that interesting language.

The Japanese children now study English in many schools in Japan and in the course of time it will not be so difficult to get together. Perhaps then we can go into the bulb fields and talk English to the growers. It can't be done now, however, and it takes a well educated Japanese to be a successful bulb merchant. Mr. Arai is one of the ablest men in the business; a man conversant with all the ins and outs, the people, their products, and the value of a lily bulb from A to Z. He is personally in the fields much of the time and among the growers all of the time. Horseshoe Brand Lily Bulbs are marketed under his personal supervision and they are the choicest from the Orient.

PACIFIC COAST.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

The Christmas flower business of this city was the best we have ever known. Weather conditions were favorable, although a little more sunshine would have been acceptable; however, we had no rain and none of the cold zero weather we read about our friends in the east having. The thermometer ranged from 45 to 55 degrees during the week.

Stock everywhere seemed to be fine, but scarce, with the possible exception of poinsettias, which were plentiful and extra fine, some having been seen eighteen inches in diameter. Carnations were unusually scarce, but some fine mums were offered in small quantities. Good pot plants seemed to be fairly plentiful, excepting cyclamen, and were in good demand. Prices were about as in previous years.

Various Notes.

Miss Giertz, manager of the Flower Shop, was ill at her home during last week with a severe attack of the grip. Mr. Lowe had charge of the business during her illness.

Van Slyke & Seamons grew a fine lot of Formosa lilies for the Christmas trade.

Tschunko has some nice callas.

Added to the Christmas rush, the California Florists received orders for a big funeral Saturday afternoon, December 24.

Mrs. Watson reports an exceptionally good Christmas trade. J. L. S.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The Christmas trade in San Francisco and vicinity was about equal in bulk to that of one year ago. The chief difference noted was that the demand was to a great extent for smaller and cheaper articles. This entailed a great amount of extra work, with but little extra compensation. The supply of flowers, with hardly any exceptions, was adequate for the demand. The public showed peculiar preferences and the highest priced stock was the last to be sold. Fancy baskets filled with ferns or flowering plants moved faster than they have for several seasons and poinsettias in pots did not sell so quickly. There was an abundance of carnations and chrysanthemums, but the flower buyers did not take as kindly to them as they did formerly. Roses, except the poorer stock, were only in fair supply and were easily cleaned up. Valley, daffodils, Lilium Harrisii, narcissi and cut cyclamens were plentiful enough for all comers.

California red berries and all sorts of greens shared a large portion of the orders. In the bay cities the conditions were similar to those in San Francisco and a relative amount of business was done. New Year's orders were good and everyone seems to be satisfied with the ending made in the year 1910.

Various Notes.

L. G. Colyn, representing Colyn Bros., of Holland, was in town in the interest of next season's bulb business.

Domoto Bros. have over 50,000 Lilium Harrisii in good shape for next Easter's trade.

Frank Schlotzhauer, of the Francis Floral Co., is now associated with the Sievers Floral Co., on Powell street.

PORTLAND, ORE.

The Market.

Several weeks preceding the holidays registered a laxity in business, which is the usual proceeding, but it afforded the florists time to prepare for the coming rush, in the greenhouses as well as the stores. The holiday business was a pronounced success on all sides. Everybody seems satisfied, with a substantial increase of about twenty per cent, which is not only attributed to the growth of the city, but to the education of the flower-buying public for a better grade of stock; hence, a better price was realized all around.

On account of Christmas being on Sunday, and celebrated legally on Monday, the business was distributed over several days, which gave the florists more time to each customer and to replenish the stock. Poinsettias were the most in demand, with Lorraine begonias, cyclamen, and basket arrangements as close followers in favor. What little stock remained when the mist rolled away was only equivalent to a normal day's supply.

Carnations were the principal cut flowers, especially red and dark colors; in fact, the demand exceeded the supply. Roses were of fine grade and produced top prices. Mums were limited in supply and brought the maximum price of $9 per dozen.

Holly was a scarcity, usually sold by the pound, bringing 75 cents to $1 per pound for the fine English variety. Native violets were scarce, but those of California production were plentiful and of fair quality and sold readily. Green goods were plentiful, and considerable decorating was done on all sides.

The shipping trade was far in excess of former years, which shows the development of the inland empire, and the demand is increased accordingly.

Various Notes.

Martin & Forbes report a clean-up in every detail and express entire satisfaction with the results. Their new auto facilitated the delivery service, to the satisfaction of the house and customers.

The Tonseth Floral Co. was also pleased with results, which far exceeded former years.

Clarke Bros. report that business so far exceeded their expectations that they were swamped, which necessitated renting additional space as a depot for delivery.

Max Smith says he was delighted and had all the business he could handle in such a short time and space.

Lubliner & Trinz, of Chicago, opened a temporary store for the holidays, but inability to secure stock hampered their business considerably.

Mrs. L. W. McCoy, of Seattle, is spending a few days in the city and reports business satisfactory.

A. W. Bridgman, of Victoria, B. C., spent a few days here last week looking over the market.

W. T. Jackson, of Stevenson, Wash., also dropped in on the local market.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Officers for 1910-11: Pres., W. P. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Vice-pres., E. S. Welch, Shenandoah, Ia.; Sec'y, John Hall, Rochester, N. Y.; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester, N. Y. Thirty-sixth annual meeting, St. Louis, June, 1911.

THE government intends to put through a law conferring arbitrary power to prohibit importations of nursery stock from countries that permit the exportation of infested plants.

A LAD of 18 years has been recommitted to the California state reformatory on a charge of defrauding the Oregon Nursery Co., collecting commissions on fictitious orders.

GRIFFING BROS. Co., nurserymen at Jacksonville and Macclenny, Fla., are about to start a new nursery in Texas. John Feister, formerly a foreman at the main nursery, will have charge of the new establishment.

THE U. S. Board of General Appraisers has sustained the protest of Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., against the action of the collector at Rochester, who assessed duty on an importation of evergreen seedlings.

SPECIAL proceedings have been brought in probate court at Sandusky, O., by a deputy state inspector of nurseries against J. M. Hendrickson, John Huber and August Huber, Berlin township growers, because, it is alleged, they refused to obey orders of the state department and destroy trees affected with peach yellow. Over 7,000 trees in Erie county were condemned by the officials.

IT is reported from Washington that a radical enlargement of the scope of the nursery stock bill by the house committee on agriculture is probable. The committee has already ordered a favorable report on the bill, which authorizes the secretary of agriculture to quarantine against any country or any part of a country where dangerous diseases of nursery stock exist. Because of recent reports from government officials, it is thought the committee will probably amend the bill so as to include all kinds of trees, shrubs and vegetables.

RETROSPECT AND PROSPECT.

How Things Look to Nurserymen.

With many nurserymen the year 1910 was the best ever, but the consensus of opinion is that 1911 will be better yet. In most cases all fear of general overproduction has vanished and increased quantities of stock are being prepared, in anticipation of a lively market and stable if not advancing prices.

Here is what some nurserymen say:

Greening Nursery Co., Monroe, Mich.

Prospects for 1911 look good to us. There is no question but that there is a big boom on, especially in this state, in the matter of fruit tree planting, and we expect to reap the results of this. We have a fine stock coming on for next year, the largest we have ever had, and unless we have some bad luck, or bad weather, we do not see but what 1911 will be our banner year. We have an increase of business thus far over last year of about thirty per cent.

Franklin Davis Co., Baltimore.

The business in 1910 was all that we could look for; prices were good and the demand for stock heavy. For spring we believe all first-class stock, and many of the lighter grades, will be cleaned up; in fact, for 1911 we see no

Roses for 1911

DARK PINK KILLARNEY

A sport of Killarney, similar in habit, but more highly colored than Killarney at its best. When Killarney is pale, Dark Pink Killarney is bright and cheerful.

Grafted Plants only, from 2¼-in. pots, $20.00 per 100, $180.00 per 1000.

LADY CROMWELL

A shell-pink sport of My Maryland that for pleasing color is unsurpassed. A wonderful producer, and a color that sells.

Grafted Plants only, from 2¼-in. pots, $30.00 per 100, $250.00 per 1000.

DOUBLE PINK KILLARNEY

Originating with Robert Scott & Sons, who supply us the wood for grafting. Stronger in growth than Killarney, and with at least ten more petals. A wonderful improvement.

Grafted Stock only, $30.00 per 100, $250.00 per 1000.

PRINCE DE BULGARIE

The best prices for cut flowers should be the standard for judging Roses, and this Rose has been the money-getter. Strong and vigorous in growth, and with its beautiful shell-pink bloom, it has sold on sight. One of the best Roses grown.

Grafted Plants, $20.00 per 100, $180.00 per 1000.
Own Root, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.

MRS. AARON WARD

By far the most pleasing of the Yellow Roses now on the market. A general favorite, and one which will be widely grown, for yellow Roses are in demand.

Grafted Plants, $25.00 per 100, $200.00 per 1000.
Own Root, $12.00 per 100, $100.00 per 1000.

MELODY

We have reserved for our orders own-root plants of this choice novelty. No grafted plants.

From 2¼-in. pots, $30.00 per 100, $250.00 per 1000.

RADIANCE

Strong in growth, and making plenty of stem. Cerise pink in color.

Grafted Plants, $18.00 per 100, $150.00 per 1000.
Own Root, $10.00 per 100, $90.00 per 1000.

KILLARNEY, WHITE KILLARNEY, RICHMOND, MY MARYLAND, KAISERIN AUGUSTA VICTORIA

These are the old standards, and we are headquarters for young stock.

Grafted Plants, $15.00 per 100, $120.00 per 1000.
Own Root, 2½-inch, $6.00 per 100, $50.00 per 1000.

A. N. PIERSON, Inc., Cromwell, Conn.

reason at present why the business should not be as good as 1910. Nursery stock, especially apple and peach, is in great demand, and scarce. Cherries are going a little slowly, with not much demand.

Chase Nursery Co., Huntsville, Ala.

The nurserymen of this section have had a busy season, with indications for a brisk winter and spring business. There seems to be a good, healthy tone to the nursery business the country over. We are now working up our final counts preparatory to publishing our January surplus list. The hundreds of inquiries for this list indicate a strong demand for nursery stock in all lines and we believe that the close of the season will find but little merchantable stock in surplus.

GRIFFINGS BUY OUT GATES.

The Port Arthur Nursery Co., of Port Arthur, Tex., a John W. Gates proposition, was sold December 27 to the Griffing Bros. Co., of Jacksonville, Fla. This property was formerly known as the experimental farm. A few years ago it was acquired by John W. Gates, who organized the Port Arthur Nursery Co. Much work has been done on the property and many expensive buildings of concrete have been put up since this company had possession.

The Griffing Bros. Co. has extensive nurseries in Florida and branches in other states. They will make a specialty at Port Arthur of ornamental trees, roses and oranges. The transaction is said to have involved approximately $100,000.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Christmas, 1910, was all that could be desired in a business way, and some of the florists say that it went ahead of last Christmas. Plant trade had the run, although there was a good demand for cut flowers, which could not be had in quantities to go around. Since Christmas, the market has been steady, but nothing rushing, as New Year's trade is not nearly so large as Christmas; still, quite a good business was reported by the stores, where cut flowers sold well, but at prices not nearly as high.

The weather was just the opposite of that of a week ago, and it was warm as a spring day, which made transient trade good. It also made good business for cemetery florists, who a week ago were all snowed in, with the temperature around zero.

New Year's evolved the anticipated volume of business and held its reputation as a good Saturday. Up to Friday morning there was no sign of the holiday celebration, but with mild, sunny weather and safe deliveries, the plantsmen were busy, and sold out everything good that had been left over from Christmas. Many handsome combination plant baskets of various flowers were utilized as New Year greetings. Cut flowers were more plentiful and the prices dropped accordingly, with a consequent encouraging demand.

Various Notes.

The death of John L. Turner, of the Griffith & Turner Co., occurred December 30. Particulars will be found in the obituary column on another page of this issue. Q.

MONTGOMERY, ALA.

Business at Christmas exceeded our anticipations; it was fully forty per cent ahead of last year. Everything in the line of cut flowers was eagerly grabbed up and more could have been sold had the supply been greater.

The Rosemont Gardens, W. B. Paterson, proprietor, had crowded the large conservatory in the rear of the store on Dexter avenue and everything except Lorraine begonias, which seem to have lost their popularity here, was cleaned up. Azaleas, of which they had 600, together with a good supply of poinsettias, Primula obconica, Romans and Paper Whites in pans, ferns, palms, etc., brought good prices. Made up baskets, which heretofore have been slow sale, were sold as fast as put on display. Cut flowers, of which they had a large supply, mostly home grown, sold at excellent prices. Holly wreaths, but recently offered here, sold clean, which was a revelation, as the holly grows wild all around this section of the country. Business has been remarkably good since Christmas and shows the wonderful growth of the taste for flowers in the south.

W. C. C.

Altavista, Va.—David Harris, who during the last year was manager of the Glennova Gardens, at Huntsville, Ala., has now organized a business which will be conducted here under the name of the Altavista Truck & Floral Co. He has been laying out vegetable grounds on a farm north of town and expects to build greenhouses later.

CARNATION DOROTHY GORDON. FULL SIZE

When in Philadelphia, Be Sure to Look Us Up

—the way one prominent Eastern grower expresses his opinion of our grand new Carnation. And, mind you, he says this after giving it a trial himself—he isn't taking anybody else's word for it.

He says further that he wishes he had a larger stock of "Dorothy Gordon" and speaks favorably of its very large flowers, long stems and the enormous quantity which his range is producing.

Another prominent carnation house, which grows most of the leading sorts, has planted "Dorothy Gordon" extensively, and speaks very highly of it, expressing satisfaction with both the quality and quantity of its flowers.

Remember what we've told you before about "Dorothy Gordon"; color clear pink, a shade darker than pink Enchantress; flowers large, averaging over three inches in diameter; form and substance of the very best. Bears at least one-third more flowers than Enchantress, and brings regularly 50% more money.

We are now growing a splendid but limited stock of rooted cuttings and offer these at $6.00 per 100; $50.00 per 1000

Specify your wants now, as our growing capacity is limited, and we are booking orders for many thousands of rooted cuttings each week.

NEW BEDFORD.

The Market.

Christmas trade was a hummer. All report that it was even better than 1909. Plants sold the best, including begonias, cyclamens, azaleas, ferns, primroses and a host of other flowering plants. All these were in good demand. Some nice Firefly were seen and they were snapped up at once. Cut flowers were in quite good demand, though the prices were rather high. Carnations were scarce. They retailed at from $1 to $1.50 per dozen. A good call for red carnations found only a limited quantity of them. Roses of the best quality retailed at $3 per dozen, and some at $2.50 per dozen. Violets sold at $2.50 per hundred blooms, and were in demand.

The weather for delivery before Christmas day was anything but ideal. It rained, but was quite warm. Christmas day, however, the weather had cleared up and it was a little cooler. Taken all in all, Christmas, 1910, was away ahead of last year.

Evergreen wreaths sold well; most of them were laurel, holly and combination wreaths. Princess pine was quite scarce on account of the snow, although some wreaths were seen of this material and also ground pine. Prices ranged from 25 cents upward to $2. Christmas trees sold fairly well from 50 cents up. Paper Whites sold at 60 cents per dozen, retail. Everyone was well satisfied with business at Christmas, although somewhat tired.

Flowers continue scarce. Carnations have been retailing at 75 cents to $1 per dozen the last week, with roses from $1.50 to $2 per dozen, retail. Stevia and candytuft also help out a good deal.

Various Notes.

S. S. Peckham had some fine cyclamen for Christmas, which sold readily at good prices. Some nice ardisias were also seen.

FINE FERNS

Ready For Immediate Retail Sale

We have an exceptionally fine and large stock of Ferns in the following varieties first-class plants of exceedingly good value—plants that will please the most critical buyers, both in regard to quality and value.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima (improved). The finest of this type—never showing a Boston frond; has not reverted in the last four years. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.; 8-in., $12.00 per doz.; large specimens in 12-in. pans, $3.00 to $5.00 each.

Nephrolepis Elegantissima Compacta. This bears the same relation to Elegantissima that Scottii does to Bostoniensis. It is a dwarf, compact plant, especially fine in the small sizes. Fine plants, 4-in. pots, $3.00 per doz.; 6-in., $6.00 per doz.

Nephrolepis Scholzeli. Fine plants, 3½-in. pots, $2.50 per doz.; 6-in pans, $6.00 per doz.; 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz

Nephrolepis Bostoniensis. Extra strong plants, 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz

Nephrolepis Scottii. 8-in. pans, $12.00 per doz.

Small Ferns for Fern Pans. Best and hardiest varieties, assorted: Pteris Mayii, Wimsetti, Adiantoides, Aspidium Tsussimense, Crytomium Falcatum, etc. Strong plants, 2¼-in. pots, $3.50 per 100.

CROTONS. Nice assortment, well colored, 5-in., $9.00 per dozen.

The Market.

Roses are plentiful and of good quality. Carnations are in good supply, with prices somewhat lower since last week. Sweet peas are to be had for everybody, in pink and white, with extra long stems, and wholesale at 75 cents per hundred. We have no tulips as yet. Quite a lot of Christmas surplus stock has been worked up in funeral designs, for which there was a good demand..

Various Notes.

D. Freudenthal reports an excellent business, both in cut flowers and potted plants. He has been quite busy with funeral work the last few days. He has just installed a fine mahogany ribbon case, which adds much to his store.

By the looks of Miss J. Murray's show window this week, she must have had an extra good business.

Mrs. Eberfield is handling some fine stock of roses and carnations in her new store on Walnut street. All of her flowers come from Chicago.

Samuel Murray's show window has quite a forsaken look this week, compared with Christmas week.

Mrs. Fred Schwan is bringing in some excellent single violets at present. She is quite successful in growing this variety, which she claims originally was imported from France. D. Freudenthal takes all she grows and finds a ready sale for them. It is impossible to buy a single plant of these violets from Mrs. Schwan, as she wants to keep the entire stock herself.

S. B. Ayers, of Independence, Mo., is talking of building two more greenhouses for cut flowers the coming summer. He has plenty of land, so that he can let the good work go on.

The Humfeld-Orear Floral Co. has been quite busy. Thursday, December 29, they had a large decoration at the Baltimore hotel. They also had a wedding decoration in the east part of the city the same day.

The Alpha Floral Co. must be looking forward to a great deal of funeral work, judging from the looks of the large lot of sphagnum moss just received. W. H. H.

Athens, Ill.—J. H. Grohe says that the long dry spell is making the growers in this section much trouble. He is forced to buy water for his greenhouse stock at 50 cents per barrel.

GERANIUMS

A fine lot of young Geranium plants, just right to grow along into the finest kind of plants for spring sales. The finest varieties in their respective colors for bedding.

Marvel, dark red; A. Ricard, orange scarlet; Decorator, the improved Ricard; M. de Castellane, cherry red; Jean Viaud, pink; Castries, pink; Beaute de Poitevine, salmon; Countess de Harcourt, white. From 2-inch pots, $2.50 per 100; $20.00 per 1000.

By William Scott

SECOND EDITION

THOROUGHLY REVISED AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE

NO SCIENCE, BUT LOTS OF PRACTICAL COMMON SENSE

"I have several times been consulted by those who would make a beginning in the Florists' business. In each case I have said that the first step is to subscribe for a Trade Paper, and the next to procure a copy of the Florists' Manual." —J. A. VALENTINE, Pres. Park Floral Co., Denver, Colo.

"Find enclosed $5 for the Florists' Manual, by William Scott. It is the best book of the age on commercial floriculture and should be in the home of every gardener."—CONRAD FORBACH, Buffalo, N. Y.

No dry-as-dust botanical classifications, but tells you just how to produce marketable plants and cut flowers in the best and cheapest way.

PELARGONIUMS.

PANSY GERANIUM, MRS. LAYAL.
This beautiful pelargonium is of the easiest growth, dwarf in habit, and literally covered with flowers all the time; and as it requires little or no attention, it is invaluable as a window plant. The coloring and marking of the flowers are most extraordinary, light pink, white, dark purple, black, etc., almost rivaling the pansy in uniqueness of flower. It is this combination of coloring which obtained for it the popular name of pansy geranium. Strong plants, $5.00 per 100.
J. W. Davis, 225 W. 16th St., Davenport, Iowa.

Pelargoniums, 2½-in., $5.00 100; 3½-in., bushy stock, $8.00 100. Clean and ready for a shift. Our selection from 80 best new and old varieties. No list. Cash, please.

Greenhouse Heating.

As the days begin to lengthen the cold begins to strengthen. How about the coal bins? Are they full?

A QUERY FROM NEW ZEALAND.

I am in business in Christchurch, New Zealand, where the climate and other conditions are unlike those in the United States, and where some of the terms used in the trade are different from the American forms of expression.

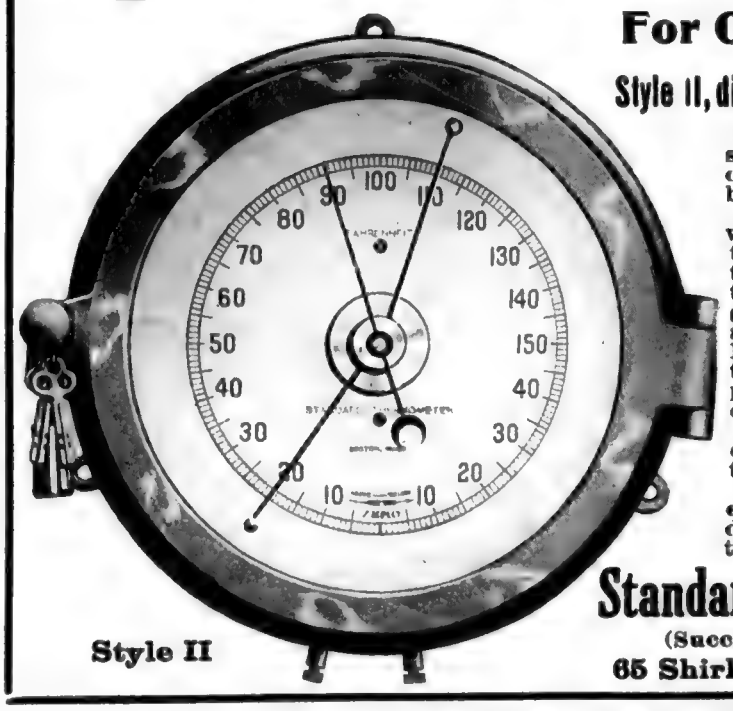
I have read in The Review that the flow pipe, in hot water heating, should rise at once to the highest point of the system and then gradually fall to the return pipes. Does this apply to warmer climates than yours generally is? Is what you call zero 32 degrees Fahrenheit, the same as we use, or is it simply another term for freezing? The degrees below zero mentioned in your paper seem extremely low to me, where about 15 degrees of frost are the record cold weather. I have all my pipes under side benches, rising to the far end, the boiler pit being six feet deep and at one end of the range. As we have practically no snow to melt, would there be any advantage in raising the flow pipes to the eaves, as you sometimes recommend? I grow a general run of stock for retail and wholesale trade—not one particular line. J. H. R.

The temperature referred to as "zero" is in the Fahrenheit scale 32 degrees below the freezing point. It is not uncommon to have the mercury drop to that point during the winter in the northern half of the United States. In some sections, indeed, it occasionally goes down to 10 to 15 degrees and even 30 to 40 degrees below zero.

The effect of running the flow pipes overhead is to hasten the circulation, and if they run "downhill" it is still more improved. These points are of less importance when the boiler is below the level of the returns and when large pipes are used.

PIPING FOR A SIDE BENCH.

I should like to get a little information in regard to my benches. How high should the raised benches be when next to the wall? In my greenhouse, one of the benches is level with the cast-iron plate and only three inches from the wall, and in cold weather it is too cold for the plants next to the glass. The bench is made of cement. The house is steam heated, with two mains overhead and returns under the benches. Do you think it will be safe to add one return along the glass, and resting on the cast-iron plate? The house will be for roses and carnations and is divided in two. C. L.



It is desirable to have the beds two feet lower than the plate for carnations and even lower than this for roses. There should be a space between the wall and the bench. The placing of an extra return will aid materially in keeping out frost, and if the bench is dropped one and one-half feet or more it will do no harm.

TWO KANSAS HOUSES.

Will you please tell me how to pipe my new house with 2-inch pipe for hot water? The house is 11x75 feet, eight feet to the ridge and five feet to the plates, with two feet of glass in the south side and the ends boarded up three feet. I want it piped for 50 degrees in zero weather.

This new house is on the south side of my other house, which is piped with sixteen 1½-inch returns, eight on each side. There are two cast-iron manifolds on each side, and each coil of eight pipes is fed by one 2-inch flow pipe. Could I replace them with one 4-inch flow pipe under the north bench, letting the water flow through the manifold under the south bench, through the partition into the small house, and return through the partition at the east end of the house in a 2½-inch manifold under the south bench of the large house, and then into the boiler?

FOR GREENHOUSE WORK

ILLINOIS MALLEABLE IRON CO.

1801-1825 DIVERSEY BOULEVARD—CHICAGO

TO MAINTAIN AN EVEN TEMPERATURE IN YOUR GREENHOUSES, USE A

Foster Pressure Regulator

With this simple device attached to your steam main just inside the greenhouse the pressure on the heating coils will be absolutely constant, anywhere from 1 to 15 pounds (whatever the grower sets the Regulator at), no matter how the pressure on the boilers runs up and down.

If the weather changes, or the sun heat varies, instead of turning on more pipes, just turn a nut on the Regulator, and get more steam, or less steam, at once. Made in sizes from ¾-inch to 10-inch just for this work.

"The Foster Pressure Regulators which have been installed in our greenhouses are giving perfect satisfaction."—Peter Reinberg, Chicago, March 16, 1910.

The boiler is a traction boiler and is rated at twelve horse-power. It holds three barrels of water. Is it large enough for the two houses? It is tapped in the dome for a 2½-inch pipe, and there are two taps for 2-inch returns. If I tap the dome for a 4-inch flow, will the two 2-inch taps have to be enlarged?

To heat the house 11x75 feet, use one 2½-inch flow pipe and six 2-inch returns. Or, if it is preferred to use 2-inch pipe for the flows, two should be run on the plates and each will feed three 2-inch pipes, under the benches or on the walls.

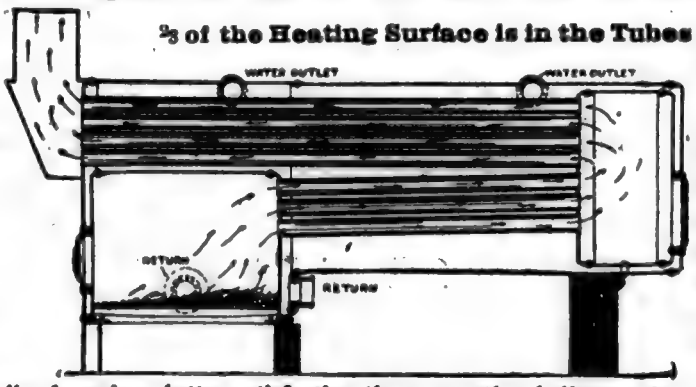
Unless the returns are several feet above the top of the boiler, it will not be advisable to change the piping in the large house as proposed, as the circulation in the small house would then be poor. Moreover, if the 4-inch main is run along the north wall, it would only take the place of two of the 1½-inch returns.

There is nothing which in any way indicates the size of the larger house, but the boiler will be able to furnish heat for 1,200 to 1,500 square feet of hot water radiation, except that it should be tapped for another 2½-inch flow pipe and an additional 2½-inch return.

THE BOILER ABOVE GROUND.

I have under way here, in eastern Iowa, a new greenhouse, 16x50. The boiler will be on a level with the house, which runs east and west. The side walls are six feet high, with three feet of glass, and the height to the ridge is ten feet. Both gables are glass. How many 2-inch pipes will be needed on each side wall, to heat the house to not less than 50 degrees, night temperature? What size of flow pipe will be required? C. P.

While it would be better if the heater could be below the level of the greenhouse floor, it will answer if two 2½-inch flows can be run, with a slight slope, eighteen inches below the ridge to the farther end of the house, where they should connect with coils containing four 2-inch pipes on each wall. The coils should be kept up as near the level of the plate as possible. If the system is run under pressure, it will answer if only one 2½-inch flow is used, with eight 2-inch returns.



Reading, Pa.—The greenhouses on the Rickenbach estate, in Bern township, have been destroyed by fire.

The woven jacket construction makes a stronger hose than can be obtained from cotton duck, and absolutely precludes the possibility of cover opening at seam—a common cause of failure of hose made on cotton duck. This construction also gives a more flexible hose and reduces the possibility of kinking.

"Magic" Hose is guaranteed to stand a pressure of 500 pounds per square inch, although its bursting pressure is far in excess of this.

The regular meeting of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society was held December 29. The prize of the evening, given by Abel Weeks, for the best eighteen blooms of carnations, was won by Wm. Pope, gardener to H. Darlington, Mamaroneck, N. Y. Mr. Weeks also made a splendid display of carnations, staging twelve vases in twelve varieties.

New officers were elected for the year, as follows: President, John Brunger, gardener to I. N. Seligman, Irvington, N. Y.; vice-president, George Wittlinger, gardener to Miss Blanche Potter, Ossining, N. Y.; secretary, E. W. Neubrand, Tarrytown, N. Y.; treasurer, Charles Weeks, Tarrytown, N. Y.; corresponding secretary, George McIntosh, Eastman Place, Tarrytown, N. Y.

The dinner committee reported that the annual dinner will be held at the Hotel Tarry, Wednesday evening, January 18, at 7 o'clock. W. S.

Coldwater, Mich.—Van Aken Bros., who have an establishment here and another at Elkhart, Ind., report that Christmas business was better than last year at both places. Plants sold best, at 50 cents to $2. "About all," they say, "that we florists can get in small towns is $1 for carnations and $2 for roses."

The Market.

New Year's business was nothing compared with that of Christmas, and one hardly expects it to be. During the Christmas week it was rush from early morning till late at night, getting out orders. Naturally, after such a rush, one gets pretty well tired out, so that a little rest does not come amiss. Taking business on the whole throughout the month of December, it was gratifying. The first part of the month was a little slow, but this gave ample time to get in shape for the holiday rush. Cloudy weather prevailed during the first part of the month; this, however, was instrumental in holding crops back and giving them a chance to come in abundantly for Christmas.

Stock at the present time could not be in better condition, and there is a good supply. Carnations are coming in well developed, with long, stiff stems, and roses likewise. The condition of stock is such that it is a pleasure to receive and fill orders.

Business at present is not quite as good as it ought to be; it appears people must have squandered their surplus cash for the holidays and are now waiting to catch up again before investing in flowers.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Now that the rush is over, it is to be hoped that stock will be of the good old kind again, with Beauties that are not blue and carnations that are wide-awake. Holiday trade in this town was the best ever, and were it not for the fact that those retailers who have tender consciences feel like hold-up men because they must ask high prices for stock that is in some cases a week old, we would all be smiling. Cut flowers were in the usual big demand, but the sale of plants is steadily increasing and it was the florists who had a good variety of plants and baskets at reasonable prices who did the big business.

Reports from all quarters, both wholesale and retail, show a decided increase over last year in amount of Christmas sales. One noticeable feature was the poor demand for violets, but this was overcome by the call for corsages of other flowers.

With the holiday stock disposed of, the quality of the flowers now coming in is first-class. With the exception of Romans, Paper Whites and lilies, nothing is going to waste.

The scarcity of ground pine created a big demand for laurel, and thousands of yards were used. Holly was good this year, being well berried and in general a good green. Mistletoe was a drug on the market, being so plentiful that it was on sale at every street corner.

Various Notes.

Happy New Year! Nineteen-ten is a year of the past, but it left a pleasant taste. Detroit has grown immensely and now ranks as a big city. No doubt, all of the florists have benefited by this growth and prosperity. Several new retail stores have entered our midst, to take care of the surplus or overflow of trade. Thanks to the many debutantes, the social season so far was a very lively one, and the florists again reaped the benefit. The indications are that the year just began will be another winner. Many large factories and other buildings are in course of construction, society's columns are well filled, and what better signs do we need? The auto factories are working overtime.

One of the largest recent real estate transactions was the sale of the Breitmeyer building by the Breitmeyer estate. Philip Breitmeyer immediately leased the whole building for a long period of years. Breitmeyer's will occupy their present beautiful store until a new store and conservatory at 26 and 28 Broadway, adjoining the present location, are completed.

Autos played a prominent part in the Christmas delivery here this year. In fact, the florist having hundreds of deliveries to make in several days would have been at a considerable disadvantage without the auto. On such occasions, and at the time of the year when roads are so slippery and pulling is bad, one good-sized auto delivery wagon can readily do the work of three one-horse delivery outfits, and still have time to spare. Many taxicabs were also pressed into service for cut flower deliveries, but their hire is so costly that it is almost prohibitive.

E. C. Fetters was kept busy December 26 with numerous orders for the debutantes.

J. F. Sullivan found his elaborate new display ice-chest a big silent salesman during the rush.

Even Frank Holznagle, Michael Bloy, Robert Watson and others in the outskirts felt the rush. H. S.

THE RETAIL FLORIST.....

A "DIFFERENT" WINDOW.

So many retail florists mass their windows with cut flowers that the public can not fail to be appreciative of the occasional variation.

As a study in harmonious arrangement, as well as for sake of variety, the window recently shown by A. C. Sinram, at Denver, will not fail to interest the retail florists. The accompanying illustration, while prepared from an excellent photograph, fails to give the effect of depth, which was obtained in the arrangement itself. The idea was a semi-tropical scene, running back along the sides of the window and across the back, so that a middle ground of some considerable proportions was obtained. Kentias formed a background, with araucarias and Ficus pandurata. Green sheet moss was used to cover the uneven, rocky floor of the window. Adiantum Croweanum, Asparagus plumosus and Rex begonias were placed at intervals, the pots set beneath the moss, and cattleyas were apparently growing on the trees on each side of the window, these trees in reality being the regular column supports of the steel-framed building, covered with cork bark and southern moss. Paper White narcissi were growing in a pond in the center of the window, the water being supplied by a waterfall just above.

SOME DUTCH WINDOWS.

A Dutch Bulb Garden.

Now that the season for bulbs is well on, some native settings for them may help sales.

The corner of a Dutch bulb garden might be laid out, if there are any facilities for water about the window. A canal which runs diagonally across the window or straight toward a mirror may be rigged out, and the banks on both sides lined with heavy borders of the various kinds of narcissi or hyacinths. Back from this border, set on a patch of green, place growing bulbs in pans and delft blue dishes. In a conspicuous place fill a wooden shoe with hyacinths. Or, if it is possible to get hold of an unusually large wooden shoe, fill it with growing hyacinths and surround it with smaller wooden shoes, filled with Romans or freesias. On the canal place a birch bark canoe with a red sail. Load the canoe with plants in bloom or with cut flowers.

A Cottage and Other Features.

If you have some particularly fine, large hyacinths, plant a good sized group of them behind a tiny Dutch cottage, somewhere near some water. Whatever is attempted in the way of a garden or field should have a suggestion of water, or a windmill in the distance. Browns and grays are good colors for constructing whatever is decided on in the way of buildings. It is well, also, to keep the size and position of these subordinate and the flowers prominent.

A good color scheme for such a window is blue, white and yellow for one day, yellow for another, and red or red and white for another, while no one could censure your choice of a red and yellow window. If the latter is attempted, it will be best to keep to the coppery reds found in so many tulips, rather than to the crimson reds commonly found among the hyacinths. If too many narcissi are at hand, have a border of as many varieties as can be obtained. Have the accessory pieces of narcissi, too. Arrange for a press notice of your special display.

Bouquets of Bulbous Flowers.

Any made-up work which accompanies the Dutch bulb display should partake of the same style of arrangement. Have a bride's bouquet of Roman hyacinths. Let it be round and old-fashioned, with an outside border of either pink or blue. For a tie have a row of rosettes of chiffon under the edge, close against the stems. To each rosette of chiffon attach a streamer. Place the bouquet in a tall, slender glass vase and the streamers will hide the vase. Bouquet holders might be added, also. Rainbow colors of violet, pink and green may be used in rotation among the chiffon rosettes.

This style of bouquet is also appropriate for a debutante. A card explaining briefly the use for the bouquet should be attached conspicuously in the window.

A bridesmaid's bouquet of Paper White narcissi might accompany the bride's bouquet, and be a help in planning a yellow and white bridal outfit. Yellow rosettes and streamers may finish the narcissus bunch. These flowers pack in a round bunch if one is not careful in the construction. Pad in between the stems with some stiff foliage, to keep the stalks apart.

THE BUSINESS SIDE OF THINGS.

The Necessity for Fair Profits.

There is only one way to know whether a business pays or not, and that is to keep a clear account, not only of sales, but also of expenses. An account of expenses is what will show where the small leaks are, if there are any. We must determine not only whether we are giving our customers good value for their money, but whether we are receiving a reasonable profit, to pay us for our own time and trouble.

While some may demand an excessive profit, there are those who often err the other way. This is especially true in design work. A good way to find out what can be put into a piece in the line of flowers, is to allow a certain amount for the wirework and accessories, from 50 cents up, and then add flowers according to the price you are getting for them. Design work, on the whole, is what should pay you, if anything does. Do not be afraid to charge well for an idea when a piece looks "finished," without the full value in flowers and other material. We must lose on some things, so make it up where there is a fair and justifiable opportunity.

Attention to Collections.

The booking of sales and deliveries is not, perhaps, so much neglected as is the collection of unpaid accounts. Some of these are always lost, but the number need not be large. Remember that there is a class of people who will owe

Attention to Collections.

The booking of sales and deliveries is not, perhaps, so much neglected as is the collection of unpaid accounts. Some of these are always lost, but the number need not be large. Remember that there is a class of people who will owe you and never buy from you again, if you are not wise enough to go and ask for what is your own, doing it cheerfully but firmly, and making the call soon after—sometimes very soon after—the "next pay day."

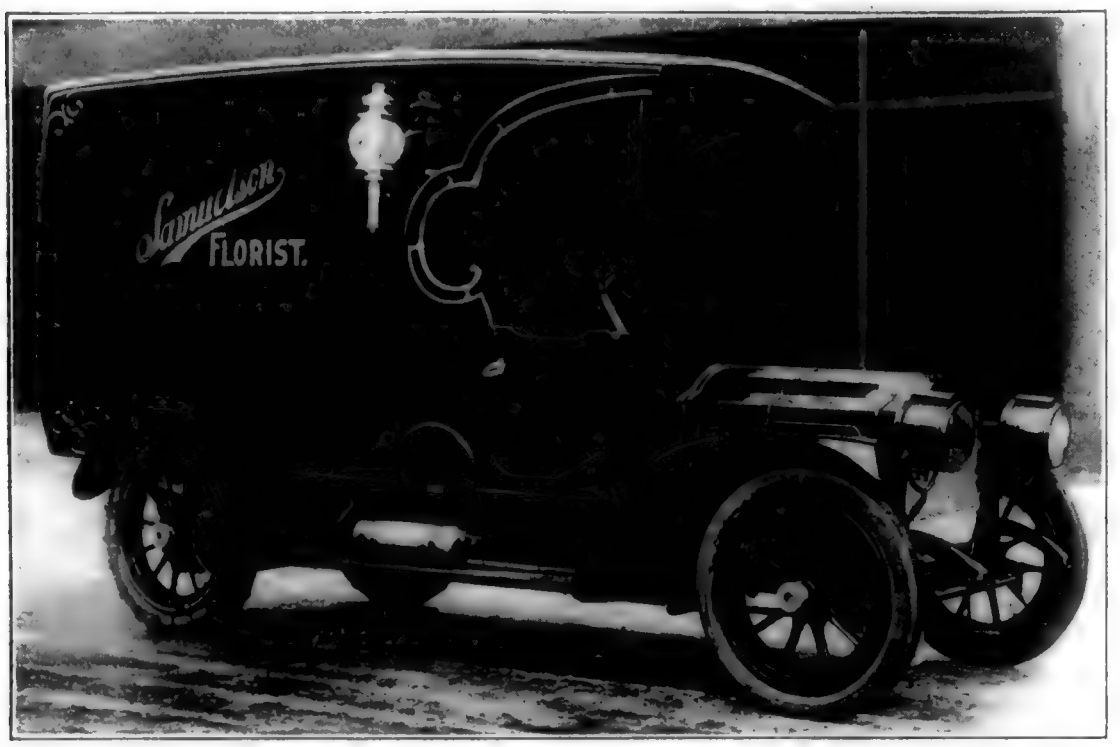
Good help is certainly a blessing, but inefficient help is a loss in more ways than one. If you have not good help, the best way is to go after it until you get it, and often that means that they must be personally trained. The best help is developed from boys and girls—or grown-ups, for that matter—who have a real fondness for flowers and plants. This kind of help pays, and is worth all the trouble it takes to get it. All delivery boys should be clean and quick, as well as obliging. Just talk to them and show them the necessity of being so, or offer, if it seems advisable, to add an extra quarter to their wages, or whatever you think the improved service is worth.

It Pays to Advertise.

Advertising pays. Give it all due attention. It is as interesting, too, as any card game, when once you get into it. Its cost must be, like other things, in proportion to the size of your trade. The advertisements should change from time to time, even if they consist of only the merest heading and a short sentence over a price list, but if you wish to work up a trade in a dull town, talk interestingly about flowers or ferns—just what you wish to push—and give people the prices of a few things.

Keep on hand a supply of boxes, paper, ribbons, wirework, etc. A little study over sales will show what proves most salable, and there is no good reason, therefore, for letting necessities get out of stock. Add something entirely new and distinctive to your stock once in a while, especially in the line of ribbons, letting their cost be in keeping with the kind of work in which they are used. It is little things that most frequently need watching, so that they shall not be wasted or cost out of proportion to their use. V. S. O.



Derby, Conn.—The Ansonia Floral Co. had charge of the decorations at the midwinter reception and dance given in St. Mary's hall by Prof. M. E. Carey.

RETAILERS' DELIVERY CARS.

The leading retail florists in Chicago are rapidly changing their delivery equipment from horse-drawn vehicles to motor wagons. The automobile has two advantages for the retailer. In the first place, a car will do the work of two or three teams, but it also has the advantage of being a first-class advertisement. A handsome car looks like prosperity—like business.

In order to make the automobile delivery economical it is necessary to keep the machine quite constantly employed; an automobile standing in the garage will eat its head off just as quickly as a horse in the stable. But it is characteristic of the leading retailers in Chicago that their business extends more or less all over the city. It is at least necessary to make frequent trips from the store to the wholesale section, and the downtown retailers have deliveries to make in all sections of the city. This is where the automobile is economical. A trip can be made to the far south side in a fraction of the time that would be required with a horse.

One of the accompanying illustrations shows the new car put on the street just before Christmas by C. A. Samuelson. It is a Packard chassis, with a body specially built for the florist, high and wide, with space for the carrying of bulky plants. With its plain, high finish, its brass trimmings and its fore-doors, the machine attracts attention wherever it goes. Mr. Samuelson was delayed in getting the car into service by the trouble the body-maker had in putting a perfect finish on the large panels of the sides. These were in the first place made of wood and refinished time after time, only to show checks just as it was thought the job was going to turn out perfectly. In the end the side panels were made of pressed paper, the same material that is used for car wheels by the railroads.

Muir, at 3530 Michigan avenue, did business forty-five years with horse-drawn delivery vehicles; after forty-five days' experience with an auto, it is stated that: "We would find it a hard matter to get along with horses now." THE COST OF RIBBONS.

Florists have not failed to appreciate that in the recent past they have been getting exceptionally good ribbons at lower cost than ever before. The explanation in part is found in the following from a textile journal's review of the year:

"Fashion, which decreed that flowers, feathers and a dozen or so other decorations were to be used for millinery purposes, wrought havoc with the ribbon business throughout the year. While the greatly restricted consumption would have been a serious matter in itself, there were other factors that made for a reduction of mill profits and oftentimes mill losses. The chief of these was the extraordinary competition for the comparatively small business that was procurable. Prices were reduced to such low levels in order to obtain orders for occupation that profits were a secondary consideration. Based on the cost of raw material and the cost of production, it is doubtful whether ribbon values were ever as low as during the year 1910. Narrow ribbons, and particularly baby ribbons, sold freely throughout the year. These are used for so many purposes that they have become almost indispensable in more than a score of ways; but although the yardage is immense, the value of the output is not of great proportions. Moreover, the production is in the hands of a few manufacturers who dominate the trade, so that while the demand may have been good when the call for other ribbons was weak the trade in general was not helped thereby. Among staple ribbons the place held by the taffetas remained undisputed. This weave was always in better demand than satin faced fabrics; but during the closing months of the year satin taffetas were well regarded in widths ranging from five to twenty-two lignes. The revival of the wire edge ribbon caused something of a stir when it was placed on the market by the first manufacturers to recognize that its novel construction would cause buyers, who are ever on the alert for novelties, to take hold firmly. Some good sized contracts were procured, but the vogue of the wire edge ribbon was short-lived.''

THE SUCCESS OF TWO SISTERS.

On the first day of February, 1890, a small, home-made sign was tacked up rather far back under the sheltering piazza roof, as though half fearing to announce the new business venture of the two sisters, the Misses M. and S. L. Dysinger, of Albion, Mich.

The sign read, ''Cut Flowers For Sale Here,'' and behind the residence was the greenhouse, 12x24 feet, filled with a various assortment of blooming plants awaiting the first purchaser, which chanced to be the wife of a local college professor. However, it was an exceedingly small amount that went into the cash-drawer the first or second month; indeed, for two years many sacrifices were made, and both sewing and painting instruction resorted to in order to keep up with expenses. The second summer one of the sisters busied herself with starting of primroses for wholesaling. In a few years they removed to a more advantageous location. Larger greenhouses were erected, which have been added to from time to time until now the Dysinger sisters do their growing under 7,000 feet of glass, besides an adjacent acre for the summer stock. Several assistants now are constantly employed, as there is plenty of work the year around, growing and filling home and out-of-town orders.

Two years ago a store was rented in the business portion of this thriving mid-western city, where, adjacent to the flowers, are tables where ice cream is served in summer and hot coffee, chocolate or bouillon and sandwiches in winter, and whether one wishes food or flowers, every person is treated with courtesy by the agreeable sisters, who, despite scant encouragement in the beginning, have, by determination, perseverance and hard work, established a prosperous business.

OUTSIDE AIR FOR REFRIGERATOR.

We have a refrigerator, 4x9 feet and eight feet high, with the ice chamber in the upper center, installed in the potting shed. We find it quite inconvenient to procure ice during the winter. Would it be practical to connect the ice chamber with the cold air outside and regulate the temperature of the refrigerator thereby? Would cut flowers keep as well under these conditions? If practical, please advise how best to arrange the matter, and how large would the cold air flue have to be? The temperature of the potting shed averages about 65 degrees.

E. K.

In the great majority of cases this can be done, but it must be worked out upon a scientific basis, and we have to know the exact inside dimensions of the storage cooler to be cooled, including the location of the ice chamber in such coolers; also the outside surrounding conditions where the intake of cold air is to be located; also the distance from the refrigerator or storage cooler to this place of intake.

The cold air can be brought through from windows, which have to be arranged for the purpose; it also can be brought through from roofs on greenhouses and stores and can be brought through solid brick or wood partition walls. The size of pipe and construction of same must be guided by these various conditions.

If E. K. will give us a rough plan and description covering these details, we will be pleased to take the matter up with him and give him an estimate on furnishing this conduit air system, or we will advise him that it cannot be done to afford him any better conditions; this often occurs by the location, which makes the system almost useless.

As to the inquiry regarding advantages to florists' work, would state that it is of great advantage where it can be installed. It will save almost the entire expense of ice refrigeration, except, of course, where ice is required for shipping purposes, during the steady cold weather prevailing in the fall and winter months. Another great advantage, especially in carnation stock, is that it provides the fresh atmosphere which this class of stock seems to require. To a less extent this change of air is beneficial to all classes of cut stock.

CLIMBER TO COVER FENCE.

I have a prospective sale for 500 vines for a suburban home. They wish to place vines along an iron fence, on which they are to run. The vines must be perfectly hardy, so they will not have to be replaced every year. What kind of vine will be best for this purpose and where can I get them? The locality is southern Iowa.

you and never buy from you again, if you are not wise enough to go and ask for what is your own, doing it cheerfully but firmly, and making the call soon after—sometimes very soon after—the "next pay day."

Good help is certainly a blessing, but inefficient help is a loss in more ways than one. If you have not good help, the best way is to go after it until you get it, and often that means that they must be personally trained. The best help is developed from boys and girls—or grown-ups, for that matter—who have a real fondness for flowers and plants. This kind of help pays, and is worth all the trouble it takes to get it. All delivery boys should be clean and quick, as well as obliging. Just talk to them and show them the necessity of being so, or offer, if it seems advisable, to add an extra quarter to their wages, or whatever you think the improved service is worth.

It Pays to Advertise.

Advertising pays. Give it all due attention. It is as interesting, too, as any card game, when once you get into it. Its cost must be, like other things, in proportion to the size of your trade. The advertisements should change from time to time, even if they consist of only the merest heading and a short sentence over a price list, but if you wish to work up a trade in a dull town, talk interestingly about flowers or ferns—just what you wish to push—and give people the prices of a few things.

Keep on hand a supply of boxes, paper, ribbons, wirework, etc. A little study over sales will show what proves most salable, and there is no good reason, therefore, for letting necessities get out of stock. Add something entirely new and distinctive to your stock once in a while, especially in the line of ribbons, letting their cost be in keeping with the kind of work in which they are used. It is little things that most frequently need watching, so that they shall not be wasted or cost out of proportion to their use. V. S. O.

RETAILERS' DELIVERY CARS.

The leading retail florists in Chicago are rapidly changing their delivery equipment from horse-drawn vehicles to motor wagons. The automobile has two advantages for the retailer. In the first place, a car will do the work of two or three teams, but it also has the advantage of being a first-class advertisement. A handsome car looks like prosperity—like business.

In order to make the automobile delivery economical it is necessary to keep the machine quite constantly employed; an automobile standing in the garage will eat its head off just as quickly as a horse in the stable. But it is characteristic of the leading retailers in Chicago that their business extends more or less all over the city. It is at least necessary to make frequent trips from the store to the wholesale section, and the downtown retailers have deliveries to make in all sections of the city. This is where the automobile is economical. A trip can be made to the far south side in a fraction of the time that would be required with a horse.

One of the accompanying illustrations shows the new car put on the street just before Christmas by C. A. Samuelson. It is a Packard chassis, with a body specially built for the florist, high and wide, with space for the carrying of bulky plants. With its plain, high finish, its brass trimmings and its fore-doors, the machine attracts attention wherever it goes. Mr. Samuelson was delayed in getting the car into service by the trouble the body-maker had in putting a perfect finish on the large panels of the sides. These were in the first place made of wood and refinished time after time, only to show checks just as it was thought the job was going to turn out perfectly. pipe, and Celastrus scandens. If using one variety only, let it be Clematis paniculata. Some of the hardiest of the rambler roses are also suitable for covering such. By alternating with the clematis the latter succeeds the former in coming into bloom. Crimson Rambler or Dorothy Perkins are hardy, floriferous ramblers and will stand a minimum of 10 to 15 degrees below zero without injury. You can secure plants of any of these climbers from one of the many nurserymen advertising in The Review.

CHLORIDE OF LIME IN WATER.

Several correspondents have taken alarm lest the reply "Chloride of Lime in Water," published under this heading, page 12 of The Review for January 5, should have understated the danger of using water containing even a little of this corrosive. The correspondent said he was "compelled to use all the time water containing chloride of lime put in to kill germs of typhoid fever. He wanted to know what the ultimate effect would be—apparently there had been no effect at all up to the date of writing. A. F. J. B. said: "If the chloride of lime is put into the water to make it potable, or, in other words, fit for drinking and domestic use, it will not injure your carnations." One correspondent writes: "I don't want to criticise something that may be right, but I would be much alarmed to have chloride of lime put in water to be used on my carnations or any other plant." Another says: "The correspondent evidently does not understand the difference between ordinary lime and this strongly corrosive substance, chloride of lime, used for disinfecting and bleaching. I feel sure that his statements are wrong, and that if acted upon by a florist might cause a great amount of damage. I am certain that this substance is soluble enough so that if added to water in sufficient quantity it would destroy every plant with whose roots it came in contact. There may be accuracy in the conclusion that any amount added to the water which did not interfere with its value for drinking purposes would not seriously damage the plants, although I am not sure about this either, as chlorine in small quantities has very deleterious effects on small plants."

Referring these letters back to A. F. J. B., he says: "Further inquiry into the matter of chloride of lime has revealed nothing of which I was not aware when I wrote the answer to the inquiry in question. Chloride of lime is more soluble than ordinary quicklime, and it does possess a corrosive power not possessed by the other article, and no doubt it would do greater damage if used in excessive quantity. It seems to me, however, that the above does not enter into the question at hand at all. The question was, would the quantity of the chloride added to the water for destroying the typhoid germs be enough to make it injurious to plant life? My informant advised me that the quantity added to the water would have to be very small, in order not to destroy its potability; that if enough were added to seriously affect plant life, it certainly would render it unfit for drinking purposes. My further remarks about the solubility of chloride and common lime should not be understood as meaning that no overdose could be given unless the contents were stirred up, nor that the chloride could be substituted for the ordinary lime. I merely wished to state that when stirred up the water would hold in suspension a much greater quantity of the lime than it could hold in solution. I also wished to show that the chloride is not added to the water with an idea of consuming the typhoid germs. Its action is to precipitate the matter upon which the germs feed, to the bottom of the container, carrying the germs along with it and leaving the main body of the water clear. Perhaps I should have gone into the subject more fully and pointed out the dangers in using chloride of lime, but I considered the question as stated above as constituting the point at issue.

"Undoubtedly the best and safest plan for the correspondent to adopt, would be to submit a sample of the water to his state experiment station, or to the government's department of agriculture, where it could be definitely determined just how much chlorine the water contained and what its effect would be. In the meantime I should like to hear from E. M., who asked the original query, if he has been able to see any injurious effect from the water, which he apparently now has been using for some time."

A further contribution to the discussion comes from Edmund T. Cable, Reading, Pa., as follows: "There is a vast difference between lime and chloride of lime. Oxide of lime, or lime, as it is usually called, is only slightly soluble; chloride of lime, or, properly, chlorinated lime, readily yields its chlorine to water. Two ounces of chlorinated lime to every sixty gallons of water is the proportion used to kill typhoid germs in drinking water. Chlorine water will inhibit the growth of all micro organisms and undoubtedly will retard the growth of any plant. There is no comparison between what is fit for human consumption and what is fit for plants. We had an epidemic of typhoid in our town. The authorities put copper sulphate in the proportion of one pound to every million pounds of water in the creek supplying our reservoirs. The water did not injure the people, but the fish died by the thousands. I am not a grower, only a beginner in the retail business, but as a chemist and druggist, I would dislike to feed a steady diet of chlorine water to my plants. If E. M. continues the use of the water, I would be pleased, at some future time, to see in The Review the results of the chlorine."

THE NAMING OF A ROSE.

In The Review of December 8, page 19, there appeared an article by W. R. Pierson, of A. N. Pierson, Inc., concerning the name of their rose, Prince de Bulgarie. Now, is this correct? Looking up the catalogue of a well known California grower, I notice that Prince of Bulgarie is there listed as yellow, while Antoine Rivoire is described as flesh colored. Which one is right?

L. G. G.

The foregoing letter, from a California correspondent, has been referred to me for an answer. While I do not wish to cast discredit upon the firm from whose catalogue the correspondent quotes, I should like to call attention to a few facts regarding the naming of the rose we are sending out as Prince de Bulgarie.

Among the authorities for nomenclature of roses I know of none better than the catalogue of Alex. Dickson & Sons, Newtownards, Ireland. They are among the largest growers of roses in the world, and their catalogue contains many descriptions—more, in fact, than are contained in any other catalogue which we receive. I regret that I have not a copy of the Pernet-Ducher catalogue from which I could quote.

We showed the rose in question as Antoine Rivoire in Chicago, having taken the name from the similarity between the plants we had and a newly imported lot of Antoine Rivoire grown in a garden. The California correspondent states that Prince de Bulgarie in the list referred to is described as yellow, and Antoine Rivoire as flesh colored. To quote from Dickson's 1910 catalogue:

Antoine Rivoire (Pernet-Ducher, 1896), rosy flesh on yellow ground, shaded with a border of carmine; large, full, splendid.

Prince de Bulgarie (Pernet-Ducher, 1902), deep rosy flesh, shaded with salmon; large, full, good.

In a former article I referred to our having fifty plants grown for identification in France, and the report that the rose was Prince de Bulgarie was a surprise to us. I may add that a certain grower, who is himself an authority on roses of this type, has seen the rose growing, and, knowing the variety Antoine Rivoire well, he does not hesitate to state that this rose is not Antoine Rivoire.

It might be interesting to many to know that this rose, called Mrs. Taft by the store buyers in New York, has returned a price second only to special American Beauty in the New York market this fall, and it is at present bringing $4 per dozen at wholesale.

Wallace R. Pierson.

YORK AND LANCASTER.

There is just a bit of a story connected with the York and Lancaster rose that never fails to interest when a salesman tells it to a prospective planter. The variety is said to date back to the time of the War of the Roses, between the English royal houses of York and Lancaster. Said to have originated when these warring factions became united, its colors represent the white of the Yorkists and the red of the Lancastrians. But the War of the Roses ended August 22, 1485, you say. So it did! So it did!!

York and Lancaster is not only an excellent variety, but, in spite of its antiquity, it is one so rarely met with that it is forever new. The accompanying illustration was prepared from a photograph supplied by John Charlton & Sons, Rochester. J. M. Charlton has a blooming hedge of it which he says absolutely takes care of itself and is a source of great delight when in flower; he knows of no rose so well adapted for use as a permanent hedge. It is of the Damask class and is noted for its extreme hardiness, never killing back in the most severe weather and always giving a full crop of flowers each season. The bloom is white, splashed with pink. Hardly ever among the semi-double flowers are two found that are exactly alike. There is just one trouble with the variety; it is a shy rooter, so that it is difficult to work up stock.

The York and Lancaster Rose.

THE GLASS MARKET.

Those journals which deal with commercial affairs have lately had much to say of the unsettlement in the window glass industry and have reported that prices are so low that many factories are unable to operate. When asked with special regard to the situation in greenhouse glass, one of the largest handlers in the country made the following statement:

"Greenhouse glass at present is exceptionally low. The manufacturers today are producing a smaller percentage of 14-inch and 16-inch greenhouse glass than has been the case for some little time, realizing that if any money is to be made at all it will have to come from the larger sizes commonly used for general building purposes. When greenhouse glass can be bought at from 4¼ cents to 4½ cents per square foot f. o. b. Chicago in carload lots the florists need have no worry about buying all their bank accounts will allow. It is absolutely impossible to manufacture double thick glass at the prices under the present wage scale on which the manufacturers are working, without showing an actual loss. Within the last week fully ten of the better hand-blown factories have closed down on account of the unsettled condition of the market, and with any kind of a demand, which is usually heavy at this time of the year, there is no reason to look for lower prices."

The same authority says that it is estimated in the window glass trade that at least 100 cars of the greenhouse sizes have been placed with florists within the last thirty days and that the buying since the break in prices this autumn has attained a volume never before known in the glass business. It was reported in The Review in November that within a week over thirty cars were placed with little more than a half-dozen Chicago growers. The inference therefore seems justified, that the market is comparatively bare of greenhouse sizes and that an advance in price may more reasonably be expected than any further decline.

VERBENAS AND PETUNIAS.

When should verbenas and petunias be sown for good plants in spring?

J. W. S.

Verbenas can be sown any time from the end of January until the end of March. Petunias are better if not sown before March. They make rapid growth and are liable to become somewhat unwieldy if sown too early. From early February sowings you can get strong 4-inch pot stock by the middle of May. The later sowings will give nice plants in 3-inch pots.

C. W.

THE SCENTED-LEAVED PLANTS.

We note in The Review for December 29, page 14, a reference to a scented-leaved plant. This is most probably the cardamon plant, Amomum Cardamomum, and not a hedychium as suggested. We do not know of any hedychiums with really scented leaves.

Oneco, Fla. Reasoner Bros.

Bailey, in his cyclopedia, calls it Amomum Cardamon and refers to the "thick, spicy lanceolate leaves." Of hedychiums he says "the large white flowers are sweet-scented," but makes no reference to odor in the foliage.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

Rambler Roses.

Easter comes April 16 and rambler roses wanted for that date should now be started. Bend the strong canes down to insure their breaking well. Cut away any weak, dead or dying wood. If the plants were pot grown through the summer, give them a liberal mulching. If potted or tubbed in the fall, the soil will need no attention. Do not give too much heat at first; 45 degrees is ample until they break; 10 degrees higher can then gradually be given, but 60 to 65 degrees is too high, and such heat should only be applied if the plants are likely to be late. A high temperature produces plants which will speedily go to pieces when placed in a cool store, and in addition the flowers are lacking in substance and bleach out badly. Allow the Pink Ramblers, such as Lady Gay and Dorothy Perkins, a week or ten days more time to develop them than the old Crimson Rambler. Spray the canes freely until they break and always avoid anything in the nature of cold drafts, which will produce mildew and ruin the appearance of the plants.

Marguerites.

There are not so many marguerites at Easter as would sell. There is no more beautiful pot plant than well-flowered marguerite. Do not allow any of the plants wanted in April to become pot-bound. Give them a shift before the roots become too matted together. Pinching should be discontinued after the middle of February, and in the case of Queen Alexandra may well be stopped at once, this being naturally a later bloomer. As these plants grow fast now, they will need spacing apart at least once a week and few plants want more copious supplies of water. Where wanted for cutting only and not to sell as plants, let the pots stand on a bench from which some crop has been cleaned and allow them to root through. With this additional root run, they will give much finer flowers. Pick off the leaves affected with the leaf miner, which this year is disfiguring these plants almost everywhere, and to keep it in check spray the plants with some nicotine extract.

Palms.

While the days are short is the time to overhaul and clean the palms. All will gather considerable dirt and their share of scale and other insects in a year, in spite of constant use of the hose. Sponge the leaves carefully with whatever is your favorite preparation. It will kill most of the scale and soften it so that a large proportion can be blown off with a spray nozzle attached to the hose. Endeavor to get all the plants cleaned during the present month. If put off it may never be done at all, as after February comes in other indoor work becomes more pressing, and if you have dirty palms it means they are unsalable, for who will purchase a plant covered with scale and with soot stains all over the leaves? Then again, if you have a decoration, it means that you must wash your plants before they can be used, which will tax both your time and patience. Midwinter is the time when all this cleansing can be most economically and easily done.

Linum Trigynum.

Botanically known as Reinwardtia trigyna, this useful winter flowering plant is still known as a linum. It is not seen as much as years ago, perhaps because its growth is somewhat slow and the individual flowers are not lasting. For Christmas a more charming flowering plant than this golden yellow linum can hardly be found. A neat bush in a 6-inch pot, thickly dotted with its allamanda-like flowers, should sell on sight and it is to be hoped that this old-time favorite will again be taken in hand.

It is less easy of propagation than some other winter flowering plants, but plants that have stopped blooming, if headed back and kept a little dry for a time, will send up a crop of bottom shoots, which are easily rooted and will make good plants. Top shoots will root, but seldom branch, and persist in flowering rather than growing. Old plants can be planted outdoors, where they will make a fine growth. They must be carefully lifted, as they do not move so easily as bouvardias, stevias and other winter flowering subjects. L. trigynum likes a cool, sunny house; 45 degrees at night is better than 10 degrees higher. Grown cool, the plant flowers longer and the blooms have more substance. This plant can easily be had in fine flower for Christmas, and few more charming subjects are seen when well bloomed.

Euphorbia Jacquiniæflora.

Euphorbia jacquiniæflora is not so much seen as its merits would seem to warrant. After the flowers are cut, keep the plants somewhat drier, but do not dry off as severely as you would poinsettias. Soft-wood cuttings rubbed off with a heel will root readily in May and June, treated similarly to poinsettias. Pot off singly when nicely rooted and, if salable plants are desired, put five to seven in a 6-inch pot or pan. They will need one or possibly two pinchings. If wanted for cutting, of course, no pinching is needed. To secure really fine sprays for cutting, plants set out in a box or bench, where they can be rested, are the best, or old plants after blooming can be packed close together in boxes, kept on the dry side until the end of April, then potted singly and later transferred to a shallow bench, where they can get a winter minimum of 60 degrees. Euphorbia fulgens is the botanical name of this useful winter blooming plant, but horticulturally it is better known as E. jacquiniæflora.

Ferns

ADIANTUMS.

Adiantums which need repotting should first be given a rest for a few weeks, not to the extent of keeping them dust-dry, but with a greatly reduced water supply. They appreciate this rest, as will be shown by the way they send up a fresh crop of fronds when started. Loosen up the ball with a sharp pointed stick. The plants will then strike out roots much more quickly. Drain the pots well. Cover the broken crocks with some moss and lay some of the coarser compost over this. A suitable compost for adiantums of the cuneatum type consists of two-thirds fibrous loam and one-third leaf-mold. To this may advantageously be added some screened and well decayed cow manure; this need not exceed one-tenth of the whole. A good dash of sharp sand should also be used. Large-sized clumps may be divided, using an instrument which will make a clean cut. As a general rule, we find that divided portions are much slower in developing into plants than smaller sizes potted on.

Snails are often a great menace where adiantums are grown on benches. Where pot plants are grown, when cleaning over the plants stand them on the paths and give the bench bottoms a soaking of boiling water, to which has been added some salt. Examine the pot bottoms and kill any found there. Among bench-grown plants, scooped portions of potatoes, lettuce leaves and similar bait will attract many. Where they are quite bad, dust a little air-slaked lime inside the clumps.

The present is a suitable time to sow spores, which are to be had from any well-matured fronds of such varieties as cuneatum, gracillimum, tenerum and Croweanum, in flats or pans containing a mixture of fine peat, leaf-mold and sand, which can be placed in a case in a house where a moist atmosphere and a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees are maintained. The big fern specialists offer these and other small ferns, however, at such cheap rates, that it hardly pays the small country grower to bother raising them.

GERANIUMS FOR MEMORIAL DAY.

Will you please tell me how to treat geraniums so as to have short, bushy stalks and large blooms for Memorial day? Also give names and descriptions of the best commercial sorts.

J. K.

As you probably wish to purchase young plants to grow along, the present is a suitable time to secure the necessary stock in 2-inch pots from some of the many specialists whose advertisements you will find in The Review. If unable to secure pot plants of any of the varieties, do the next best thing—get strong rooted cuttings and place them in 2-inch pots when received.

Give the geraniums a light, sunny bench. After potting they enjoy a little bottom heat; so, if you have any heating pipes under any of the benches, these would provide the necessary warmth. A temperature of 55 degrees in the day and 45 to 50 degrees at night is sufficient. A little more warmth is desirable for young stock, until it gets established. These plants, when well rooted in 2-inch pots, should be moved successively to 3-inch and 4-inch pots. It is better to give two shifts than one. For soil, two-thirds good pasture loam, one-third spent hotbed or mushroom manure, with some sand added, make an ideal mixture. Never use any fresh manure of any kind. For the second and third pottings add a 4-inch pot of fine bone to each bushel of soil. This tends to make the growths harder and more floriferous than would the use of animal manures. Never use any of the latter manures, unless old and thoroughly decayed—in a condition in which they will crumble through the hands.

The stronger plants will need one pinch. The growths can be left until of sufficient strength and inserted singly in 2-inch pots of sandy loam, as cuttings. Do not, however, do any pinching after March 1. Spread the plants out from time to time. Pull out any weeds; loosen the surface soil if baked or slimy; remove flower trusses until the middle or end of April, also all dead and decaying foliage. Always allow the plants to dry well between waterings. If kept constantly wet, they will make a soft, flabby growth. Plenty of fresh air should be given on every possible occasion. Never coddle the plants, and remember that they prefer a dry to a moist atmosphere.

The following are some of the best bedding varieties in both doubles and singles. The double varieties are most in use, but a bed of first-class singles is much more effective and as a rule they are more floriferous. Grow which you think your customers will prefer. Doubles—Beaute Poitevine, salmon pink; Jean Viaud, mauve rose, light throat, fine; General Grant, vermilion scarlet; E. H. Trego, dazzling, velvety scarlet; Comtesse de Harcourt, white; Alphonse Ricard, vermilion scarlet; La Favorite, pure white; S. A. Nutt, deep scarlet, the finest of all double red bedders; Mme. Landry, salmon pink; Marquise de Castellane, soft crimson. Singles—Jacquerie, rich crimson scarlet, immense trusses, superb bedder; Paul Crampel, dazzling scarlet, the most brilliant and free flowering of all scarlet geraniums, the most popular bedder in Great Britain and will become popular here; L'Aube, pure white; Richmond Beauty, scarlet, white center; Telegraph, Lincoln red, hardy and robust; Snowdrop, pure white; Granville, rose pink; Mrs. Brown Potter, rose pink.

FOLIAGE BURNED.

I am sending several geranium leaves. Can you tell me what the trouble is? Some time ago I borrowed a sprayer and sprayed them. I have learned since that there was Paris green in it. Would that cause the trouble? E. S.

The foliage forwarded had every appearance of having been scorched in some way and Paris green is the undoubted cause of the trouble. This poison should never be used except on perfectly smooth foliage and even then the doses must be quite light to prevent burning. The best thing—in fact, the only thing—you can do, is to pick off these burned leaves. This will, of course, considerably cripple the plants, but they will gradually grow out of it. You do not say what you were spraying the plants for. If for any fungoid affection on the foliage, while you can use Bordeaux mixture for it, you can achieve equally good results by picking off affected leaves, keeping the plants drier both at the roots and in the atmosphere, giving them all possible sun and air on every favorable occasion.

YOUNG STOCK.

I have a few geraniums which I have put in 2¼-inch pots. Can I carry these plants in this size of pot until the first part of April and then shift to a 4-inch pot and place in a hotbed and get them in bloom by the middle of May? They are in a carnation house now, on shelves. I will not have room for them when they are shifted to 4-inch pots. When should I stop pinching the flower stems off to have them in bloom by Memorial day? G. S.

If you keep the 2¼-inch geraniums until April 1 without a shift, they will become hard and potbound and will not grow satisfactorily after repotting. A far better plan will be to shift them into 3-inch pots as soon as the smaller ones are well filled with roots, later placing them in 4-inch. While they might succeed in a gentle hotbed as early as April 1, you should, if space will allow, keep them where they can get some fire heat three weeks later, after which they will do well in the frames. Discontinue picking the flower trusses off about April 20. They will then flower well for Memorial day.

OUTDOOR SWEET PEAS.

When is the best time to plant sweet peas for outdoor flowering early in the spring? What is the best way to plant them? What named varieties in white, pink and lavender would you recommend? T. F. C.

Ground should have been prepared for your sweet peas in the fall by liberally manuring and deeply plowing it. In the spring, as soon as the frost has left the ground and it is in a sufficiently dry condition to work, the seed can be sown. Cover the seed about two and one-half inches and firm well after sowing, especially when the ground is dry. Sow rather thinly, or thin severely if they come up too thickly; four to five inches between the plants is quite thick enough and you get far stronger haulm and better flower stalks when they are not too thick. The rows should be five to six feet apart.

The following varieties are excellent: White, Dorothy Eckford; blush pink, Mrs. Routzahn Spencer; orange pink, Helen Lewis; clear, deep pink, Gladys Unwin or Countess of Spencer; lavender, Frank Dolby or Lady Grisel Hamilton; scarlet, King Edward VII. Helen Pierce, white veined and marbled bright blue, is a fine variety and is selling well in the markets.

NATIONAL SWEET PEA SOCIETY.

A meeting of the executive board of the National Sweet Pea Society of America was held at the Astor House, New York city, January 6, President W. Atlee Burpee presiding. Secretary H. A. Bunyard announced that the National Flower Show committee had offered the society $150 with which to arrange premiums for a sweet pea section at the Boston show in March, provided the society would duplicate the amount for the same purpose, making $300 in all. The offer meeting the approval of the board, the required $150 was made up then and there. Wm. Sim, of Cliftondale, Mass., offered a proposed schedule of premiums, which was adopted. The date for the sweet pea day at the show was left to Secretary Bunyard and Mr. Sim to arrange. It will probably be March 29, and the society will meet in the evening. It was arranged that Prof. A. C. Beal be invited to present a paper at the meeting on "Trials of Sweet Peas Under Glass." G. W. Kerr, of Fordhook, Doylestown, Pa.; Wm. Duckham, of Madison, N. J., and James Wheeler, of Natick, Mass., were selected as judges, and Wm. Sim was elected to act as manager of the sweet pea exhibition. It was decided that the scale of points for judging be as follows:

Stem	25
Color	20
Size	25
Number of flowers on stem	15
Substance	15
Total	100

In regard to seed trials at Cornell during the coming season, the secretary was instructed to write seedsmen to furnish such seed of novelties and varieties for trial as it might be desired to try, and that the executive board suggested that the trial ground should contain not more than 100 of the latest varieties and not more than twenty-five seeds of any one variety. A letter from Prof. John Craig was read, in which that gentleman regretted his inability to attend the board meeting, and asked for instructions in different matters relating to trials during the coming season. It was decided to hold a summer show this year, and that invitations be solicited from cities wishing to have the exhibition.

PITTSBURG, PA.

The Market.

The first week of the new year was about all one could expect it to be. About as much business as stock. Some few things, such as Paper White narcissi and violets, were largely in excess of demands, but from the wholesaler's standpoint things were easy.

Among the retail shops there is no great rush, but all are doing a nice regular trade.

Various Notes.

Karl Klinke, former secretary of the McCallum Co., has severed his connection with that firm and, together with Geo. A. Wehrheim, will start a retail shop in the Jenkins Arcade as soon as that building is completed, which will be about February 1.

The Pittsburg Florists' Club met Tuesday evening, January 3, with a small but enthusiastic crowd present. It was nomination night. John Jones, of Schenley park, and Allen Swift, of Homewood cemetery, are candidates for president. The rest of the officers were renominated. There were several plant exhibits and a paper was read by Neal McCallum on the "Sage of the Club," which was interesting. Coming so soon after the holidays, the boys did not all get out, but it is likely there will be a good crowd next month for the election.

Miss A. L. Wells, of Steubenville, O., left last week to spend the balance of the winter in California.

The McRae-Jenkinson Co. closed its Penn avenue store January 10, having disposed of the lease.

An exceedingly severe storm, which recently struck this section, with wind, hail, rain and thunder, did some slight damage to the various greenhouses in the way of blowing out all loose glass.

TORONTO.

The Market.

The reaction has set in and things are a little quiet after the enormous holiday rush, although business is still pretty good. Funeral work has been plentiful. Orders for decorations, for receptions and other social functions are quite plentiful. Roses, carnations and violets are coming in quite freely and in good condition. One of the trade expressed the opinion that carnations are better this year than they have been for some time. Bulbous stock, however, is poor in quality. The stems are short and the keeping quality poor. This can be accounted for by the lack of good growing weather. However, they sell readily, having only been on the market a short time so far. Sweet peas and azaleas are in fair demand.

Various Notes.

Miller Bros., of Bracondale, are building three new houses. These are of King construction, 29x300 feet each. They will be used for carnations and roses. This is an evidence of the prosperity of this firm's business. They now have one of the largest establishments around Toronto.

The Dale Estate is adding three new houses to its already enormous plant. These are of King construction and are each 22x650.

Mr. Berlinger, of Stouffville, Ont., near Toronto, is contemplating three new houses, and his son expects to erect two or three in New Liskeard, Ont. These latter will be the first in that part of the country.

Trade at St. Lawrence market continues good, and every Saturday and Wednesday a big business is done.

A new flower store has been opened on College street, near Grace.

PROVIDENCE.

The Market.

Business last week was unusually good, two or three large funerals, several social functions, and the municipal and state inaugurations combining to give the florists a keen hustle in the making and delivering of designs and cut flowers.

On Saturday, January 7, one of the large drug stores of this city began its annual cut-price Saturday afternoon sales on violets, selling bunches of twenty-five for 19 cents. They are furnished by Boston parties. Regularly violets are 50 cents to $1 per hundred at wholesale in this market. Roses are bringing $3 to $10 per hundred, according to grade and variety; carnations from $1.50 to $3. Daffodils are now coming in excellent quality and quantity at $3 per hundred; freesia $2, and mignonette at $1.50 to $2 per hundred.

Various Notes.

There were upwards of 200 large bouquets, baskets, mounds and similar pieces at the municipal inauguration, the aggregate value being estimated at $1,200 to $1,500. Two striking pieces were a horseshoe of mixed flowers by William E. Chappell and a miniature bowling alley by Charles Hunt. The latter was about three feet in length and two in width, the base being of boxwood with white carnation stripes. A single pin eighteen inches tall, of white carnations, stood at one end and a red ball of carnations at the opposite end.

While the floral tributes to the members of the General Assembly were well distributed, the decorations of the capitol, as well as the state and governor's pieces, were furnished by Thomas Curley, of this city.

Eugene Appleton, for the William Appleton estate, had the decorations for the recent municipal banquet at Narragansett hotel.

F. Williams, son of O. H. Williams, is nursing a badly injured left hand. While sawing up some wood with a circular saw recently, the log he was handling slipped and his hand was cut nearly in twain. Prompt attention will probably save the hand.

William Hay reports a big cut of roses from his new houses at Oaklawn and large sales at his downtown retail store.

T. J. Johnston & Co., E. D. Brooks, manager, have had several large decorations at the Crown and Narragansett hotels during the last fortnight.

William E. Chappell had seven large funeral pieces January 2.

The next meeting of the Florists' and Gardeners' Club of Rhode Island will be held January 16 and will be made the occasion of the annual banquet. Dinner will be served at 7:30 o'clock, and it is expected that there will be a large party present. The committee having the affair in charge consists of President Robert Johnston, James Dillon, Alex Macrae and H. C. Neubrand, and an excellent program is promised.

Arthur Zirkman was in the city a few days ago in the interests of M. Rice & Co., of Philadelphia.

William Crompton, of Crompton, had a large funeral order January 5 that called for several fine pieces.

C. W. Morey, proprietor of the Woonsocket Hill Nurseries, at Woonsocket, has returned from an extended trip to Canada, with stories of snow three to five feet deep on the level and thermometers hugging 35 degrees below the zero mark.

Charles Johnston has been confined to the house for several days recently because of injuries to his foot.

George A. Johnston is confined to his home at Pawtucket by a severe attack of rheumatism.

The case of Willis S. Pino against Harry C. Metzler resulted in a judgment rendered for the plaintiff for $230.12 and costs.

Edward Brown Williams, a gardener, of 290 President avenue, and wife are receiving congratulations on the birth of twin sons, Thursday, January 5.

ROCHESTER.

Club Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association was held Monday evening, January 9. Nearly every member was present and all were anxious to hear the reports of the officers concerning the year's work. W. L. Keller, treasurer, presented a most complete statement, covering every detail of the expenses connected with the convention of last summer and the recent flower show. This report showed a balance in the treasury.

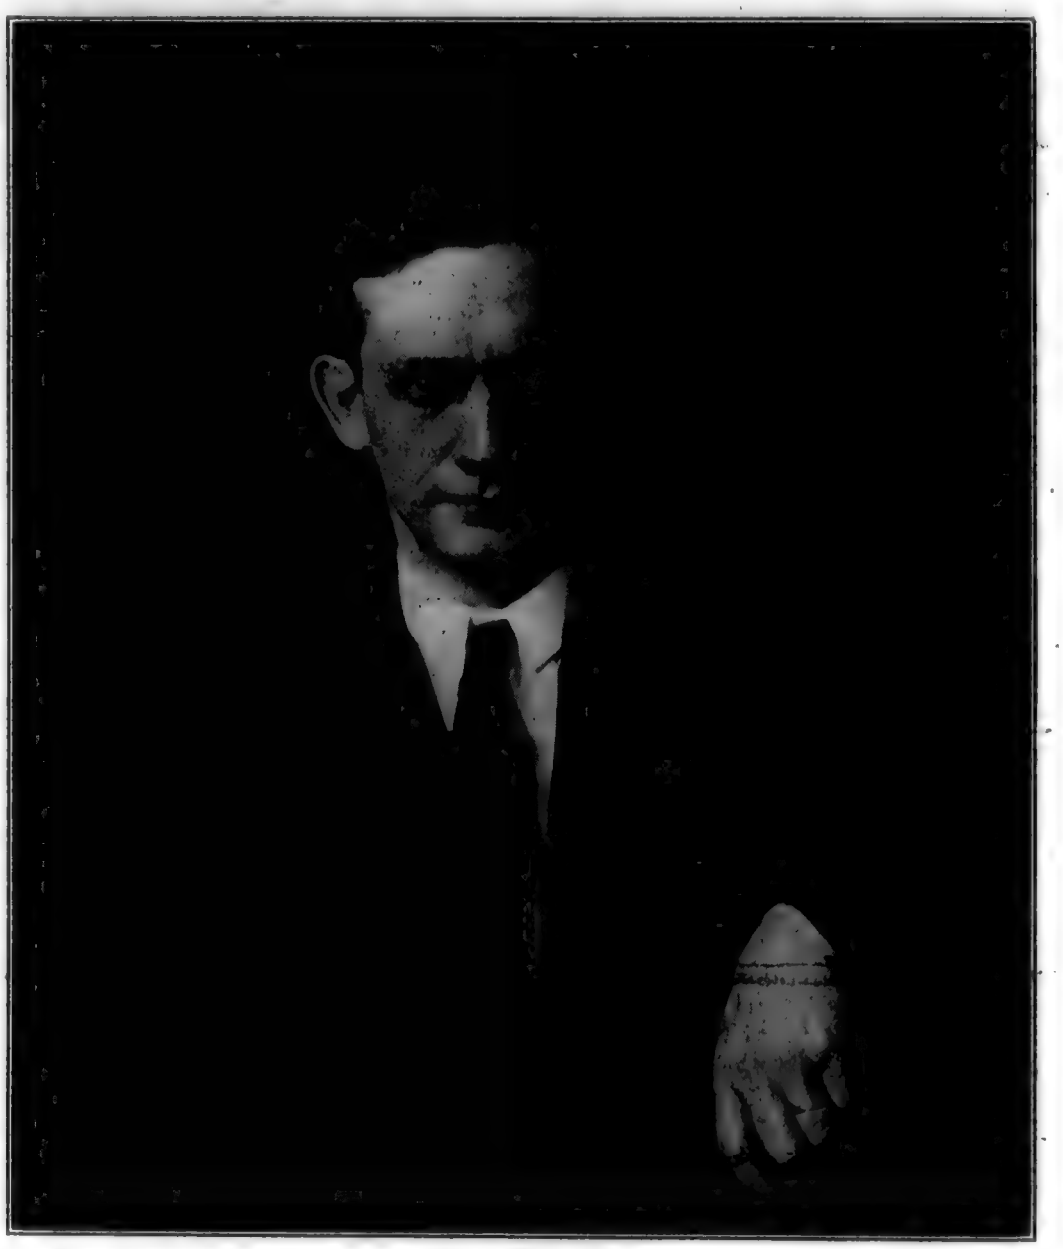
President Fred W. Vick gave a resume of the year's work. No man has done more to advance the interests of the society or labored more faithfully to make every undertaking of the organization a success than has Mr. Vick, and only his positive refusal to become a candidate prevented his reëlection for another year.

The principal event of the meeting was the annual election of officers. At the last meeting the nominating committee presented the following tickets:

For president, E. P. Wilson; vice-president, E. R. Fry; secretary, H. B. Stringer; treasurer, W. L. Keller; trustees, F. Schlegel, Charles Suhr, J. O. Pridmore.

For president, George B. Hart; vice-president, George Keller; secretary, H. B. Stringer; treasurer, R. G. Salter; trustees, John Perie, G. T. Boucher, Etienne Berry.

A. H. Secker, G. J. Keller and John House were appointed tellers, and the election resulted as follows: President, George B. Hart; vice-president, George J. Keller; secretary, H. B. Stringer; treasurer, W. L. Keller; trustees, F. R. Schlegel, Charles Suhr, J. O. Pridmore.



At the close of the business session a luncheon was served, and a splendid musical program was rendered by the Fifty-fourth Regiment Band Orchestra.
